Receiver Appointed.

The quarries of the Quincy Granite Quarries Company have been shut down and the company is insolvent.

Upon the petition of the National Granite Bank and other creditors, a receiver has been appointed for the company, which was filed in the bankruptcy court at Boston, and the receiver is now in possession of the quarries.

The liabilities are placed at $22,500 and include $50,000 floating indebtedness, $25,000 due upon sinking fund, and $12,500 due on account of interest.

The receiver will endeavor to determine the priority and equities of the bondholders.

The company is said to have lost large sums on recent contracts, and to have made large outlays at its plant on Quarry road at West Quincy.

Hearing for Lower Carfares.

A hearing was given by the Railroad Commissioners on Wednesday on the petition of Mayor Thompson for a reduction of fares on the Old Colony street railway. The city was represented by Mayor Thompson and City Solicitor Thomas.

They spoke at length upon the seeming injustice of the recent increase of fares between Quincy and Brockton and Quincy and Nantasket, claiming also that the service under the management of the present company is far better than under the original company.

They argued that the system of fares now in force was working an injury to the city, and was a hardship on local passengers. This was especially true since the new scheme of transfers was put in operation.

Under the present system, if a passenger boarded a car at Neponset and wanted to go to South or West Quincy he was obliged to pay two fares unless he waited at Neponset for a car that ran through to those points.

The city met the claim that the road was earning but 2 per cent. with the statement that the old company earned 6 per cent., and that its stock at consolidation sold for $150.

The railroad officials claimed that the present fare system was a benefit to through passengers, and that under it passengers could go six miles beyond the Brockton limit. The railroad also claimed that its earnings were but 2 per cent. On the matter of transfers, they claimed that the change was necessary for its own protection, as the system had been abused.

The Commissioners took the matter under advisement.

Cottage Avenue Widening.

Practically all of the land taken by the proposed widening of Cottage avenue is from the estate of Abner B. Packard on the northern side of the street. A strip about 10 feet wide is taken for the whole length of the street.

At the Hancock street approach to the street quite a corner is taken from the Packard estate so as to make a wide approach. Corners are also taken at the Chestnut street end from the Packard and Hall estates.

At the junction of Cottage street small pieces of land are taken from the Bent and Connelly estates, so as to do away with the present square corners and make them rounding.

It will be necessary to move the ink manufacturing building, the foundry building and the stable occupied by Frank C. Packard a distance of about six feet. The proposed width of the new street is 35 feet.

The Winthrop Case.

The head and limbs of the Winthrop case victim have not yet been found, but a clew was given out on Thursday afternoon that may lead to their discovery. A blood-stained bag was found on the Lynn marshes at a spot where a man was seen carrying a heavy dress suit case on the afternoon of Thursday, Sept. 23.

This is the most important clue that has fallen into the hands of the police since the torso was found, and a thorough search of the marshes is being made in the belief that somewhere in that vicinity can be found the missing head and limbs.

A motorman says that a man carrying a heavy dress suit case left one of the Boston and Lynn trolley cars at a deserted point skirting the marshes near the Saugus line, on the night before the dress suit case holding the torso of the victim of the now celebrated mystery was fished from the waters of Winthrop Cove.

"It was dark," says the motorman, "as we passed through Revere, and the lights were on in the car. I noticed that the man kept a sharp lookout on our location as we bowed along. He did not appear to be any too sure of his ground. Finally, when we reached a point near the Saugus line, he told me he wanted to get off, and I pulled up. That is the thing that makes me remember the whole affair. I thought it strange for a man with a suit case to get off at such a deserted spot. And the suit case was heavy, all right, for he pushed it over near the end, jumped off, and standing on the ground, lifted it from the platform with both hands.

"The place where he left the suit case is close to the water, but there isn't a house for a quarter of a mile. I never let a man with a suit case off there before. I wondered at the time why he got off there, where he was going, and how he would ever get along with that heavy grip."

It was a dread of publicity that caused the motorman to refrain so long from telling his story, and even now, his name is withheld at his urgent request until it is ascertained whether inquiry will reveal anything along this line.

Judge Bosworth of Springfield decided on Thursday that $15 was the price of a kiss when snatched unwillingly from the lips of a blushing maiden. The complainant was Miss Isabel M. King, a pretty 15-year-old girl, who testified that Davis came up behind her on the street three hours after dark and imprinted a fond kiss on her ruby lips.

"It is announced that Charles W. Bartlett of Boston, will be nominated today for Governor at the Democratic State convention to be held in Faneuil hall, and that he will accept.

Will Quincy ever have a through line of cars between City Square and Dudley street? If work changing the grade of Hancock street is not completed before more time the chances are that street car passengers will have to walk across the bridge all winter as they did a year ago.

Publication Committee.

Gentlemen—Nothing offers me greater pleasure than to praise the grand work of the Quincy Hospital.

While a patient at the institution a few months ago the attention, care and kindness I received was far more than I can express. Nothing is left undone by the attendants that in any way will add to the comfort of the sufferer.

Such an institution is a great necessity, and deserves the generous support of every resident of the city.

Hoping that this may be banner for the amount of subscriptions received, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

HARRY LARK.

The Rug Habit.
This world is full of fads and fancies, some good,
some bad, some indifferent.
Not long ago the using of Rugs for floor coverings was considered a fad. Today all this is changed for good sense and sound reason dictate that rugs are superior to carpetings.
THE RUG HABIT has come to stay, for it makes more attractive homes, lighter housekeeping,
and lessens the cost of living.
Your home can be made beautiful with rugs for floor coverings, you need only to look over our complete stock, learn our wonderfully low prices, and you'll wonder why you have waited so long.

Poetry.
Indian Summer.
CHARLES HANSON TOWNE.
When the old dream returns
To the unnumbered hills,
When summer's red fire burns
Above the misty hills,
O heart, how comes once more
An old dream to thy door!
When for a little space
The sad world wakes again,
And golden summer's face
Smiles through the mist and rain,
O heart, how soon a song
Comes back, forgotten long!
When shines, through autumn's dark,
The vanished June's young fire.
And lighted is the spark
Of lost youth and desire,
O heart, 'tis Love came back Across the year's far track!

Miscellany.
THE WIFE'S SECRET.
"How on earth could we love her?"
She had caused such bitter disappointment.
"And how could Gerald care for a pale, strange-looking little with her queer name after her French mother-er? For which, of course, she must be to have fascinated our fastidious brother to the extent of marrying her."
Gerald was our brother, twenty-six years of age, tall and handsome, and the idol of his sisters—two of us—one widowed, and the other, myself, an old maid.
Few sisters are perfectly satisfied, as a rule, when their brother has found some one dearer to him than those who have loved him and administered to his comfort all their lives. Yet I really think we should have been moderately content if his choice had been to our own taste.
Why it had not been so was just a mystery. Edith Falconer, whom we had met on our hearts on seeing her, Gerald Fane, was a daughter of the gods—tall and divinely fair, and it puzzled us who had her heart or his fancy could have travelled towards a daughter of a French Canadian, when our letters were constantly full of Edith's beauty and Edith's goodness, and when we had made a point of dilating her attractions from morning till eve whenever he was at home.
Edith was with us when the letter came bidding us welcome his wife, with her beautiful blue eyes.
Not that Edith was really in love with him, but she had always felt an enormous interest in the brother of her dearest friend—an interest which we had fully thought would ripen into love.
"I shall bring her to you, my little Stephanie. She would be quite alone in the wide world now if it was not for me! We were married beside the deathbed of her father, and she was scarcely a life before she was wholly an orphan, with never a relative on earth.
I have promised her so much love from you both that she will not, I know, feel the loss of mother and sister, who were drowned on their way out to America—while I shall fill the place of all others—
father, brother, husband."
—As we read this we felt convinced
how it was that Gerald had married her.
It was from sheer pity. We fully decided this point and it did not make us feel more pleasantly on the subject, for we were sure that poor Gerald had been victimized, etc.
We went about our preparations, however, for to receive, furnished the rooms newly and prettily and did our best to insure comfort to the bride, but it must be confessed our hearts were not in the work.
On the evening they were expected
we had no one at the house, thinking
Stephanie would prefer it so.
That is, we had only Edith Falconer;
but then she was just one of ourselves.
Gerald looked handsomer than ever as he sprang out of the carriage and with a radiant face kissed us both.
Then he ran down again and lifted out a tiny figure, which he bore in his arms as if it had been a child, and placing it before us, said:
"Here's my darling, the sweetest little darling that ever trod the earth."
He went then to attend to the baggage, and she made a sort of movement as if
to rush after him, but stopped abruptly.
Then with quivering lips she lifted her glance to us, with a helpless wistful look; but presently a softer light crept into her great dark, wild looking eyes, and she clasped our hands and bent and kissed them.
After this, we took her into the drawing-room, and introduced her to Edith,
and I saw her queer, dark little face brighten up strangely as Edith greeted her affectionately.
"Please call me Stie and not 'my dearest,' she whispered in a low, frightened voice; "my heart yearns to be called by that name. Papa loved it so!" and turning her face away she sobbed once or twice.
Gerald came in just then and shaking hands with Edith went over to his wife at once.
"Come, my bird. You had better
let my sisters show you to your room, so as you can trim your feathers a little," he said, lovingly stroking back
the soft fluffy hair gently from her brow.
My sister carried her off at once and,
of course, Gerald followed. He did not seem able to take his eyes off her for a moment.
I glanced at Edith admiringly, thinking what an angel of forgiveness she was, and then the bride came down again. I took a malicious pleasure in comparing her with Edith.
Edith so fair and so lovely, with hair like spun gold and a wild rose bloom on her cheeks, and a graceful willow figure. And Stie—to call her by the curious abbreviation she wished—so small and dusky, with a colorless skin, and nothing to recommend her, but two immense black eyes which certainly were as lustrous as twin stars and as soft as velvet.
Later in the evening, when dinner was over, and Edith had drawn her away to look at Gerald's drawings, he came up and sat down by me.
"Ellen, you must not form an opinion of Stie's attractions now," he whispered, earnestly; "she is not herself;
naturally she is bright and happy as a bird, and altogether charming. You must help to chase away her trouble and bring back her smiles. And then, you don't know how pretty my little one is when she smiles," he went on enthusiastically.
And wondering how she could ever be so pretty, I forgot to answer. So, after a momentary pause he said:
"Edith is more beautiful than ever,
I see."
"I thought," he could not help comparing these two—the girl he had needlessly thrown aside and the girl he had linked himself to for life."
It was not long before Stie was more like herself, as Gerald said. Her sorrow had been so mild and so passionate that naturally it soon wore itself out. The color soon came back to her cheeks, and I could often hear her cooing songs of love.
They were mostly French ones—some with a wonderful pathos ringing through them; and her pronunciation of her maternal tongue was the prettiest thing imaginable. Yes, she was growing merry enough.
Gerald's love was so perfect, and he filled the place of father, brother and husband so entirely, as he had said, that he left her nothing to wish for.
My sister was growing very fond of her and declared her to be remarkably pretty, but I could see no beauty in her; my devotion to Edith utterly precluded it.
Stie grew to be popular with Gerald's men friends, too. They thought her charming, and his especial friend, a young fellow who was a doctor, rapidly rising in his profession, and who had been an admirer of Edith's, came more frequently than the rest.
Before Gerald's marriage, Dr. Percival had made great progress in his wooing, but since his marriage he had been very inclined towards him.
He was passionately fond of singing and had a superb voice. Edith could not sing a note, but Stie's and Mark Percival's voices blended splendidly together. These hours were spent—every day, I think, that he could spare from his practice—in these duets.
And Gerald, who was also passionately
fond of music, never seemed to tire of listening to the two.
I was very wicked, I know. I really believed Stie to be artful and designing;
her clear, bright, blithe manner I fancied was assumed; I saw how happy she was in the hours spent in Mark Percival's society, and it made me dislike her ten times more for finding pleasure anywhere, but with her husband.
I consoled myself with believing that she was trying to bewitch poor Edith's lover as he had bewitched my brother.
And Gerald, who was also passionately
fond of music, never seemed to tire of
listening to the two.

closeted together, while Stie and my sister and myself were told not to go near the room, but when Mark Percival came out in the hall Stie spied him from the lawn, and in a moment she was by his side, speaking intently, so intently that she never saw my eyes watching from a bay window in the morning-room that juttied out, giving a view of the rest of the building.
By and by they went down the steps side by side, into the garden, and I heard him say, in rather a low voice:
"He must stop work and rest a little,
Mrs. Fane. He complains of a prick-ling sensation in his right side and shoulder. I do not like that. It is rather unfavorable."
And Stie answered him with a smile,
I could not see that and believed that she was young and sanguine and that she never realized her husband's danger.
"How could I give her credit for this when I suspected her—suspected her as I really do!—that it was not Gerald whom she loved, but Mark Percival?" Gerald was resolved to work on in spite of everything. We were not rich, he said, and work was necessary for several weeks.
Stie, instead of passing the hours in his studio as she used to do, would remain in her room with her door locked —sinking I told my sister.
At last, one day a blow fell on us all
—a dreadful blow, and harder to me,
since I believed I had helped to bring it —that, perhaps, I was really the instrument that had done it. I had not made my brother unhappy, perhaps he would not have worked so incessantly
in the vain hope of banishing thought.
She found him one bright summer's day, apparently lifeless, beside his case, and for weeks he lingered, hovering, as it were, between, us, and eternity.
And his wife, remorseful of her treachery and want of faith, seemed to have no thought but of him.
She never left him for a moment,
and if she slept it was by snatches on pillow, with her head against his pillow, with the slightest movement would awaken her.
After what seemed an age of anxiety to us, the doctor said he would live but never more to work, for Gerald's right arm was paralyzed.
I had been growing less bitter in my feelings toward Stie during my brother's illness; she seemed to be really devoted to him. But when they said he was not to work any more with his brush,
a look of triumph came into her eyes, which puzzled me, and I began to doubt her, and the doubt grew stronger when I saw her meet Mark Percival on the porch, and stand for many minutes in earnest whispered conversation.
Once—from behind a laurestina bush
—I saw her place her hand on his arm, and look up into his face, her great wild dark eyes full of glittering tears,
while she said with quivering lips:
"How much longer? Oh, these last weeks have been centuries to me. And —oh, if you have been deceiving me
—I hope—"
"Everything!" he answered, interrupting her and taking the mite of a hand in his. "I tell you that you have not many more days to wait, and then we shall both be very happy."
Upon this Stie smiled into his hand—eyes, and I saw a strange, wild, wild yearning look that drove me almost wild with bitterest anger and suspicion.
Now I dare not even look back to the horrible feeling that filled my heart with regard to the woman whom my brother had made his wife, in whom he had placed his happiness, his infinite faith, and more than all, his home.
But Gerald was in a weak and critical state, and I did not dare to warn him of what I feared. He was very loving and tender to her, and I could see his eyes follow her slight figure wherever she moved, with an expression of mild affection and doubt that was sad to look upon.
When one day she heard Mark Percival's voice at the door, she darted out of the room to meet him, forgetful of a mass of roses in her lap, with which she was making a bouquet, and heedless of the lovely fragrance, in her haste and evident agitation, she trod out their beauty at her feet.
Then I heard Gerald murmur to himself:
"Poor little one! She is so young!
I hoped to make her happy; but I am so grave and quiet that she cannot love me. God give me strength to bear it!"
I told my sister of this, but she would hardly listen. She had bewitched her, and she declared that my brother's wife
was a thoughtless child, nothing worse.
The death of the summer had come and autumn brought its wailing wind and the leaves in company with the long bright days, wrapped in splendid cerements of rainbow hues. And Gerald grew no better.
The truth was that he did no care to live.
She was in a state of feverish excitement, which seemed to grow worse each hour.
One day I knew the crisis was near.
Her cheeks burnt with two red spots,
her eyes had a wilder look, and I knew that her car was strained to catch every sound of coming footsteps.
At last she heard the welcome sound of Mark Percival's laugh. He had not been near us for a whole week, and regardless of us, she flew down the stairs to meet him.
I heard him exclaim:
"Hurray! I'm all right."
And her answer was:
"God bless you! how good you are!"
In another moment or two she ran up stairs again, and I followed her, but if she was aware of my supervision, she did not care.
Gerald was reclining in an easy chair;
his face was ashy pale, and he looked a shadow of his old self; but still his face was beautiful in its classical features, and its large, deep blue eyes, over which a fond look always crept when his wife came near.
She threw herself on her knees before him, and catching his this white hand,
she kissed it passionately.
"At last I can tell you," she gasped, between tears and smiles, "you will do me no longer, forgive me for having had a secret from you. I dared not tell I was so fearful of failure. See, Gerald, darling, there is no need for me to paint any more. I shall work for you, for us all! Oh, Gerald, won't it be a labor of love?"
And she held before me a letter from London, the best friend of publishers in London.
He looked at it then at her, as if just awakening from a strange wild dream.
Before he could speak, however, she drove into her pocket and drew out a roll of bank notes, and thrust them into his hand.
"This is yours, Gerald, all yours! I am all yours, am I not? And I shall have more, much more, I hope. Oh do speak to me, Gerald. Say one little word please."
I drew me to him with all the little strength left to him, and kissed his forehead. But, the roll of bank notes beamed over his poor, worn face, and murmured:
"Thank God! thank God! you are all my own, my Stie!"
I stole away then, I wanted to hide myself from their sight. How dreadfully I had wronged her. Could she ever forgive me?
Well, I did the most sensible thing
I could. I made a clear sweep of everything, and Stie forgave me fully and freely, with her slender arms round my neck, and in her great black eyes an huskiness, and she laughed in her own elfish, merry fashion, as she said:
"So you thought I could look at and love with all my might and main?"
Gerald is quite resigned to the will of heaven now. True, he cannot put his thoughts on canvas, but he tells them to Stie, and she, in her charming manner, weaves them into romances that win her fame and gives us luxuries in our home that we never had before.
How much she gives us, does little Stie, and the best gift of all is her love;
it is so true, so unselfish.
She has given us something else, too,
to brighten this old house. It is a tiny boy, with golden curls, and large serious blue eyes, like Gerald's, and the sweetest smile like his mother's.
They have christened him Raymond after Stie's father, but he is a snatch of sunshine to us all, so we call him Ray.
My life is devoted to him. I love him with a love devoid of selfishness—a love purified by experience and suffering and remorse.
Not Frightened.
"I protest I wasn't frightened a bit," said a suburban resident the other evening, as he sat with a few of the neighbors. "You may laugh all you want to, but you can't prove by any act I committed or any word I spoke that I was at all scared. This is how it happened:"
I was coming home about 11:30 o'clock, and being in a hurry to get home, I made a short cut through a cemetery. I was going along at a pretty good pace, jumping over the mounds and tombstones. I was never more awake, more normal or less nervous in my life. But suddenly, down in the hollow at one corner of the cemetery,
where the trees didn't admit the moonlight, I saw something white rise up out of a grave and then disappear in the earth. It was a real groan, I was sure, the kind of a groan that is wrung from a man by great physical pain.
I stopped stock still. I didn't move. Once more something white rose out of the grave under the tree shadows and then sank back into the grave. Once more the groan was repeated.
"I was not frightened. I protest I was not," as I stood and looked and listened while the strange phenomenon was repeated it seemed to me the best course was to retire as speedily as possible from that part of the cemetery.
Was it a ghost? I didn't believe it was at the time. But I wasn't going to set myself up as a judge and decide the case, and I wasn't going to investigate.
It wasn't my business anyhow. I didn't own the graveyard and I did not have any relatives buried there. So I got out.
"And you run, too," remarked the man who lived across the street. "I saw you."
"Yes, I suppose I must have run.
You see, I was anxious to tell my wife about it; such a good story."
"Well, did you find out what it was?"
"Oh, yes. It was perfectly natural just as I expected. The sexton's white horse had fallen in a grave and broken its leg. It was trying to get out."

Letter from the Capital.
Washington, Oct. 7, 1905.
A very interesting report has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture that will interest the consumers of high balls all over the country. It will interest foreign governments and may cause some international complications. It is to the effect that the British government while protecting its own consumers of whiskey by very stringent regulations as to the grade of liquor that is sold at home permits all sorts of adulteration in the so-called Scotch and Irish whiskeys which are exported. In fact these are manufactured by the Department of Agriculture and are of the same grade
as the Scotch and Irish whiskeys
which are sold in the United States.
The practice does not permit its official seal to be set on any of the whiskey thus tampered with. The result is, according to the report, and Dr.
Wiley has just returned from an extensive inspection tour abroad, that there is no reliance to be placed on any brand of imported whiskey, beyond the word of the man that ships it.
The investigation was carried into the realms of wines, beers and brandies as well as food stuffs. The showing was bad to Germany where there is also one law for the local dealer and another for the exporter. The Germans have been made very angry by our criticism of their export laws and say that there is no reason why we should object to their mode of operation since it is in conformity with the laws of the United States. Of course that is the fundamental consideration. The law is wrong which does not extend the same protection to the foreigner as to the native who consumes German products. The showing was much better in France where it was found that there were satisfactory export laws covering wines and brandies. Where there was an allowance made in France it was in the manufacture of cheap wines sold to the native workmen and not in those put up for export. There was a good deal of coloring of vegetables intended for the American market, sulphate of copper being used to give certain vegetables a green tinge which the exporters said
the American consumer demanded.
But this is being regulated gradually and the opinion of the department is that no commercial relations with France will soon be in very satisfactory shape
so far as her exports of food and drink is concerned.
In connection with the suggestion that the work of the Panama Canal be turned to State Department, it is suggested that the same be done with the building of the canal. It is said that the $10,000,000 first advanced for the canal work is expended and that some provision will soon have to be made for the payment of the balance of the loan of bonds should it be deemed advisable by the President. Therefore it is thought that an issue of $100,000-000 will soon be made. The bonds would sell well and they would provide the funds for building the canal without serious drain on the Treasury that the constant appropriation of ready cash would entail.
Secretary Shaw's suggestion that the Treasury deficit "showed signs of disappearing" has created a great deal of interest. It is true that in the last month there has been a slight improvement in the financial situation. It is no longer likely that the Spanish war taxes will have to be reimposed to meet the emergency, but

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1905.

New Timetable.

The new timetable of the N. Y. & H. R. R. which went into effect Sunday contains but few changes in the local train service. No train has been discontinued.

One new train has been added to the outward service. This is a train that has long been demanded and will be greatly appreciated, especially by theatre patrons.

Up to the present time there has been no train leaving Boston between 10.50 and 11.27 P. M. The 10.50 was a little too early for theatre patrons and often it meant a half hour wait, which is vexatious near midnight. The new theatre train is scheduled to leave Boston at 11.15, and runs express to Quincy, making the run in 17 minutes and arriving at 11.30.

A Press Dinner.

The Massachusetts Republican Editorial Association has accepted the invitation of the State Committee to dine at the Parker House this Saturday afternoon at one o'clock.

The guests will be: Lieut. Governor Curtis Guild, Jr.; Hon. Eben S. Draper, President Dana of the Senate, Speaker L. P. Frothingham of the House of Representatives, and five of our own men who have been nominated for the Legislature. Mr. Guild of the "Boston Herald," Mr. Draper of the "Boston Globe," Mr. Dana of the "Boston Post," Mr. Frothingham of the "Boston Herald," and five of our own men who have been nominated for the Legislature.

A. E. Winslow, president of the association, will preside.

Unitarians Snubbed.

The action of the executive committee of the National Federation of Churches, which is now in New York City, has been a source of much comment. The delegates elected are the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United States Senate, ex-Secretary of the Navy John D. Long and the Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association, and son of President Eliot of Harvard University.

The Journal says, upon the action of the Federation Dr. Hale is silent. Dr. Eliot is serious and Mr. Long is jocund.

Creditors Meet.

A largely attended meeting of the creditors of the Quincy Quarries Co. was held Thursday afternoon at the hotel. There was a general discussion of the affairs of the company and on the proposition made by Theophilus King for a reorganization of the company. The plan proposed admitted the creditors as stockholders. No definite action, however, was taken on the proposition.

W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., who represented some of the creditors offered a motion which prevailed, for the appointment of a committee of three to examine the books of the company. The meeting then adjourned.

Honorable F. Spear and Frank S. Patch were the Quincy members of the committee.

Reception to Boys.

Very few in Quincy over 12 years of age thought to be planning to go to the Y. M. C. A. this evening. The occasion is the Opening Reception given the boys of Quincy by the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A.

A very attractive program is arranged, which will include a stereoscopic talk on "Boys' work of the Y. M. C. A. in Massachusetts and Rhode Island," to be given by Carl T. Clifford of Wollaston. Pictures will also be shown of "Doings at the two boys' camps—Camp Darrell and Camp Keegan."

The entertainment will be given by boy musicians of Quincy, and will include violin, piano, cornet, guitar, besides vocal selections—a short, spicy program. Refreshments will be served.

The number will necessarily be limited to 250, the first 250 boys arriving will be admitted. The boys will be the guests of the department and will be entertained royally with, out money and without price.

Mayor on Committee.

Mayor Thompson is interested in Association football, and is serving on the reception committee as the representative of the Quincy club to help entertain the Pilgrims from England, which is now in Boston. The team of English gentlemen is making a triumphal tour of this country and Canada, having suffered, but one defeat in 21 matches, the score at Chicago, being 2 to 1 against them. In three games only have they been scored against.

The Pilgrims arrived in Boston Thursday evening, and a cordial welcome is being extended to them. This afternoon they will play a picked team at Fall River and on Monday comes the big game in Boston against a picked team representing Greater Boston. Five players from Quincy and Thomas Robertson of this city will probably be captain. Already 200 Quincy rosters have secured tickets for the match.

The Pilgrims will be given a public reception some day before their departure from Boston, which is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 17.

—The scheme for a unity of the Protestant religions bids fair to be a failure from the start when such men as Dr. Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United States Senate, and Hon. John D. Long, are barred out because they are Unitarians—men of national reputation and perfect examples of the faith. When any religious sect says who is a Christian and who is not, it is placing considerable confidence in their own judgment and leads one to wonder just where they get their authority. They evidently are not familiar with the fact that the subject will not be judged. If the scheme is carried through it will be as Dr. Slicer of New York aptly says, "a federation without federation."

—William Randolph Hearst was nominated for mayor of New York on Thursday at a convention of the Municipal Ownership League and allied organizations, held in Carnegie Hall. The convention was a popular one, the public generally being invited. The accommodations of the big hall were soon taxed to the limit and the crowd outside the building was estimated at several thousand.

By the reason of what appears to be dissatisfaction with the situation in the Philippines, Luke E. Wright, governor general of the Philippines and president of the Philippine Commission will retire from that position about Dec. 1.

CITY BRIEFS.

Less than four weeks to the state election.

The new timetable of the N. Y. & H. R. R. appears in this issue.

The family of John T. Cavanaugh have moved to Boston for the winter.

Lieut. Daniel R. McKay is acting Chief of Police in the absence of Chief Burrell.

The Swedish gymnastic club is arranging for an exhibition to be held next week.

The Brackett house, outside and in, has been thoroughly repaired, ready for the occupancy of the Quincy Women's club. It looks fine and is a credit to the club and city.

Last week's edition of the Quincy Patriot with its five vote coupon was quickly exhausted. Patriot coupons are always good for five votes, and efforts were made this week to supply the demand.

A large number of Quincy Hibernians attended the exemplification of the Quincy F. Spear and Frank S. Patch in the Quincy members of the committee.

It is good news to her many friends that Miss Jeannette Sanders of Wayland, a former teacher in Quincy, has been appointed teacher in Boston, in the school in which Edward Southworth of Quincy is head master.

Miss Mary Brock of Milton, one of the instructors at the Allen gymnasium, will open a series of gymnastic classes for girls at the Y. M. C. A. this morning. Miss Brock is a member of the Appalachian club.

A party of young people, from this city dined on Monday night at the Touraine, going afterwards to the Tremont Theatre, to witness the play of the "College Widow," chaperoned by Mrs. B. M. E. Van Buren, of Washington, D. C.

The next regular meeting of the W. R. C. will be on the afternoon of Oct. 24, when the work of corps will be inspected. Supper will be served to the public. After which what will be enjoyed and there will be a sale of fancy and domestic articles.

One of the gentlemen who kept tabs at the recent of the votes for Representatives night, says that E. J. Sandberg received 104 ballots, Harry S. Nichols and Eugene C. Hildman and Richard H. French about 75 each, John O. Hall and Arthur E. Baxter had very few.

There were over seventy visitors at the Dorothy Q. house on Saturday. Among the number were Mrs. Mrs. Barrett Wendell and Miss Frances Wendell of New York. Mrs. Wendell is President of the Massachusetts Colonial Dames and has recently returned from a trip to Europe. Other callers were Mrs. H. M. M. of Augusta, Me., Mrs. C. S. Woodward of New York, and a party from Richmond, Va.

There are several plots of shrubbery at the intersection of streets that have been allowed to go without pruning for years so that now they look ragged and overgrown. Just who should trim them back is perhaps a question, but it is not done by those living near, then it should be done by the city. Those in the vicinity of Butler road and Merrymount road have been especially notified as needing pruning.

Among the Quincy people who left for New York excursion last week via the Boston & Maine railroad the House of Representatives and the Hudson river, were: Dr. John H. Ash and wife, Dr. Howard and wife, Samuel Crane, H. P. Kittredge, Edwin Larkin, Joseph Peterson, Robert E. Foy, Patrick Morrissey, Mr. Guy, Mr. Collins, Mr. Barnicot, Mr. Shugart, Fred Lapham, Mrs. John J. Daly, Miss Annie Feeley, Mrs. Amos Litchfield and Miss Agnes McGinty.

A large and intelligent audience assembled in the Universalist church Sunday afternoon to listen to Dr. Perkins sermon, "Burden Bearing." It was a beautiful discourse, well delivered and clearly interpreted. If the subject will be resolved: That is required greater faith to believe the promises made to Abraham than those made to Noah. Gen. v. 28 through xxv: 8.

The Bible Study Debating club of the Y. M. C. A. will meet weekly on Wednesday evenings. It is open only to students of Quincy High School, Adams Academy and Thayer Academy, and the leader will be Raymond W. Noon, the boys work director.

The first of the annual masquerade ball of the Quincy City Hospital, which has been the subject will be: Resolved: That is required greater faith to believe the promises made to Abraham than those made to Noah. Gen. v. 28 through xxv: 8.

The state society of the Daughters of the Revolution is to celebrate on Oct. 19th, the anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, by a visit to Haverhill, where they will be entertained by the Judith Barker Cogswell and chapter. The interesting part of the visit is the visit to the birthplace of the Hannah Dustin monument, Winkensie castle, historical rooms, Kenosia lake and the Merrimack river. An early start is to be made from Boston, the train leaving the North station at half past eight.

Mrs. E. C. Bumpus finds it almost impossible to tear herself from her beautiful summer home "Fallowfields" in the Berkshires and returned there for a brief stay, immediately after the opening of the club season of the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday. As president of the club and chairman of the temporary house committee she has had to be in Quincy most of the month, that missing the beautiful autumn foliage and clear air which attract so many at this time of the year to the western part of our state.

WOLLASTON.

Many Quincy people and their work will be at the point, where the Furnace Brook Metropolitan parkway passes under a bridge.

It is already a scene of activity as a temporary track has been built for the railroad, and work has commenced on excavating at the old location.

Little by little the parkway is materializing and it should be opened for travel next year.

The first meeting of the Wollaston Young People's Religious Union was held Sunday evening in the vestry of the Unitarian church. Ernest Arnold, the president, conducted the opening exercises, and introduced Rev. Mr. Hunt as the speaker. Mrs. Herbert Garney was to have addressed the young people but was prevented by sudden illness.

Rev. Mr. Hunt gave a very excellent impromptu talk including much helpful advice to the Union.

Mrs. George A. Wardwell of Arlington street has returned from a two months' sojourn with relatives and friends in New York.

An appeal has been made for clothing for the students of Virginia Union University. Those who have anything to contribute should leave it with Mrs. G. F. Pinkham or Mrs. George Huntington of Wollaston, who will see that it is forwarded.

Miss Emma Fowler, of Wollaston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fowler, passed away Saturday night at ten o'clock, from heart failure, as a result of cerebral spinal meningitis.

Miss Fowler was taken ill April, 1904, while on a visit to her home in Wollaston, where she had been removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital. She improved wonderfully, and was brought home during the summer, where she had been very well up to Friday.

Miss Fowler was a popular young lady, sixty-six years of age, and death has caused much sorrow among the young people of the community in which she lived.

The senior class of the Wollaston Unitarian Sunday school was invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Page on Winthrop Avenue, Saturday evening, to meet Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Parker, who are soon to leave Wollaston. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Mr. Parker has been for two years associated with Mr. Page as teacher of the senior class and he will be very much missed by the young men.

Several Wollaston young men formed a party and enjoyed roller skating at Mechanics Building, on Tuesday evening.

Friends of Miss Carrie Barnes of Wollaston are sorry to hear that she is suffering from an acute attack of neuritis.

The Unity club opened the season Friday night in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church with a reception to which had been invited all former members.

Miss Mollie Adams of the Wollaston Golf Club was defeated Wednesday in the second round for the women's golf championship at the New York club. It was a sensational struggle with Miss Oliver in the 20th green.

The friends of Clair L. Baker, who went to Monterey, Mexico, two years since to serve the American Refining and Smelting Co. as assistant assayer, will be pleased to hear that he has been promoted to manager of their agency at Parrot at a very lucrative salary.

The Wollaston Gun club will hold a shoot at their grounds on Elmwood Avenue at two o'clock this afternoon. Open to all shooters.

Miss Mary B. Adams of Wollaston won the driving contest at the Morris Country club in New Jersey on Thursday, by a big margin.

Fair Play.

Editors of the Patriot: Will you kindly devote a few lines of your valuable space to the correction of a false rumor which seems to have gained currency. To the effect that, in certain recent cases of sickness which have resulted fatally in this vicinity, the patients either were themselves Christian Scientists, or had Christian Science treatment?

As neither of these suppositions is correct, it would seem but fair to all concerned that the fact should be made known; and it is with this end in view that this statement is made, and not for the purpose of raising an issue as to the relative merits of Christian Science and other systems of treating disease.

The value of Christian Science as a therapeutic agency, like that of any other method, can be determined by fact alone. Therefore care should be taken, in dealing with such matters, not to confound it with other systems with which popular thought is frequently inclined to associate it.

Bethany Brotherhood.

Bethany Brotherhood opened its season of monthly meetings on Tuesday evening with a good attendance. Councilman Sidelinger, the president, presided.

At the business session committees were appointed, and it was voted to have a public entertainment later when a more serious occasion of the Quincy Council will be the attraction.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, pastor of the M. E. church, Newburyport, who spoke very interestingly on the subject: "Variety in religious experiences."

He related many incidents illustrating "Variety in religious experiences."

Ice cream and cake were served at the close of the meeting, and there was a social hour.

A Pleasant Evening.

Note and Comment.

Congratulations to ex-Mayor Quincy on his engagement to Miss Honey. The city of Quincy is proud to have been the city of his birth, has watched with interest your prominence in State and National affairs, and with ability, wealth and honey further success may be yours.

The Women's club may accomplish that which other agencies have failed to do, and that is to unite the people of Quincy. The membership of the club comes from all parts of the city and seem to be working together harmoniously. The club has high ideals, and we wish it success.

The new 11.13 P. M. train from Boston will also be appreciated by those southbound from Quincy, as there are through cars to Brockton and Duxbury, to all the stations on the South shore branch as far as Cohasset; and to the Abington and Whitman, running through to Plymouth and Middleboro on Saturday evenings.

If no place can be found in the sparsely settled territory of Norfolk Downs for a temporary stable, as appeared from the hearing of Monday, certainly those living in the vicinity of some of the larger stables in Ward One have just given. The new rules of the Board of Health should cause an abatement of some of these nuisances.

The recount of votes for candidates for the Legislature disclosed the fact that the winning candidates, Messrs. Hultman and Sandberg, strong received votes on the lower end of the city. Sandberg received a solid Swedish vote. Mr. Hultman received very little Swedish support. By combining this vote on both candidates the Republicans can easily elect Messrs. Hultman and Sandberg Nov. 7. There should be no bullets on that day.

The attempt of the Government clerks of Washington to have themselves placed on the pension list is not finding great sympathy outside their immediate families. There is no more reason why the public should support Government clerks than there is for supporting an easy job and are well paid for it. Their employer never fails and pay is as certain as taxation. Let them exercise ordinary economy and thrift and they will not need a pension.

It was a pretty thing for Frederick Allison Tupper to pay the high tribute which he did to the late Dr. Shraham. Many will now recall the warm attachment which existed between the two when Mr. Tupper was headmaster of the Quincy High school, and will share between them the regret of having met the institution so popular that Quincy finds it difficult to furnish accommodation for all who seek knowledge within its walls.

Quincy's railroad service is now most satisfactory. The expresses to and from Boston which were added in the spring have proved very popular, and now another has been added which will obviate a tedious wait which has robbed attendance at theatre of much of its pleasure. Many, doubtless, have been frequently to the theatre because of the express service. The new express, leaving Boston daily at 11.13 cuts out the wait, and will land passengers in Quincy about twenty minutes earlier.

With 30 upward trains on the railroad, many of them express, the Quincy service is excellent, and a great improvement over a few years ago.

What makes Brookline such a desirable residential town is its careful attention to sanitation and fire safety. The Board of Health has been very strict regarding stables, outbuildings, etc. No stable can be within ten feet of an adjoining lot and not then unless built according to strict rules. This applies to private stables for a few horses while for boarding and livery stables the rules are drawn much tighter and they are not allowed in the residential section. This is quite a contrast to the easy-going methods which prevail in Quincy, where unsightly outbuildings are seen on every hand as well as stables, without regard to surrounding conditions. Much is expected however from the new Board of Health which is visiting other cities and towns to get all the latest and best ideas. It is said they intend to strictly enforce their rules and regulations.

Joseph Maurice Sheahan, M. D.
The Fellows of the Norfolk-South District Medical Society have heard with sorrow of the death of their fellow member, Dr. Joseph Maurice Sheahan, which occurred on September 21st, 1905.

Dr. Sheahan was born in Braintree in 1853 and moved to Quincy when a child. He was educated in the public schools of Quincy and the Boston Latin School. He attended Harvard College where he was awarded the Boston Medical Degree in 1879. He studied medicine in Paris and was graduated with honor from the Ecole de Medicine in 1879. He then settled in Quincy where he soon acquired a large practice.

He was a skillful physician and surgeon, kind and courteous to his professional brethren and deeply beloved by a large clientele in the City of Quincy and in the surrounding areas.

He took an active interest in public affairs and served with ability as a member of the School Committee and Board of Health and of the City of Quincy.

He was a most indefatigable worker, and being by nature of a strong constitution, accomplished his many duties with a vigor and energy which he never allowed to flag.

His professional brethren will ever remember him as the steady, conscientious, industrious physician. His patients will mourn the loss of a true and steadfast friend as well as a skillful and successful physician. To his family he has left a devoted bereavement we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

RESOLVED—That this memorial be entered upon the records of this society and be the order of the society to be transmitted to Doctor Sheahan's family, and be furnished for publication to the Quincy Patriot and the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

Among the Women's Clubs.

The Junior Friday club is this year to make a study of American literature. The season will open Monday at the home of Mrs. Lawrence H. Sturtevant, Adams street, with Miss Georgiana C. Lane as chairman of the afternoon's program. Subject for papers and discussion will be sources of American literature and Puritan writers, Anne Bradstreet, Cotton Mather, William Wigglesworth and Jonathan Edwards.

The meetings of the Quincy Women's club are held on the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month at the club house on Presidents hill. The next one will be on October 24th at three o'clock. There will be a short business meeting followed at half past three by a lecture.

"Summer Reminiscences" made a pleasant subject for the opening of the season of the Current Topic club of Dorchester. Each member told of her vacation journeyings after which there was a social hour and refreshments.

The Brightelmotone club of Brighton and Allston is one of the most active women's clubs about Boston. The social service committee has collected $120 for the N. E. Home for Deaf Mutes, set out 250 plants, shrubs and vines around the Brighton branch library, replaced dead trees on Brighton avenue, and set out trees in High school yard.

The club this season is to have classes in French, also in current events and literature.

Friday's "Chelsea Day" with the Chelsea Women's club. Papers were read on the history of the city, and prominent people of the past. It was an enthusiastic and patriotic meeting attended by present and past city officials and many people who formerly made Chelsea their home.

The opening of the season of the Framingham Women's club is known as President's Day. The program was "Vacation Notes," when interesting papers were read on, "How to do it," which told of a four days' trolley trip, and "Camping with a Co-buddy," an experience in Colorado. The afternoon was closed with a tea given by the retiring president to the new president.

The North Shore club of Lynn is considering an amendment to its by laws whereby the annual dues shall be five instead of three dollars, as at present it is impossible to do an all round club work on so small a fee.

Some of the subjects to be discussed at the state federation meeting at Athol next week are: food adulterations; growth of civic pride; the legislative work of the City League and a federal union for social betterment.

Most of the clubs have auspiciously opened the season and are starting into routine club work, be it self improvement, civic improvements or philanthropic and educational work.

Members of the Quincy Women's club were quick to respond to the call for a contribution of one dollar each toward the chairs, cups and saucers and silverware for the club house, as voted last spring. Nearly every member has been heard from. Those who had not visited the Brackett house before were much pleased with it at the house warming on Tuesday afternoon. It seems in every way suitable for a club house, the large high posted rooms being in keeping with a dignified club of women, banded together for social and educational purposes.

Stable Hearing.

That the residents of Wollaston beach and Atlantic are thoroughly aroused over the proposition to locate the large stable of the Newell, Snowling Construction Co. in that locality was evident by the large number who appeared in opposition to the hearing Monday night given by the Board of Health.

The hearing was held in the Council chamber and several were forcible in their declaration that the permit should not be granted.

The petition asked for a permit to build a stable for 45 horses off Jefferson street, Ward Six, is what is known as the hole of Coleman Bros. The petition stated that the location was 150 feet from the nearest house, 25 feet lower than the lot and nearly half a mile from the nearest street. Also that the petitioners owned lots on both sides.

Chairman Teasdale of the Board of Health presided. At the suggestion of P. R. Blackmer, counsel for E. C. Dunham, the hearing was adjourned to a later date.

Tax collector Cunningham was strenuous in his objection. The petition should not be granted. The location was in a thickly settled residential section and would be a detriment to property.

Councilman Gassett objected. The location desired was near houses and it would be an injury to the whole ward.

Councilman Sawyer objected. The fact of its being 25 feet below houses was bad. Physicians said that a hollow stable was a place for a stable on account of drainage.

Frederick A. Fog—in the interest of the health of the whole ward the petition should not be granted. It would be in direct contact with houses on Charles street.

House Warming.

A woman's club in Quincy is an assured fact, a fact none could doubt who attended the housewarming at the Brackett house Tuesday afternoon. In the spring informal meetings were held and the club organ 2nd, but it is only now that the actual club life has been entered upon.

Of the three hundred members about two hundred and fifty assembled Tuesday, showing the enthusiasm of the Quincy ladies for the new movement.

An informal meeting was held at three o'clock, the president, Mrs. E. C. Bumpas, presiding. She welcomed the members, and told of the work done during the summer in preparing the Brackett house for occupancy by the club.

The lower floor had been thoroughly renovated, and a most competent carpenter installed. Through the generosity of Miss Elizabeth Johnson and some of her friends the rooms of the visiting nurse were converted and tastefully furnished, and the enthusiastic nurse found immediate occupation in her special field.

Dr. Brackett has also planned that with the approval of the club, a tablet to the memory of the late Dr. Brackett be placed in the hall of the house bearing the following inscription:

"To increase neighborliness and social service in Quincy, this house is given—1905—in memory of Sarah C. Brackett and Jeffrey R. Brackett."

The president announced the gift of a piano from George W. Smith, which met with quick response.

It was thought the members would be pleased to hear of the success of their first philanthropic work—visiting nursing—and Mrs. May Horton of Atlantic was introduced, who had told most interestingly of what had been accomplished. She entered upon her duties July 22, having five cases that month; in August, 75, 23 of which were in one week during the intense heat, and in September, 101.

The work is growing each month, and has now become a necessity. Mrs. Hatch was grateful to the ladies who had so generously contributed toward the supply closet which had been a great help in the work.

The program for the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, chairman of the music committee, and proved a veritable musical treat. There were songs by Mrs. Smith of Medford which had a remarkably sweet sympathetic voice; piano solos by Mrs. Horton of Atlantic, and violin solos by Mr. Walter E. Load of this city, who received quite an ovation and played two selections so beautifully that the ladies were insistent in their applause, and he responded with another. Mrs. Smith at the piano was good as she always is.

At the close of the program, members were invited to inspect the club house, to visit Mrs. Hatch in her rooms and to enjoy a cup of tea in the tea room. The president, and two vice-presidents, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. J. Henry Emery, Mrs. Arthur E. Sprout and Mrs. John Gow presided at the tea, assisted by members of the house committee, of which Mrs. George G. Sargent is chairman.

An inspection of the house showed that much had been done by the committee. The artistic papering and painting, and the enlarged doorways had brightened up the interior.

The floral scheme was prettily carried out, the drawing-room being in autumn tints and red, and the reception room in yellow, and tea room in pink.

The Quincy Women's club certainly can congratulate themselves on a most auspicious opening of the club season and also on the beautiful club house. Every member feels personally grateful to Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett for his kindness in placing his home at the club's disposal, and will in every way endeavor to use the house so that it will be the center of all good work. Perhaps the few lines by John Wesley would be a good club motto to adopt:

"Do the good you can,
In all the ways you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can."

Charges Against West End.

The Republican club of Massachusetts got into the campaign on Wednesday. It held a meeting at its rooms, 10 Milk street, Boston, and a committee prepared and issued an address directed attention to the charges against the West End Street Railway Company to build elevated railroads.

An act "to authorize the West End Street Railway Company to build elevated railroads" was before the Legislature in 1890, and was approved July 2 of that year. There had been some much said by the committee, and the passage of this act had been secured that on June 12, 1890, the following order was passed by the House:

Ordered: That a special committee be appointed to inquire into the matter and report thereon. The committee was composed of Messrs. Henry M. Whitney, William H. Brewster, and Charles F. Johnson. The committee reported that the West End Street Railway Company had maintained a large corps of lobbyists and legislative counsel and made expenditures through them and its officers to secure the passage of the act, and had been for two years and a half, ever since the road was incorporated.

At this time, when the use of improper influences to affect the action of state Legislatures is so widely and justly condemned, it is well for Massachusetts to know that the West End Street Railway Company, and thus put the seal of her approbation upon the methods which were employed to secure West End railway legislation in 1890 when he was president of that corporation?

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET OF 1905.

HON. CURTIS GUILD, JR., who comes to be the unanimous choice of the Republican party of Massachusetts for governor, is a native of Boston. A lengthy account of this prominent gentleman we gave our readers last week.

HON. EBEN S. DRAPER the Republican nominee for lieutenant-governor, is a native of Hopedale, where his extensive mill interests are located, the date of his birth being June 17, 1858. He is a graduate of the Institute of Technology, and after that school training he took a practical course in the machine shops and cotton mills of the Hopedale mills. He is a director of many corporations and is a man of broad business acumen.

HON. WILLIAM M. OLIN, who has received another nomination as secretary of state, is now serving his 15th term in that important position. He is a native of Warren, Ga., but in spite of his southern birth he was a gallant soldier of the Union army, and has long been prominent in Grand Army circles.

HON. HENRY E. TURNER, Republican nominee for auditor, is now serving his fifth term in this office and is re-nominated. He is a native of Hopedale, and was born in 1857, but he is now a resident of Greenfield. He came to Massachusetts when he was in his teens and after completing his education, entered one of the law offices of Greenfield, where he read law assiduously, and later graduated from the Harvard law school. He has built up a very lucrative practice and was for six years trial justice of Greenfield. He has been in the House and Senate, and has served as chairman of the committee of judiciary in both branches, showing his ability and standing in the law.

Wollaston Unitarian Club.

The Wollaston Unitarian club opened the season Monday evening by a large gathering of members. At 6.30 a banquet was served in the vestry of the church including a fine clam chowder, roast beef with gravy, mashed potatoes, spaghetti, rolls, raspberry sherbet, French pudding and coffee.

The speaker of the evening was Prof. George E. Gardner, dean of the law school of Boston University, on the legal status of Christian Science. Prof. Gardner said at the outset that he did not intend to discuss Christian Science, and it was not his purpose to antagonize the Scientists. He admitted that it has practically done in many cases much good.

The speaker of the evening was Prof. George E. Gardner, dean of the law school of Boston University, on the legal status of Christian Science. Prof. Gardner said at the outset that he did not intend to discuss Christian Science, and it was not his purpose to antagonize the Scientists. He admitted that it has practically done in many cases much good.

Relative to the criminal liability, where a Scientist doctored to the disadvantage of a patient, he said the question of individual liberty rests. Will doctors take of their patients as children, it was different. There was an old English law that parents shall supply medical treatment. It was also a law in New York and Ohio.

In Massachusetts there were but two decisions. One was in the case of a child, where a Scientist doctored to the disadvantage of a patient, he said the question of individual liberty rests. Will doctors take of their patients as children, it was different. There was an old English law that parents shall supply medical treatment. It was also a law in New York and Ohio.

A discussion of subject of Christian Science followed, in which R. F. Clifton, W. G. Corthell, Eugene H. Sprague, J. H. Broughton, Frank E. Parlin and Mr. Cummings took part.

Rev. E. W. Hunt, the new pastor of the Unitarian church, was then invited into the club, being requested to make a speech. He responded happily, telling several stories and emphasizing the fact that a club may stand for a vital force in a community.

All stood when a rising vote of thanks was proposed for Prof. Gardner, the speaker of the evening.

The Newell & Snowling Construction Co., who have the contract to do the sub-grading of the boulevard from the National Soldiers' Home, are now on their contract which must be completed by December 1906.

The work now in progress is in the rear of the National Soldiers' Home. The top of road over embankment has been cut off by a large gang, and now at work making the fill from this point across the marsh toward the Wollaston Yacht club.

This fill is being made of beach gravel that is being transported from the shore by barge and then the two horses draw it to the roadway where it is dumped.

William B. Barry.
William B. Barry, a well known resident of West Quincy, died on Saturday at his home on Crescent street, after an illness of long duration.

During his early life he was prominently identified with the volunteer fire department of the town. He served as foreman of the old Granite, holding that office when he won the silver pipe at the playout in the Square years ago. He also served on the Board of Engineers with John W. Hall.

His business was that of a granite cutter at which he worked for many years. He was at one time a member of the Cooperative Granite Co. He leaves a widow who was Miss Annie T. Kelley, a valued teacher at the Codding school.

Funeral services were held from his late residence, 58 Crescent street, on Monday morning at 8.30, followed by a requiem mass at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church.

Patrick McAloon.
Patrick McAloon, aged 52 years, of 11 California avenue, was killed Saturday afternoon by being struck by a falling derick at Norfolk Downs, where he was at work building a cellar.

He was employed by Gilcoin Bros., and was at work in the cellar laying the wall when one of the guy ropes of the derick snapped and the derick in falling struck him upon the head, causing almost instant death.

The police ambulance was summoned, as was also Dr. F. J. Peirce, who resides near by, but before either arrived the unfortunate man was dead. Dr. Peirce examined the body, and found that besides having had his skull fractured he had sustained a broken jaw and collarbone. The body was given in charge of Undertaker Bean.

The unfortunate man was unmarried and boarded with Mrs. Patrick McAloon. He is survived by a mother, a brother and three sisters.

—The Journal says, there is at least one Boston physician who agrees with Miss Annie Hall of Cincinnati, who at the annual meeting of the American Nurses Society in Philadelphia Wednesday declared in favor of legalizing the administering of anesthetics to persons who were dying in agony.

The District Court.

The following cases have been before the court this week:
Vincenzo Carderelli and Luigi Andrew were arraigned for violation of the gaming law. Carderelli was fined $10 and Andrew was discharged.

The case of James H. White for felonious assault was again continued until Oct. 21. John Nelson was arraigned for non-support. Case continued until today.

The case of Louise De Bous for assault at Quincy was called. The defendant entered a plea of not guilty, and was discharged on payment of costs amounting to $5.70.

Signed and sealed by Henry J. March were filed $10 each for exceeding the speed limit with an automobile at Randolph. Frank Frodo was arraigned for carrying a gun and revolver in the Metropolitan Park boulevard at Quincy, and was fined $3.

Julius T. Harrah was fined $10 for speeding an automobile at Milton. Signed and sealed by Henry J. March were filed $10 each for exceeding the speed limit with automobiles at Randolph.

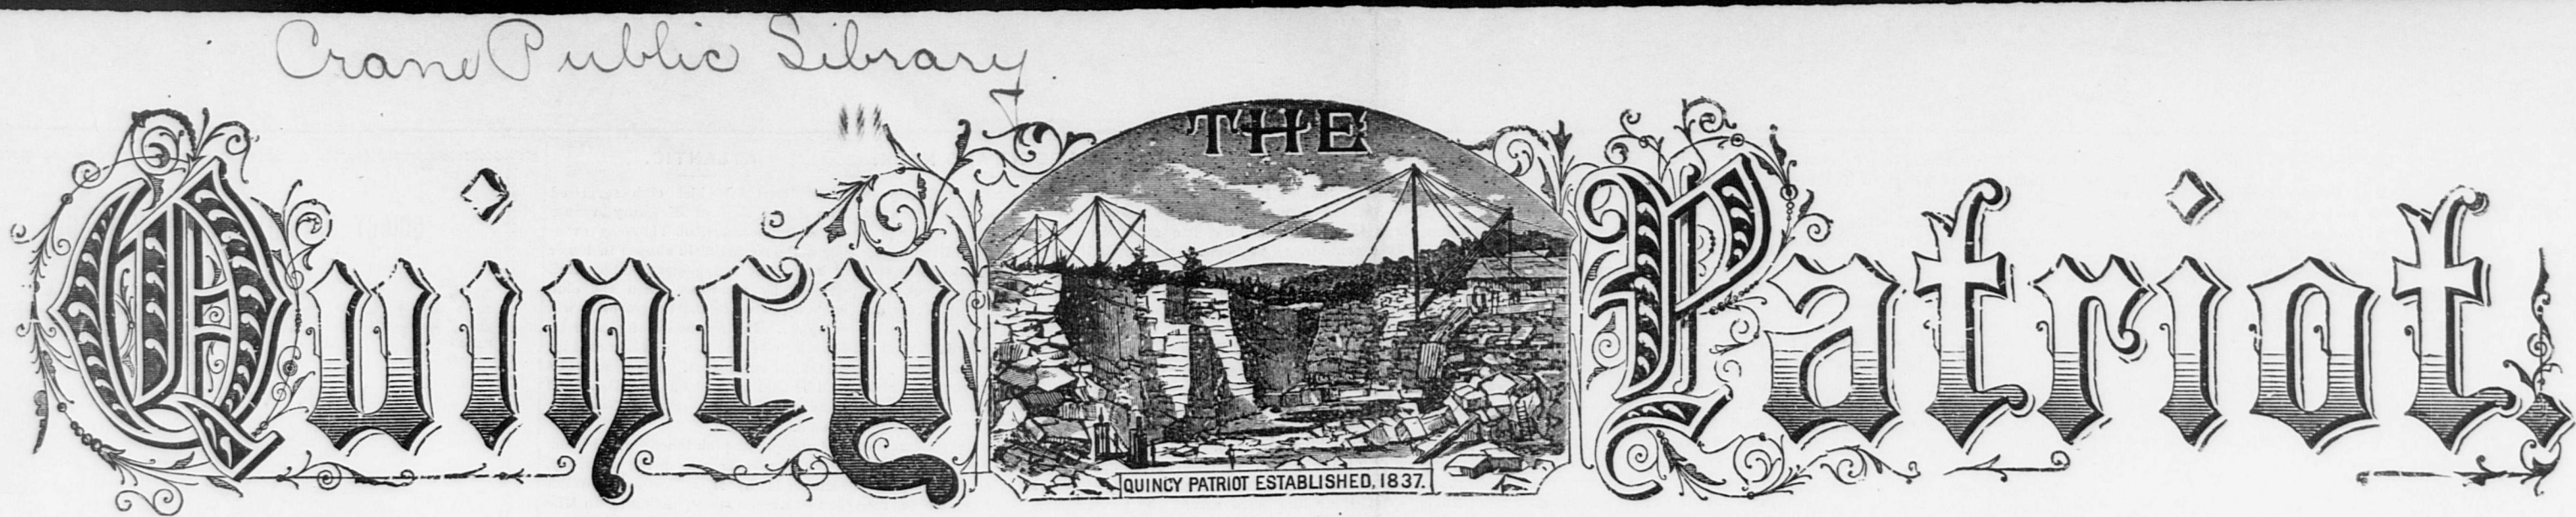

Henry Dugan of Braintree was arraigned for assault on Edward F. Condrick. Case continued until Oct. 21.

James Russell was fined $3 for running an automobile on a reservation road at Milton. James Russell was fined $10, and Harry M. Griffin $3.50, for exceeding the speed limit with an automobile at Randolph.

Albin Weber was arraigned for the larceny of a promissory note of $70 from William H. Peters at Quincy. Case continued until Oct. 20.

Geo. D. Clapp was fined $10 for speeding an automobile at Randolph. Appeared.

Clifford A. Howe was fined $10 for speeding an automobile at Randolph.

Poetry.

From Shadow to Sunshine.
I learn as the years roll onward
That much that I have counted sorrow
But proves that our God is kind!
That many a flower I longed for
Had a hidden thorn of pain;
That I have been led by a guide
To a land of light and rain.

The clouds but cover the sunshine.
They can't banish the sun;
And the earth shines out the brighter
When the weary rain is done;
We must stand in the deepest shadow
To see the clearest light.
And often from wrong's own darkness
Comes the very strength of right.

The sweetest rest is even,
When the weary burden of labor
Has been borne from our hearts away.
And those who have never known sorrow
Can't find the life of peace
That we have in the troubled spirit.
When it sees, at last, release.

We must live through the weary winter
If we would value the spring;
And the woods must be cold and silent
Before the roses sing.
The flowers must be buried in darkness
Before they can bud and bloom;
And the sweetest and warmest sunshine
Comes after the storm and gloom.

So the heart from the hardest trial
Gains the purest joy of all.
And from lips that have tasted sadness
The sweetest songs will fall.
For as peace comes after suffering,
The life is reaped of pain.
So after earth is leaved
And out of our loss the gain.

Miscellany.

A LOST CHERUB.
With a few sharp, snappy puns and a whirling and a dashing of his huge driving wheels, the impatient locomotive of the Empire State Express was just getting the first motion into the heavy train for its westward run from the Grand Central station, as Harry Brayton, newspaperman, clubman and all-around good fellow, swung himself into the vestibule of the drawing-room car. It wasn't in keeping with his nonchalance to appear in haste under any circumstances, so he caught his second breath quickly and ventured leisurely up to the soft seat which had engaged the day before.

Soft seats were his favorites in drawing-room cars, for he could nuzzle look in the corner, where no one might look over his shoulder, and with writing pad in his knee could scribble off the best part of his State House correspondence for the day before reaching Albany.
Under the inspiration of a 50-mile gait up the Hudson, a naturally breezy imagination was not in bad working trim for doing up the law-makers, or putting the mouths of his political friends words of lofty patriotic sentiment.

These imaginary interviews were his games of solitaire, and he rather enjoyed the surprise and delight it gave his friends to see themselves in eloquent type the next morning.

Something had come over Harry during the past year. He had grown more sociable and into himself; too much so,
his friends thought, as they wondered why he never bothered himself to explain. He used pencils of a grade a trifle larger, perhaps, and he sharpened them in a little more polite where social distinctions were involved; but aside from that and a tendency to take things a little more seriously than he used to, he was much the same as when a social favorite.

He was a newspaperman to the manner born, and surprises of reasonable magnitude could not disturb his serenity; but when he beheld a big, but rapidly disappearing popcorn ball, with a freckled face behind it, and a chubby little 4-year-old, in full possession of his sofa, he scented conflict and war-rented. The porter explained that the lady had left the boy there while she had stepped into the next car for a minute, as he supposed, to see about having a mistake in seating corrected.

"I see not 'fraid, is you?" And instead of a declaration of war came a peach offering of white fluffy corn and sticky sweetness with a "Have some?"
This true movement made further disclosure of a little pug nose and an expression of countenance quizzical, but eminently self-satisfied. The nine points of possession were evidently held so well in hand as to warrant a bit of patronizing diplomacy.

"Well, old man," said Harry, "having lots of fun all by your little lone ones, and making yourself at home?"
"Yep, Auntie Kate—guess she's got left. I wote we're you."

"Oh, your auntie will be back in a minute. She's gone into the other car.
Just let me sit beside you for a while."

"All right. What's your name?"
"Harry."

"That's what auntie says I am like she's got to die, auntie has," and the little freckled face grew solemn with suppressed emotion.

"Got to die? What do you mean, Billie?"

"She said, couldn't I be a better boy, 'twould kill her; and she's got to die," sobbed out in poignant grief.
"There, there, we won't cry any more. We will be little men, and then she will live and love us. What's the matter with your wrestling with this orange in my pocket?" So the tears over a seemingly inevitable fate were speedily dried.

As amiable relations were thus being adjusted, the conductor came through and disturbed the harmonies somewhat with the information that the lady in question evidently had been left at the station, as she was not on the train.

"I know'd it," said Billie, "went to see was her hat on straight; always does and makes me wait. Please pass the popcorn."

Making Life Sunny

Isn't a bit hard when you try.
THINGS aren't always rosy on the outside,
sometimes a bit discouraging on the inside.
Beneath all however, a home is just what you create it.

YOU should make it comfortable and attractive.
Own the useful furniture, a soft luxurious couch,
a comfortable easy chair and other things to correspond.

MONEY can't buy more complete comfort in furniture than what we offer here. But it doesn't require much money to have these comforts if you wish, for you can open an account at once. A little each week, that's all, buys anything and everything to make your home attractive and life more sunny.

(NOTE.) Our business has doubled in less than a year, can you guess why?

Letter from the Capital.

There has been more or less inquiry among the call men of the Fire Department as to the working of the new law requiring call men to take Civil Service examination. From what can be learned among these directly interested there does not seem to be a clear idea of the law or rule.

The rule includes all regular call men and also call men of the fire force of any city except Boston. The rule classifying the fire force went into force July 1, 1905. The effect of this rule is that all persons in the service of the fire force either as permanent or call men on that date have the protection of the civil service rules applying to removals and discharges.

Appointments to the permanent call force, however, can be made hereafter except from the civil service list except where otherwise provided by special statute.

Competitive examinations will be held in each city for the position of firemen, and an eligible list established of those passing the examination. In case of a vacancy occurring after July 1, 1905, either in the permanent force or in the call force, requisition must be made upon the Civil Service Commission in accordance with the rules.

As regards the appointment to the permanent or call force must be made within 22 years of age not over 35 years, at the time of making application, except that a call man, who shall apply for the permanent force, may deduct from his actual age any time, not exceeding ten years, during which he has continuously served as call man.

In other words, a man who is just under 45 years of age, and who has continuously served as a call man for the 10 years next preceding the date of filing his application, is entitled to apply for examination for the regular or permanent force.

Battleship Rhode Island.

The battleship Rhode Island is scheduled to leave the dock at the shipyard on Thursday, October 20, for her preliminary trial. The crew will be largely made up of workmen from the yard and will number about 375 men.

The vessel will first go to Provincetown and have 1500 standardizing trials, and then will be taken to the Boston dry dock so that the vessel's bottom can be painted, after which the trial run will be made, very likely, over the Rockland, Maine, course.

It may be of interest to New Englanders to know that this ship is the first battleship built in New England to be taken out for trial, also that this ship is the first one of her class, consisting of five vessels, to have her trial.

Cat Boat Association.

The Cat Boat Racing Association held its annual meeting Monday evening at the office of Commodore Crane of the Quincy Yacht club on Temple street and elected the following officers:

President, R. M. Whittemore of Quincy. Vice President, George H. Lane of South Boston. Secretary and Treasurer, Frank E. Dawes of Neponset.

Executive Committee, Frederick H. Smith, Herbert W. Robbins, Frank F. Crane of Quincy and E. J. Coleman of Boston.

Hotel Fire at Wollaston.

The alarm from Box 55 at 7:50 Monday night was for a lively blaze in the party hangings store of E. S. Thomas on Beale street. The fire is supposed to have started from an overheated stove, and damaged the stock and building about $200.

The store is a part of the Wollaston Hotel block, and some of the rooms of the hotel were filled with smoke.

President's Southern Trip.

President Roosevelt is being received by immense crowds with great respect throughout the South. At Greensboro, N. C., a huge bouquet, tied with white silk ribbon was presented to Mrs. Roosevelt. At Raleigh, on the fair grounds, the President was greeted by 40,000. On a bill board on the lawn was a big picture of him, thus inscribed: "Welcome to our President who dares to do right, who dares to be true, who dares to do that which no other can do."

Rummage Sale.

The annual rummage sale under the auspices of the Day Nursery Association opened Thursday in the building on Chestnut street recently occupied by F. F. Crane.

A large variety of goods are shown suitable for children as well as for the people. Many of the goods are entirely new having been contributed by the local stores.

These are marked at reasonable prices, and are being readily bought up. The sale will continue afternoons and evenings until Saturday night.

Coddington Improvements.

The Coddington school building was closed at noon Friday until Monday morning. The object of the closing was to permit workmen to put in a ventilating shaft. An eight inch shaft will be put in, running from the basement up through the roof.

In addition to this a stove will be set up in the basement. With this stove and ventilating shaft the foul air in the basement will be carried off, and the rooms ventilated.

The annual dinner of the Republican club of Massachusetts held Thursday at Symphony hall, Boston, was a most enthusiastic gathering, attended by nearly 1000 diners, and fully as many more ladies and gentlemen in the balconies. Quincy was well represented.

Very demonstrative ovations were given to ex-Gov. Bates, Candidate Guild and Senator Lodge in particular. All the speakers saw much in the Republican administration both State and National to commend, and applause was frequent.

Boston also has a loss in number of voters, the total for the State election this year being 1981 less than a year ago. Only five of the twenty-five wards gained, while twenty wards lost. Quincy's gain in voters is more conspicuous with losses in Worcester, and most of the large cities of the State.

CITY BRIEFS.

Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald has moved from Quincy, to Chester street, Wollaston. Mr. C. A. Howard of Adams street, returned last week from a pleasant trip to Europe.

Chester H. Jones, a cadet of the revenue-cutter Chase, left for Baltimore Monday. The only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Green (little Dorothy) is quite ill with diphtheria.

The dates for the Food Fair at Bethany church will be Nov. 1 and 2, and the admission will be free. Mrs. E. H. Doane and daughter of Cape Cod are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Wilson of Revere road.

Councilman Stewart of Ward One desires the Patriot to state that he is not a candidate for reelection this year. Day Nursery reports for September, intended for the Patriot today, will appear in the Saturday Daily Ledger.

Marion, the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Lyons, is confined to her home on Washington street by sickness. Miss Lizzie Gilbert of Braintree has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Fernald of Edwards street the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Morse, and Mr. and Mrs. George Follett are occupying the Morse cottage at Rose Cliff for two weeks. A. H. Taber and family have closed their summer cottage at Houghs Neck and returned to their home on Baxter street.

There seems to be a growing feeling that Marshall P. Wright will be the Democratic candidate for Mayor at the Municipal election. The annual dinner of the Adams Academy Alumni Association will be held in Boston at the University Club which he has continuously served as call man.

Arthur Felts, who has been enjoying the past few days at Dover, N. H., resumed his duties at the store of George W. Jones, Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pollock of New York city, who were married Oct. 12, included Quincy in the bridal tour, visiting Mr. Pollock's mother.

Harry Hathorne, who has been confined to his home the past few weeks by illness, resumed his duties as conductor on the street railway Monday. The October meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary was held Monday afternoon at three o'clock, in the association building. There were over sixty ladies present.

On Saturday night at the Coliseum, the uniform offered for the referendum, the G. A. R. fair securing the most votes, was presented to Capt. Charles N. Hunt, who received over 800 votes. Miss Emma D. Conklin who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Marden of Coddington, the past three months accompanied by her mother and aunt returned to her home at New Jersey Monday.

Note and Comment.

The Maple place extensions comes high, but the city will never regret that it seized the opportunity and made the improvement before it was too late. It means much to the business center of the city and to Washington street. Maple street should in a few years become a business street.

It is pleasing to note that the collection for the City Hospital has been much larger than last year. If there is needed a few thousand dollars over the amount needed for current expenses, which can be applied to the payment of debt, the Hospital will be in a position to enlarge its accommodations, and become almost self-supporting.

There was a time when there was a sharp race in Quincy between voters and school children, first one being ahead and then the other. But now the children seem to have triumphed, for there are by the Oct. 9 report 5767 enrolled in the Quincy public schools with an average daily attendance of 5500. When registration of voters closed this week the number of voters was 5,140.

The withdrawal of County Commissioner Marshall P. Wright as a candidate for re-nomination, ensures the election of John F. Merrill of Quincy, the Republican candidate. Senator Merrill's long experience in business in the halls of legislation and acquaintance with Norfolk county, qualifies him for the position and his Quincy friends wish him a large majority and success in office.

The success of the battleship Rhode Island on her trial trips will be watched with interest by Quincy people. The requirements are great, and the Rhode Island is the first one of her class to be put to the test. As it is the first battleship built in New England the product of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company is something more than a local or State affair; all New England is interested, and it will be a proud day for "Little Rhody" when the big battleship sails the ocean.

Practice vs. Preaching!

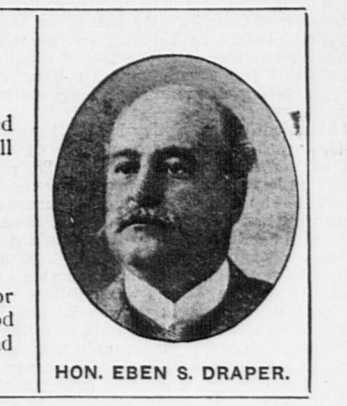

In voting a man should use discrimination and choose between the Practice of the members of one party and the Preaching of the other for campaign effect.

Republican Candidates Who Practice What They Preach.

TO SAVE THE CHILDREN.
At the recent convention of the State Federation of Labor a resolution was passed endorsing
HON. CURTIS GUILD, JR., Republican Candidate for Governor, for his efforts in behalf of the abolition of child labor in this country. He was recognized as the true friend of labor.

A MODEL MILL TOWN.
Students of labor conditions have placed their seal of approval upon Hopdale, the mill town which
HON. EBEN S. DRAPER, Republican Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and his family have established, and 3000 or more people find work in plenty there, at good wages and under the most beautiful and beneficent surroundings.

What have the Democratic candidates done to equal this? Which is the true friend of labor, the man who does things for labor at every opportunity, or the man who is continually telling what he would do if he ever had the opportunity and then dodges the opportunity?

THE TRUE FRIENDS OF LABOR ARE GUILD AND DRAPER.

FOR GOVERNOR

M., at Christian Science hall, 460 Washington street, south of Hollis avenue, testimony and experience meeting. Reading room open Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday afternoons from 3 to 5 and Tuesday evenings with gentlemen in attendance. All are welcome.
Harvest Sunday.
Harvest Sunday was observed at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Sunday. The church was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers and leaves. Rev. Mr. Hunt preached an excellent sermon, taking his text from the ninth chapter of Isaiah, third verse—"They joy before thee according to the joy in harvest."
In the afternoon at four o'clock the annual harvest concert was held. There were recitations and songs by the younger members of the Sunday-school and Mrs. Herbert Gurney, the superintendent, told the children two stories in a very interesting manner and pointed out lessons which particularly pertained to harvest time.
Junior Auxiliary to Y. M. C. A.
The first monthly meeting of the Junior Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. was held in the Y. M. C. A. building Friday afternoon, Oct. 13. Officers were elected for the coming winter as follows: Mabel E. Lovejoy, president; Sarah E. Pawsey, vice-president; Esther N. Sidelinger, secretary; Marial A. Rogers, treasurer; Grace F. Spear, historian; and Hazel E. Mowry, assistant treasurer. Many new members were present and the auxiliary promises a successful year.
Registration Closed.
Registration of voters for the State election of Nov. 7, has closed with an increased number of voters on the lists. The number by wards was: Ward One, 25; Ward Two, 22; Ward Three, 19; Ward Four, 12; Ward Five, 11, and Ward Six, 8.
During the present registration 352 names have been added to the lists making the total number of registered voters to date 5,140 an increase of 15 over October last.
No Alarm Necessary.
Prompt action on the part of W. H. Teasdale, chairman of the Board of Health, prevented calling out the fire department at 10.20 Sunday night, and saved a building from being damaged by fire.
Mr. Teasdale had been to the south shore for the day, and in coming home had by mistake taken a train on the main line instead of a branch train. Leaving the train at South Quincy he started to walk home. When he reached Brewster corner he saw quite a crowd collected and upon inquiry learned that there was a fire in John Connelly's blacksmith shop on Granite street. Some of the crowd were trying to find the key to the fire alarm box to pull an alarm. Mr. Teasdale stopped them and bursting open the door of the shop quickly extinguished the fire, which was in a box of oakum, and had evidently been set by an incendiary. Mr. Teasdale spoiled a new pair of gloves in his good work.
Shot by a Thief.
Jeremiah E. Card, a Milton milkman, had a fierce fight, Sunday morning with a thief whom he discovered trying to steal a jar of milk from the back of his wagon. During the fight Card was shot in his right arm by a pal of the thief. The affair took place on Randolph avenue. Card heard a rattling against his milk cans, and turning he saw the head and shoulders of a man at the back of his wagon. He stopped his horse, and jumped from his wagon. As he did so the thief started to run with a jar of milk. Card gave chase and soon overtook the fellow, and grabbed him. The fellow turned and gave him a stunning blow in the face. Card returned the blow, and the men clinched and fell to the ground.
Card was getting the best of the fight when a third man appeared and pulling a revolver fired at Card. The bullet took effect in Card's arm. The fellows then ran off, and Card drove to the residence of Dr. Leslie, where his wound, which was not a dangerous one, was dressed.
"Are Unitarians Christians?" is the subject of Rev. Mr. Perkins' discourse next Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, in the Universalist church.

Among the Women's Clubs.

A regular meeting of the Quincy Women's club is to be held at the club house on Tuesday afternoon. A business meeting, when the matter of enlarging the club will be voted upon, will be held at three o'clock, and at half past three Mrs. James H. Wheeler, Jr., of Brookline, will lecture on "William Morris and his legacy to posterity." Mrs. Wheeler is an interesting speaker and a delightful afternoon is promised the club. The opening meeting of the Junior Friday club on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lawrence H. Sturtevant was most enjoyable and most of the members were present.

Held for Assault.

A man who gives his name as Henry Haskins, and says he is 19 years of age, and lives at 63 Albany street, Boston, was arrested October 13 after a lively chase. The pursuers were headed by Rev. A. B. Tyler, pastor of the Quincy Methodist church and Fred L. Bagder, who were followed by quite a crowd. It is alleged that Haskins had held up a young lady on Hall place. He placed his hand over her mouth and threw her to the ground. The young lady in question is Miss Amy A. Miller, the 16 year old daughter of John L. Miller of Hall place. Miss Miller had been attending services at the West Quincy church. After the services she accompanied a friend to the car and was on her way home when the assault took place.

Mark Twain is to be a guest of the College club at their new clubhouse on Commonwealth avenue, Boston, on Tuesday.

Birthday congratulations to Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, the friend of the Quincy Women's Club, who was 45 yesterday.

An hour previous to the affair on Hall place Mrs. Howard C. Barnes of 18 Pine street was held up at Wollaston. Mrs. Barnes was on her way home through Reale street about 7.30 o'clock with her daughter. They had reached a point near the corner of Pine street when a young man grabbed Mrs. Barnes by the waist. He then placed his hand over her mouth and attempted to throw her to the ground. She forced his hand away and screamed for help, as did also her daughter. At this time the man became frightened and ran toward Adams street, and might have continued to West Quincy.

The police are inclined to believe that Haskins and the man who assaulted Mrs. Barnes are one and the same person.

The court then held Haskins in $2,000 for the grand jury.

To Ladies

"Your husband knows us—your brother knows us—your father knows us—your children know us—Now we want YOU to know us, too. THEY know us because we make their clothing. WE want YOU to know us for the same reason—because we will make YOUR clothing—and we will suit you as well as we suit them. IF our department is devoted to LADIES' TAILORING it is a relatively new one with us. Our supply of cloths is complete, our cutters are experts, and our workmanship is at the upper limit of excellence. IF we invite YOU, madam, to come in and make acquaintance with the details—in your own interest."

Poetry.

All Saints Night.

COLE A. MATSON DOLSON.

It was the night the very one
O saints, that I forgot;
Back to me came my little son
And woe! I knew him not.
How could I dream the small fit bare
We those that, snowy shod,
We shut from out the light and air
To find the way to God?
The candles that I gave to light
That darkness road for him,
He did not bring with him last night,
And my left eyes were dim.
I shut the door against the child
I would have died to kiss;
What I had lost, he brought me back,
His backward way should miss;
If any child again might come,
Though he in tatters dressed,
I'd take him in my empty home
And lock him in my breast.

We wish to arrest your attention and impress upon your mind in a gentle manner that we are equipped with the men and the material to give you the best plumbing and heating work at the lowest figures.

This is the season for heating work. Is your heating apparatus in good repair? Can we not interest you in that line?

"For the benefit of Massachusetts industries, I believe that hides, coal, iron ore, lumber and wood pulp, should be placed upon the free list. I am also convinced that reciprocal trade treaties should be made with Canada and other nations."—CHARLES W. BARTLETT.

VOTE FOR Charles W. Bartlett FOR GOVERNOR.

His Election

Would be interpreted as an imperative order to Congress that the welfare of Massachusetts industries must no longer be sacrificed for some other section of the country.

Charles W. Bartlett for Governor

Stands squarely upon the understandable platform favoring Reciprocity with Canada and other countries, as well as the placing upon the free list of hides, coal, iron, lumber and wood pulp.

Charles W. Bartlett for Governor

Is in every way qualified to perform the duties of the office, and would administer his trust in the interest of the whole people.

Tuesday, Nov. 7, is Election Day.

BE SURE TO VOTE FOR

Charles W. Bartlett for Governor.

"I consider Charles W. Bartlett in every way qualified to continue the work already begun in Massachusetts looking to a revision of the tariff duties and the making of reciprocal trade treaties in the interests of our industries."—WILLIAM L. DOUGLAS.

H. M. Whitney's Methods

"I freely admit giving the dinners, of employing counsel and making use of the lobby, but it was to prevent the accomplishment of an infamous purpose which was championed by you in violation of your oath."

—Henry M. Whitney in his reply to George Fred Williams.

EX-GOV. WILLIAM E. RUSSELL, DEMOCRAT,

Condemned the Whitney Methods

In his speech at Lynn, Oct. 31, 1890, Hon. William E. Russell said:
"In my opinion that measure has great merit. It meets the just demand of the community for quicker and better transit. It is a practical solution by able and responsible men of a difficult problem, and it will promote the convenience of the public; but if I had been Governor of this Commonwealth, I would, under the circumstances disclosed by the investigation, have vetoed that bill as quickly as I could have put pen to paper."

"FOR I HOLD THAT IT IS FAR MORE IMPORTANT TO GUARD SACREDLY THE PURITY OF LEGISLATION AND TO REBUKE THE LOBBY THAN THAT ANY MEASURE OF MERIT SHOULD BE HASTENED IN ITS PASSAGE. I HOLD THAT ONE OF THE HIGHEST DUTIES OF THE GOVERNOR OF THE COMMONWEALTH IS TO PROTECT ITS FAIR NAME FROM LEGISLATIVE SCANDAL AND TO PROTECT THE PEOPLE FROM THE IMPROPER CONTROL OF LEGISLATION BY SECRET INFLUENCES."

The Supreme Court OF MASS.

Condemned the Whitney Methods

In a ruling of the supreme court (6-Allen 193) the law was laid down that:
"THE PRACTICE OF PROCURING MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE TO ACT UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF WHAT THEY HAVE EATEN AND DRUNK AT HOUSES OF ENTERTAINMENT TENDS TO RENDER THOSE OF THEM WHO YIELD TO SUCH INFLUENCES WHOLLY UNFIT TO ACT IN SUCH CASES."

"They are disqualified from acting fairly toward interested parties, or toward the public."
"THE TENDENCY AND OBJECT OF THESE INFLUENCES ARE TO OBTAIN BY CORRUPTION WHAT IT IS SUPPOSED CANNOT BE OBTAINED FAIRLY."

Will Massachusetts now endorse the man who boldly admits that he employs these methods?

Note and Comment.

With the School Committee unanimous for the enlargement of the High School, the prospects should be bright for the consummation of this needed improvement, but there are little prospects of unanimity in the City Council. Time will tell.

One in eight as an average of taxpayers to population is not bad for Quincy, as families average three or four and it means that in every other family on an average there is a taxpayer. But what shall we say of 1890 or less of the voters being taxpayers? Quincy has 5152 voters and only one in three are taxpayers. The women seem to be the taxpayers, and it is a good argument why the suffrage should be extended to them.

The report of water used by different municipalities of the Metropolitan district shows that Boston's big percentage is on the increase. Boston used 87,684,100 gallons per day during September out of a total of 113,735,400 gallons. This was over 78 per cent. Again we ask, does Boston pay 78 per cent. of the cost of maintenance of the Metropolitan system?

The amount used in Quincy was insignificant compared with Boston, only 3,144,600 gallons per day, or less than three per cent. It would amount to precious little to install meters at large cost in Quincy and the other small cities, as they use but a negligible amount, less than 22 per cent of the water. It is in Boston where there must be economy in the use of water, or they must pay in proportion to water used.

The Coddington School.

The movement to enlarge the Coddington school lot has the approval of all friends of the school. Those who have investigated the situation recently find it worse than they thought it was. The Faxon lot is just fifteen feet from the Coddington school building and within twenty-five feet there is an old-fashioned out-house and two sheds, one of which has the appearance of being used as a pigsty. There is also a large patch of weeds and brush, and the lot is occupied, but has recently had Italians for tenants.

It is Miss Underwood's room on the street floor which seldom gets a ray of sunshine that has this unattractive outlook. It would show some appreciation of her long service to make this improvement.

With the school lot extended to Faxon avenue, many children would find the avenue much nearer in going to and from school, taking them away from the dangerous street and Washington street now used by electric cars.

Should the present site of the Coddington school ever be abandoned, it would be in poor shape for investment, but with the addition of the Faxon lot it could be divided to advantage into several house lots.

There are many other reasons why the school lot should be enlarged at this time. At one time the town had a grand opportunity to purchase at a bargain the land now occupied by the Hayward and Arnold houses; it should not at this time allow the present opportunity to go by. The Faxon estate has been offered at its assessed valuation.

Will Massachusetts now endorse the man who boldly admits that he employs these methods?

The Republican State Committee, Thomas Talbot, Chairman, William M. Flinders, Secretary.

Among the Women's Clubs.

Tuesday afternoon members of the Quincy Women's club assembled at the club house on Presidents hill for the second meeting of the fall season. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, first vice president, presided.

A short business session was held when reports were read by the recording secretary, corresponding secretary, and treasurer; also the chairman of the various committees who reported on work accomplished in their departments.

The club voted almost unanimously to increase the membership of the club fifty; from three hundred to three hundred and fifty.

The speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. James H. Wheeler, Jr., of Brookline, who spoke on "William Morris and his Legacy to Posterity," a most appropriate subject, as it was the Arts and Crafts afternoon. Mrs. Wheeler is a charming personality which attracted all toward her. She prepared her interesting paper for a lengthy paper, which it proved to be, but so interesting that its length did not detract from the pleasure it gave.

At the close, Mrs. Wheeler was presented with a bouquet of chrysanthemums, and an informal reception was given her.

The program was made up to Feb. 1st for the meetings of the Quincy Women's club is:

Nov. 14—Lecture, Rev. William R. Lord, Nature and Culture.
Nov. 28—Illustrated lecture, A. H. Kirkland of the Gypsy Moth Commission.
Dec. 12—Lecture, Dr. J. R. Brackett, Possibility of Social Work.
The Visiting Nurse, by request, will repeat her paper given Oct. 10th.
Dec. 26—Lecture of Travel, with stereopticon.
Jan. 9—Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, The Art of Story Telling.
Jan. 23—Musical.
The meetings will be held at the club house on Presidents hill at three o'clock unless otherwise announced in the local papers.
Albert E. Leach will give his lecture on "Food Adulteration" before the Milton Women's club, and Milton Educational society next Wednesday.

Gas Hearing.

Nearly two hundred citizens attended the hearing at City Hall Tuesday evening before the special committee of the City Council who are considering the matter of municipal gas.

Chairman Chamberlain presided and said that the committee was ready to hear anyone who desired to speak.

Levi H. Turner inquired if this was the hearing in response to the petition of himself and others. What they desired was a hearing before the Council. He was not ready at this time to go on as the petition was still in circulation.

Chairman Chamberlain said this was intended as an opening of the broad question. The idea was to first get the sentiment of the people.

John J. Byron felt sentiment of people was not expressed by the number present for the lack of notification. It was a broad subject. Quincy had granted the right to supply gas and electricity to corporations. Without any question we must pay an exorbitant price for light.

The same conditions will prevail as at the purchase of the water plant. It was just as logical to give a grocery man the sole right to do business as it was a company to supply gas and electricity. In Braintree where the town owns its plant, $60 is charged for an arc light burning all night against $75 in Quincy.

Just as competent men can be secured by the city as by a private corporation, it is on business principles there is no reason why it would not be a success. If the people find that it is not run as it should be, they will find a means to stop it and the rope will dangle in the face of those unfaithful to their office.

It was a question upon which the people will have to be educated. It will take some time and more meetings of this kind. He always believed in public ownership of utilities.

Ex-Senator Eugene H. Sprague believed, after living in Quincy and paying bills for electricity, which are large and service good, and for gas, which are large and service poor, he was ready to talk anything.

He then presented some figures gathered by ex-Councilman DeNormandie. The return of the Gas Company showed that in 1889 on June 30, the value of real estate was $9,500; machinery, $8,500; street main, $10,000; and meters, $500.

During the next ten years $1250 was expended in improvement and it had few hundred feet less of main, yet the returns showed real estate, $20,000; machinery, $16,120; street mains, $23,774; and meters, $3,778.91.

The gas service at Wollaston was not only a nuisance but was dangerous on account of change in pressure. The citizens ought to get together and do something.

Ex-Councilman Harry W. Read would like to see gas mains in Atlantic for cooking and lighting purposes. His service for electric lights was poor, and the price exorbitant. If Atlantic people knew of this hearing the hall would have been full.

Former Tax Collector A. L. Baker thought it was a question whether Quincy was in condition to make any more plans pay expenses. It was said during the hearing of the purchase of the water plant that rates would be cheaper. Our receipts from the water rate are $96,000. The fact is, however, that it cost the city $108,000 to get that amount.

When the town took the plant, we were paying $25 for full water service. After ten years we are paying $25. If the Water Company had remained in control we should be using the same water, and at far less price, and the city would be better off than now. The trouble is that the town took the plant in it.

Just as long as votes can be bought for a trifling position in the water department, just so long will this condition remain. Where the city spends so much to get so little, it is better to go slow. May we not expect that the more municipal plants we have the more we will be loaded with public debt?

The hearing then closed.

Fire in Johnson Building.

An alarm was sounded at 9.02 P. M. Wednesday for a fire in Johnson building in City Square and flames were bursting out of a second story window at the time. But in five minutes the fire was under control.

The fire was fought with one stream outside in the alley way near the Savings Bank building and inside by two streams carried up the stairway and a good stop was made in a few minutes.

The building which is owned by Mrs. Edna Johnson was damaged to the extent of $500 which is fully covered by insurance.

The first floor of the building was occupied by Johnson Bros. No fire reached floor but water came down through the ceiling. The fire carried a very large stock of goods, but the loss which is entirely by value is estimated at $600.

Miss Aline Jarvis, the dressmaker in whose room the fire started, says she had a lot of dress goods on hand in addition to dresses that were in the process of being made. She estimates her loss to be not less than $500, upon which there was an insurance of $200.

The dental office of Dr. Clayton R. Martin and the barber shop of Adolph Teller were slightly damaged by smoke. Some little water also ran into these offices under the door. Ten dollars will more than cover the loss on both of these offices.

The room in the rear of the second floor was occupied by the Robert Brown and several labor unions. Things were somewhat smoked in this room but practically no fire reached it.

The hall on the third floor is occupied by several divisions of the Hibernians. Considerable smoke went into the hall but no fire.

Surprise party.

A surprise party was tendered to Mr. John Giles at 12 o'clock at 59 Trafford street, South Quincy, Friday evening, Oct. 20th, by a few of his friends from East Milton, Dorchester, City Point, Roxbury, and Quincy. After a few selections on the piano by Mr. L. Kenney and Mr. W. B. Barr, Mr. Giles presented Mr. John Giles with a gold watch chain. After a return of thanks he gave the freedom of his home to his friends. Solos and recitations were rendered by the company. Refreshments were served and a pleasant evening was spent.

Hardwick—Rice.

Christ church, one of the prettiest in the city for a wedding, was the scene of a very pretty one on Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock, the decoration of autumn leaves and chrysanthemums, combining most effectively with the light gowns of the guests, and bridal party.

The bride was Miss Mildred Rice, only daughter of the late George M. Rice of Hyde Park, and niece of William B. Rice of this city. The groom was Dr. Sydney C. Hardwick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Hardwick of 104 Revere road, this city.

The organist, Mr. Wheeler, was assisted by Mr. Whitely, a friend of the bride. The surprised choir added to the beauty and solemnity of the ceremony, the church, presiding Rev. S. B. Babcock, archdeacon of the diocese; Rev. William E. Gardner, rector of Christ church; the groom, and the best man, Charles H. Hardwick, brother of the groom.

The bride party entered by the broad aisle, the ushers leading, followed by the bridesmaids, the flower girl and the bride and her brother.

At the altar the ceremony was most impressive. The ring maid, a circle of the group before encircling the finger of the bride. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lincoln Rice. Her gown was a beautiful white silk crepe de chine, trimmed with lace and embroidered garlands. The lace veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book.

Of the four bridesmaids, Miss Florence Jaguth of Boston and Miss Mary Melcher of Quincy were in blue Liberty satin with large picture hats of black and blue with plumes; and Miss Gladys K. Perry of Wollaston and Miss Minnie R. H. Hardwick, sister of the groom, were in white Liberty silk with pink sashes and pink and white hats. The flower girl, Miss Elizabeth Wharf of Dorchester was in white over blue with blue sash and hat. She carried white chrysanthemums and the bridesmaids carried prayer books.

The ushers were Lowell Baker and Nathan G. Nickerson, Jr., of Wollaston, Dr. E. V. Hardwick of Dorchester, William Hedges, Jr., of Stoughton, and Robert A. Hardwick of Quincy.

After the ceremony at the church a reception was held at the future home of the young people at the corner of Washington and Elm streets, which was attended by only the immediate family.

The groom, who is a doctor, has recently returned from Europe where he went for study and pleasure. Dr. and Mrs. Hardwick are popular in the younger set and have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Tufts College made Dr. Hardwick a very acceptable wedding gift, having appointed him this week as instructor in Physiology in both the medical and the dental schools, a well deserved appointment. His Quincy friends wish him happiness in married life, and success in his profession and as an instructor.

McLean—McKinnon.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Ross, 23 Gordon street, was the scene of a pretty wedding, Wednesday evening, at eight o'clock, when Mr. Hugh John McLean and Miss Sadie McKinnon, sister of Mrs. Ross, were united in marriage. Rev. W. B. Barr performed the ceremony.

Mr. Robert D. McLean, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Mattie Campbell was bridesmaid. The public is invited to attend these services.

MISS C. S. HUBBARD,
CITY SQUARE, QUINCY.
Quincy, Sept. 11.

Open Letter on Temperance.
Henry H. Faxon continues to take an interest, as usual, in things political, and sends the following open letter to the press:
To Eugene C. Hultman and Edward J. Sandberg, Quincy, Mass.
The strongly No-License policy of this city entitles us to representation in the hall of legislation by men whose votes and influence may be counted on to support measures in the interests of temperance and good government, and in opposition to those of a contrary character. This has not been true of some of our legislators in the past.

Football.
Quincy High played Dorchester at the Dorchester High field Tuesday and scored a decisive victory. At no period of the game was Quincy's goal in danger, the ball being in Dorchester's territory thirty out of thirty-five minutes of play.

SUNDAY SERVICES.
10th SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.
Church services are inserted in this paper without charge, but case will be accepted to read full notices. A notice should be sent each week even though it is but a small one. Let all churches be represented—Edna Johnson, Quincy, Oct. 25, 1905.

THE DISTRICT COURT.
The following cases have been before the court this week:
John Doherty and Patrick Carey were arraigned for drunkenness and disturbing the peace at Weymouth. They were fined $5 each for drunkenness, and $20 each for disturbing the peace.
Edward E. Spauld was fined $10 for disturbing the peace at Quincy.
Peter Green was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Dress Suit Cases.

Lewis W. Crawford, son-in-law of "Mrs. Dr. Bishop," and William Howard, otherwise known as William Hunt, were arrested in New York, on Thursday, as the persons responsible for the death and dismemberment of Sissie Geary, the victim of the mystery of the dress suit cases.

Howard is said to have made a full confession, the substance of which is that the body was cut up in a house in Roxbury and that he and Crawford dropped them into the harbor, two from a ferryboat running from Boston and the third from a ferryboat going to Chelsea.

The girls' head, he says, is in a third dress suit case—the one which the girl took from her home. This now lies at the bottom of the harbor, waiting to prevent the lead from rising. The other suit cases they thought would sink because of the heavy weight of the contents, so they did not take precaution to put weights in the suit cases containing the torso and the arms and legs.

Miss Roosevelt's Gifts.

The last consignment of the handsome gifts received by Miss Alice Roosevelt from royalty and lords of admiralty in the Orient have reached their destination, and packed in 24 enormous boxes, crates and bales, are stored in the warehouse of the custom house at Georgetown in bond.

It will require some time to place a valuation upon the magnificent oriental silks and embroideries, fragile glassware, works of art, etc. A piano box contains a handsome bamboo chair of unique workmanship. Small packages of occult appearance may contain exquisite jewelry. Miss Roosevelt herself is unaware of everything in the collection. Some of the small cases hold jade and porcelain, jewels and ornaments carefully packed.

It is impossible to predict what the duties will amount to. It is probable, however, that the inspectors will find the collection worth more than $10,000, and the probability is that the collector of the port will not be able to find any reason for assessing duty on more than $5,000 worth. It is likely that the exact amount may never be known, as such matters are not of public record, unless the President or Miss Roosevelt should express a willingness that the figures be published.

Masonic Election.

The annual communication of Rural lodge of Masons was held Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The officers were: W. J. Jones as treasurer, who found it necessary to decline a reelection because of private business. The officers are: W. J. Jones, Master; Joseph P. Pratt, Senior Warden; Hartley L. White of Braintree; Junior Warden, Charles Sampson; Treasurer, Alexander Falconer; Secretary, Walter E. Simmons.

Chrysanthemum Exhibition.

The annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural society will open at Horticultural hall, 390 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, on Thursday, November 9, at noon, and will continue daily 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. until Sunday, November 12.

This is the Society's greatest show of the year and it is expected that the display on this occasion will be of unsurpassed brilliancy and magnificence.

In addition to the display of chrysanthemums there will be a fine showing of orchids, carnations, and foliage plants. Fruits and vegetables are also included in the schedule. A hand concert will be given on Friday afternoon and evening on Saturday and Sunday.

Col. Bigney.

Col. Sidney O. Bigney, the Republican candidate for Congressman in this district, is much sought as a speaker and everywhere makes a hit. Tuesday evening he spoke in Mansfield; on Wednesday evening in five different places in Boston with Gail and Dan; on Thursday evening in two halls in Boston with Lodge and Guild. Friday he spoke at Fall River with Lodge, Guild and Murray. Saturday night he will attend the grand Tremont Temple rally and on Monday will speak at a grand rally in his home town of Attleboro.

The Fastest Battleship.

The battleship Rhode Island, built by the Fore River Shipbuilding company at Quincy, established on Thursday a new speed record for U. S. battleships. The trial was conducted by the government over the new Old's Head course of Rockland, Me. The Rhode Island made one mile at the rate of 19.33 knots per hour, and the mean was 18.93 knots for the best three miles. As 19 knots was the requirement the Rhode Island was well.

The largest elementary school building in the world has just thrown open its doors in New York. It contains eighty-seven class rooms, and has a seating capacity for 4500 pupils, with every seat occupied. There is a large auditorium, working rooms, workshops, gymnasium and elevators. The cost, including the site and the equipment, was $1,000,000.

A writer in the Patriot today suggests the location of the new Coddington school on a new lot about fifty rods north of its present location. It is a high, dry, sunny place of land, very convenient by several streets, and would be very economical for the city, as it could be bought for less than the present lot would sell for.

All talk to the contrary, the Republicans are well united this year on their two candidates for the Legislature, Eugene C. Hultman and Edward J. Sandberg. By voting for the two both will be elected by good majorities.

Russia's worst may be over. In the seaport city of Odessa, 5,000 are reported to have been killed by rioters, amid atrocities rivaling those of Kishineff.

Our national debt has passed the billion mark again. It has been bobbing above and below the ten figure mark for some time.

CITY BRIEFS.

The last day of November will be Thanksgiving day.

Specimen ballots for the State election next Tuesday have been posted.

John W. Nash is now at his new location at No. 5 Temple street.

At the State election the polls will be open from 6 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Julius Johnson has sold a house on Curtis street to Otto Winkist.

A Candidate's Experience.

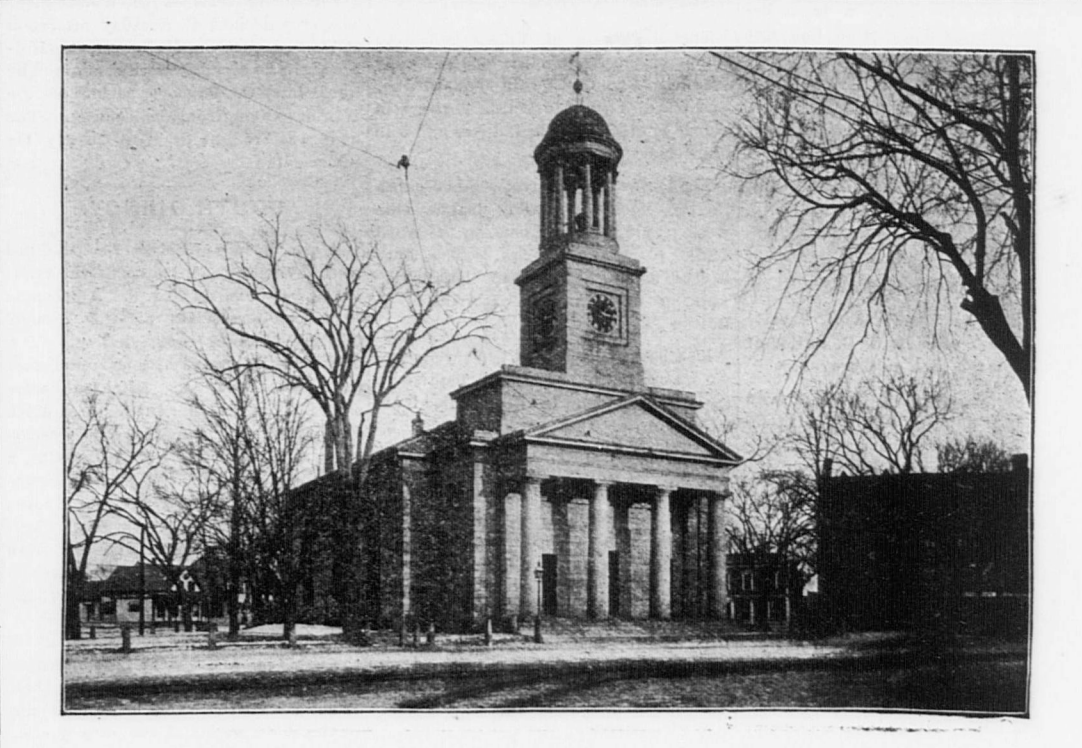

FRANK L. STANON.

Jim Jones was a candidate for office — so he
was;
He'd been workin' long from daylight in the Democratic cause;
He'd heard about the salary an office holder
draws,
So he went out for an office in the mornin'!
He brushed up his old black beard and polished up his boots;
He got him twenty packages of Georgi-made candy;
An' they missed him from the village and political disputes,
For he went in for an office in the mornin'!
But the office was a conundrum, and they told him
for to wait;
The road was kinder crooked when he thought it kinder straight;
But Jones — he kept a-sawdizin' on the Democratic scale,
"For," said he, "I'll eth the office in the mornin'!"
Soon the candidates had smoked up all of Jones' fine choicest;
An' the mud had worn the polish from his brogans and his boots;
And he lost his reputation as a political dispute,
An' he never got the office in the mornin'!

Miscellany.

THE DEERING SISTERS.

Hannah and Kimetia Deering lived on opposite sides of a chalk line that ran straight through the center of their little house, from the exact middle of the cook stove at the rear end of the kitchen to the exact middle of the threshold of the front door. Neither one ever crossed that line to go upon her sister's territory, except that Kimetia was obliged to go over it to go upstairs. This was unavoidable, since the stairs were upon Hannah's side of the house; and, accordingly, at the very outset, the sisters had agreed that the stairs should be neutral territory.
The upper story of the house was divided off from the lower by a board, and each sister was careful to lift her skirts when passing near them, that they might not be even blurred by brushing. Hannah swept her side of the house and Kimetia hers each day,
and when they came to the chalk line
they took small which hand Kimetia carefully brushed the impalpable dust away from the boundaries into their dustpans. So they lived, silent and unresponsive as two ghosts; each doing her own household within the territory allotted to her, cooking on her half of the stove, washing in her half of the kitchen, reading and sewing in her own room off the main hall, and sleeping in her quiet, uninvaded chamber.
This strange alienation of the Deering sisters had arisen—as has many another controversy among the relatives of New England—out of a quarrel about the Bible. The bone of contention between the sisters was whether or not there existed a personal devil.
The minister had preached upon the subject
one Sunday, and Hannah and Kimetia had naturally fallen to discussing it on the way home. But as ill fortune would have it, their interpretation of the passages quoted by the minister differed essentially and the discussion grew so warm that it glowed the rest of the day and far into the night, ending in so hot and hopeless a quarrel that the poor old ladies vowed they would never speak to each other again, nor touch each other, nor eat a meal together, and so, before they went to bed, they took a piece of chalk and divided the house equally and carefully arranged all the petty privileges, even to the use of cellar and garret and yard. Then, without a single, tender parting word or look, they put on the mask of silence, and each took her candle and went to her own part of the house, said a strange, mechanical prayer, lay down on her bed and stared into the night with wide, dry, burning eyes until the dawn.
After the first night and the following day the silence and alienation grew less terrible. One day, as the sisters sat anything in the world, and even come to accept it with a measure of grace and contentment. As the weeks dragged by the Deering sisters became more and more reconciled to the chalk line on the floor and all it represented—to the deadline of the house, to the aversion of the other's eyes, to the crucifixion of every thought that sprang up crying for utterance and sympathy, to the bitter longings and choked sobs in the dead of night, to the stifling of every natural impulse of the sisterly heart. The stubbornness inherited from many generations of "soot" New England ancestry was concentrated in these last remaining members of the Deering family.
They could look upon torment upon death with far more favor than upon the shadow of yielding. Each believed her self to be right on the burning question of a personal devil, and sooner than surrender her conviction upon this vital point of theology she would be cast among lions or torn limb from limb. It was hopeless, then, to expect that any inward suffering would relax the grip of dogma on either Hannah or Kimetia.
God sustaining them, they would remain undaunted righteously and faithfully over their Bible until the all-determining day of judgment.
The most difficult part of the controversy, however, was to make others understand and respect it. For the first three or four months this problem occasioned the Deering sisters no little embarrassment. The average friend and neighbor is slow and reluctant to adjust himself or herself to a family quarrel.
And since friends and neighbors will continue to intrude themselves and make an awkward matter more awkward by assuming the old relation of things, their interest puts a strain and perplexity
upon the participants in the quarrel.
And how doubly complicated and embarrassing the situation must be when the principals are forbidden by their vow from exchanging a word!
In the course of time, however, the community came to understand and adjust itself to the Deering controversy as

FIRST CHURCH, DEDICATED NOV. 12, 1828.

The large handsome granite church in Quincy Square, represented by the above engraving, was dedicated seventy-seven years ago tomorrow. There may be possibly, one or two of the following named persons who remember the great event: Edwin W. Marsh, Henry H. Faxon, Adams Whittey, Mrs. Peter Hardwick, Mrs. Charles A. Spear.
The following order of services prevailed at that time for the dedication, we have framed in the Patriot office:

ORDER OF SERVICES AT THE DEDICATION OF THE
NEW STONE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
QUINCY, NOVEMBER 12, 1828.

I. Hymn Written by a Member of the Society
Sweet high the song from earth below,
To heaven's loud hymn we rise,
Loud with us be the presence now,
We bring our grateful sacrifice.
Assembled here from earthly cares,
We dedicate this house to thee,
With humble praise, suppliant prayers,
Long let them live in purity.
Here succor to thy people send,
Through future years thy pastors bless;

II. Introductory Prayer By Rev. Dr. Gray
III. Selections from Scripture By Rev. Mr. Brooks
IV. Dedication Hymn By Rev. Dr. Harris
V. Dedication Prayer By Rev. Dr. Lowell
VI. Hymn By Rev. John Pierpont
VII. Sermon By Rev. Peter Whitney
VIII. Concluding Prayer By Rev. Dr. Porter
IX. Anthem.
X. Benediction.

The church was erected of Quincy granite taken from quarries given to the town by President John Adams; all except the four large doric columns in front which were taken from Rutland Hill quarry, according to Patten's History of Quincy. A few copies of this valuable history are still on sale at the Patriot office.
The cost of the building was $30,488.55. A rather expensive church edifice in those days, but the history says the debt was wiped off in 1833. The population of Quincy at that time was estimated at 2,000; and the United States at 13,000,000.

other as they drew Cousin Jo into the hall. The stage driver set down the travelling-bag, and handbag, and the shawl-strap, full of wraps and bundles, just inside the door, and went discreetly away, with the ugly white chalk line printed on his eyes. He seemed to see it everywhere, against the grass, the trees and the sky. He had said nothing about that chalk line to his passenger.
He could not be mentioned it. He had had a quarrel with his brother once —and his brother had died before they made it up.
Cousin Jo kissed both of the sisters and then stepped briskly into the hall. The first thing her eyes rested upon was the long, straight, heavy chalk mark running back through the hall and across the kitchen floor.
"Why, girls, are you going to have some carpeting done in the sacred old house?" she inquired gaily.
Hannah shook her head. "Come into the parlor with me, Jo," she said.
"Let me take your things. There, sit down by the fireplace and warm up a little. It's a pretty cold day for November."
Cousin Jo sat down and rubbed her hands before the fire. "My! it seems good to be back again with you girls!" she exclaimed. Then she glanced over her shoulder. "Why, where's Kimetia?"
"Kimetia is on her own side of the house," she replied. "She's smiling through her teeth, as she stepped across the mopped strip on the kitchen floor and folded Kimetia in her arms.—James Buchanan.

He Left.
Robert Bonner, one day, was criticizing human nature cynically. A clergyman took up the cudgel in human nature's defense.
"There is good in all of us," he said; "more good than bad. I believe 50 per cent of us have never done anything for which there is real cause to be ashamed."
"Nonsense," said Mr. Bonner. "Every man has a skeleton in his closet.
You could shoot a gun anywhere and bring down a bad man."
"Why," he continued warmly, "I once knew a Bishop who was considered the holiest man in America. A friend of mine, by way of a joke, telegraphed one night to this Bishop:
"All is discovered. Fly at once."
Mr. Bonner paused and chuckled.
"Well?" said the clergyman impatiently. "Well, what happened?"
"By morning," said Mr. Bonner,
"the Bishop had disappeared, and he has never been heard of since."—The Independent.

Both Surprised.
An amusing incident is told of a Buffalo woman's interview with a driver of a fiacre on her first visit to Paris.
"Where do you live?" asked the driver.
The woman, realizing that she was not understood, she sighed and said: "Oh, dear, what shall I do?" Immediately the coachman answered in English, with a decided touch of the brogue of the Emerald Isle: "Sure the best thing you can do is to speak English, ma'am."

Statistics of Trade.

Chief Pidgeon of the Massachusetts Census bureau gave out a new and interesting summary this week. The required statistics of trade to be supplied by individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in mercantile business, in connection with the State census of 1905, and the aggregate of this business in the State was $1,384,- $80,421. Boston alone had nearly three-fourths of this as will be seen in the summary below.

The other 32 cities of the State had $309,021,468, while 321 towns did a store business of but $107,837,231.
The value of goods sold in each of the Massachusetts cities were:

Beverly	$2,101,031
Boston	$97,980,734
Brockton	14,046,178
Cambridge	13,301,308
Chelsea	4,311,946
Chicopee	2,919,941
Everett	1,745,655
Fall River	22,512,201
Fitchburg	9,219,418
Gloucester	10,041,039
Haverhill	10,399,209
Holyoke	11,259,259
Lawrence	13,281,438
Lowell	21,017,169
Lynn	17,981,033
Malden	4,000,076
Methuen	2,217,440
Melrose	1,482,230
New Bedford	16,209,744
Newburyport	3,771,114
Newton	2,484,033
North Adams	5,774,928
Northampton	3,715,001
Pittsfield	7,160,246
Quincy	4,525,838
Salem	8,546,141
Somerville	6,702,944
Springfield	31,329,128
Taunton	4,136,884
Waltham	4,332,616
Woburn	1,920,218
Worcester	39,092,210
Total	$1,377,041,201

The sales per capita for Boston were $1,631; for 32 other cities, $317; and for 321 towns, $110. The per capita for the State was $482.

Reduced to percentages, the trade of Boston represented 69.90 per cent; that of the 32 other cities, 23.31 per cent.
and of the 321 towns, 7.79 per cent.

The sales per capita in Quincy were,
but a little over $93 which is lower than the average for the towns.

These cities which have a smaller population than Quincy did a larger mercantile business, viz: Chicopee, Gloucester, Newburyport, North Adams,
Northampton, Pittsfield and Waltham.

At the same time Quincy business was ahead of Newton and Everett which lead in population.

When it comes to manufacturing,
Quincy will make a better showing with its granite, its warships, tubular rivers, etc.

Quincy would make a better showing in mercantile business if residents of the city traded more in Quincy.

Dealing With Bores.

An amusing incident is related of the efforts of certain devotees of cards at a club in New York city to rid themselves of unwelcome suggestions as to their style of play vouchsafed to them who persisted in standing about and looking over the heads of the players.
One evening, one of the players, perhaps the most skillful of any of the members of the club, could endure the nuisance no longer. Rising, he politely asked one of the bores to play his hand for him until his return. The bore took the cards, and the player left the room.
Some afterward the second player followed the example of the first. The two substitutes played for awhile without observing the lapses of time. Finally one called an attendant and asked:
"Where are the gentlemen who were playing here awhile ago?"
The attendant grinned. "They're in the next room, sir, playing cards."—

Briar Pipes.

The so-called briar pipe is not made of briar at all, but from the root of a particular kind of reed, called in France, the "briar," which grows on the hillsides of the Tuscany Alps in north Italy and on the mountains of Corsica.
English tradition, finding the correct word bryarsome somewhat difficult for the English tongue to pronounce, reduced it to briar, and in this way the corruption crop in, and was established by popular usage. Originally Swiss peasants made snuffboxes of this wood, and when snuff-taking became unfashionable the peasants turned their attention to making pipes from the root, and found a ready market for them.

How to Get Mended.

"N' ver ask a woman to mend anything," said a man.
"What would you have me do?"
asked the other.
"Simply do as I do," was the assured reply. "You haven't been married very long, and I think I can give you some serviceable suggestions. When I want a shirt mended I take it to my wife, flourish it round a little and say,
"Where's that rag-bag?"
"What do you want of the rag-bag?"
asks my wife. Her suspicions are aroused at once.
"I want you to throw this shirt more dourishes," it's worn out," I say, with a few more dourishes.
"Let me see that shirt, my wife says then. Now, John, hand it to me at once."
"Of course I pass it over, and she examines it. Why, John Taylor, she is sure to say, I never knew such extravagance! This is a perfectly good shirt. All it needs is — and then she mends it."—New York Press.

How Fast We Walk.

Few men could tell if they were asked how many feet per second they walked. A press photographer, whose work requires him to know all manner of speeds, said yesterday: "The average man walks forty feet per second.
A dog, on its ordinary jog, goes eight feet a second. A horse trots twelve feet a second. A reloader over the ice makes twenty-five feet. A ranchman makes forty-three feet. A sailing ship makes fourteen feet."—

Jaynes' Emulsion of PURE
Norwegian Cod Liver Oil
With Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda
GUARANTEED TO CURE OR MONEY REFUNDED
Is freshly prepared three times a week by the most modern emulsifying process and is one of the great triumphs of our laboratory. One of the most important features of a successful emulsion consists of its entering the system in a fresh condition. As JAYNES' EMULSION goes directly from the laboratory to the patient, the greatest possible benefit is derived from its use and the purest character of an emulsion containing the highest grade of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, which we import direct. Jaynes' Emulsion is specially beneficial for deep-seated coughs, lung troubles, wasting diseases, etc. It is pleasant to take and rapidly develops flesh and strength.
We import more Norwegian Cod Liver Oil than any other retail drug house in the United States.

Note and Comment.
The Quincy returns were remarkably early this year, but there should be a change in election officers in Ward Three.

Congratulations to R-representative-elect Eugene C. Hultman and Edward J. Snider. The young men will doubtless make a good record for themselves and the city.

"Asquith Quincy so goes the State," and in Presidential years, so goes the Nation. For sixteen years or more this has been true, and the candidate who desires to be elected must take Quincy into consideration.

Candidate Elcock made a remarkably good run. While the city gave a Republican plurality of about 500 for Gen. Guild, Mr. Elcock came within seventy votes of an election.

Perhaps it was the last year that Quincy will have a double Representative district. There will be a reapportionment of the districts in 1906. Quincy will certainly be entitled to two Representatives as of late, but one should be elected from Ward One, Two and Three; and one from Wards Four, Five and Six. Fortunately, the two Representatives elected would be in different districts by this apportionment.

Gov.-elect Guild had a plurality in the cities outside of Boston as well as in the towns of Massachusetts. While Boston gave about 25,000 Democratic, the other 22 cities went nearly 50,000 Republican, and the towns added 22,000 Republican clinching the victory. Quincy gave a larger plurality to Gen. Guild than did Fitchburg, Holyoke, Beverly, Chicopee, Everett, Marlboro, Medford, Melrose, Newburyport, Northampton, North Adams and Woburn although some of the cities are larger in population.

The Quincy Patriot welcomes the new Citizens' Association which is being organized in the city. There is a field for it, and it is very much needed for the good of the city, for its business; for its progress; for its good government. The preliminary meeting was attended by representative gentlemen from the different parts of the city, and with such men behind it the future is bright. No city of 30,000 population has a better outlook than Quincy if it is properly developed, and the Patriot will be pleased to cooperate with the Citizens' Association.

Sues for Damages.
The cases of J. Gustafson, and J. F. Johnson administrator of estate of Julius Johnson, against the N. Y. & H. R. R., are on trial at the superior court at Dedham. The Gustafson girl sues to recover $50,000 for personal injuries sustained, and Johnson sues for $30,000.

Both were the victims of the accident at the South street railroad crossing Feb. 2, 1905. They stood on the outward track of the crossing waiting for an inward freight to pass, when they were struck by the 11:27 P. M. outward train.

Both were thrown some distance and received painful injuries. Johnson died the next day at the City Hospital. The Gustafson girl was obliged to submit to an amputation of her leg and her life was in peril for some time.

The plaintiffs claim that the accident was due to the negligence of the railroad servants or agents, in not giving signals required by law. The jury came to Quincy, Nov. 3 on a view.

Asa P. French and George W. Abele, Jr., appeared for the plaintiffs, and Charles H. Hall and Stewart and Parham for the defendants.

Daughters of the Revolution.
Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, had a very pleasant meeting on Monday afternoon at the headquarters of President John Adams, notwithstanding the rain. Special guests were the officers of the State Society, Mrs. Fitz, regent, with Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Holbrook, Mrs. Nichols, Mrs. Bartley and Mrs. Emerson.

After a short business meeting and a few words of greeting and pleasure from the officers, there followed an entertainment prepared by the chapter, consisting of violin solos by Master Stetson Avery accompanied at the piano by his mother, Mrs. Albert E. Avery; solos by Mrs. N. S. Huntley, Mrs. W. H. Willard, and Mrs. J. H. Willard, who sang, and a quartet by Mrs. J. H. Willard, Mrs. J. H. Willard, Mrs. J. H. Willard, and Mrs. J. H. Willard.

The result of the vote for Representative was known as early as 6 o'clock. The successful candidates were:

GOVERNOR.
CURTIS GUILD, Jr., of Boston, Republican.
VICE GOVERNOR.
Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Republican.

SECRETARY.
William M. Olin of Boston, Republican.
TREASURER.
Arthur B. Chapin of Holyoke, Republican.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.
Dana Malone of Greenfield, Republican.
COUNCILOR.
Second District.
Sidney O. Bigney of Attleborough, Republican.

SENATOR.
Edward B. Nevins of Weymouth, Republican.
REPRESENTATIVES IN GENERAL COURT.
Eugene C. Hultman of Quincy, Republican.
Edward J. Snider of Quincy, Republican.
COUNTY COMMISSIONER.
Norfolk County.
John F. Merrill of Quincy, Republican.

The Representatives-elect from the Norfolk county districts are given below. The Republicans make gains, and there is only one Democrat:

DIST.
1—Joseph H. Soliday, R., Dedham.
2—Joseph Walker, R., Brookline.
3—Samuel A. Tuttle, R., Hyde Park.
4—Frederick P. Hall, R., Milton.
5—Eugene C. Hultman, R., Quincy.
6—Aubrey Hilliard, R., Braintree.
7—James M. Lynch, D., Weymouth.
8—William O. Faxon, R., Stoughton.
9—William H. Carter, R., Needham.
10—Addison E. Bullard, R., Bellingham.

Bradley M. Rockwood, R., Franklin. Quincy cast nearly 500 less votes than at the Presidential election last year.

The Wollaston ward alone cast 117 less votes than last November; Ward Three, 82 less; Ward One, 54 less; Ward Four, 54 less; Ward Two, 148 less; Ward Six, 43 less.

A comparison of the vote of the two years is given below:

services. Prayer meeting Friday evening 7 30. All cordially invited.

FIRST UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Fort Square—Rev. W. B. Barr, pastor. Prayer service at 10 A. M. Public service 10.30 A. M. preaching by Rev. A. A. Ellsworth of Quince. Men's Bible class and Sabbath School at 11 A.

Most of the cities gave pluralities for Guild, 26 in all, while Bartlett was the choice in only seven—Boston, Cambridge, Lowell, Lawrence, Holyoke, Woburn and Chicopee.

John F. Merrill received a majority of the votes for County Commissioner in Braintree, the home of his rival, John Cavanagh, 323; Shaw, 77.

The next house of Representatives will have 104 Republicans, 70 Democrats, and 5 Independents. The Democrats gain one representative and the Independents 4.

Bible Debating Club.
The meeting of the Bible Debating Club of the Y. M. C. A. composed of High school pupils, on Wednesday evening was one of the largest and best met of the organization of the club. All met at supper at 6.15, and Speaker "Buster" Parker called the club to order at 7.10. After the usual business, the debate opened, the subject being, "Resolved—That Joseph's advancement in Egypt was due to his native qualities than his unusual opportunities." The affirmative was upheld by James Clinton and Glover Howe of the High school, while the negative was defended by Ralph Austin of Adams Academy and Carl Weston of High school. Topic cards may be secured from any member of the club. Every High school and Academy fellow should be in this club.

Election.

The straight Republican ticket was successful in Quincy, but by varying pluralities. By the vote for Secretary of the Board of Public Works, the Republican, but Gen. Guild led Mr. Bartlett for Governor by 440 votes, and Draper for Lieutenant Governor had a lead of only 221 over Whitney the Democratic nominee.

The independent voters certainly gave the Republicans a good scare, and have taught them a lesson that the wishes of the majority must be respected.

The vote of Guild over Draper was 125, while the vote of Whitney over Bartlett was 94.

Last year Quincy gave Gov. Douglas 2289 votes and John L. Bates 1734, and for Lieutenant Governor gave Guild 2,001. Gen. Guild runs 230 ahead of Bates, but 38 behind his own vote of last year. Bartlett ran 704 behind Douglas.

Quincy elects two Republicans to the Legislature by a close vote. Eugene C. Hultman was the most popular candidate leading his associate, Edward J. Snider, by 15 votes, and James H. Elcock, the Democratic candidate, by 70 votes as will be seen by the totals below:

HULTMAN, R.	1811
SANDBERG, R.	1796
ELCOCK, D.	1732
TURNER, S.	943

Mr. Hultman ran only 152 votes behind Gen. Guild, and 29 behind Mr. Draper. Mr. Elcock ran 208 ahead of Bartlett and 114 ahead of Whitney. The large vote of 943 for Bates to Mr. Turner was one of the surprises of the election.

Both Hultman and Snider received a larger vote than was given to Freeman and Nicol last year, the vote of Hultman being 125 larger than the vote for Freeman. Turner's vote was 50 less than last year.

Senator Nevins of Weymouth is re-elected by a large plurality, and Hon. John F. Merrill of Quincy is elected handsomely as a member of the board of Norfolk County Commissioners, which after Jan. 1 will be composed of Mr. Merrill, Mr. Bigney, Mr. Hultman, and Mr. Snider.

Both were thrown some distance and received painful injuries. Johnson died the next day at the City Hospital. The Gustafson girl was obliged to submit to an amputation of her leg and her life was in peril for some time.

The result of the vote for Representative was known as early as 6 o'clock. The successful candidates were:

Poetry.
We Love But Few.
Oh, yes, we mean all kind words that we say
To old friends and to new.
Yet doth this truth grow clearer day by day,
We love but few.
We love! we love! What easy words to say,
And sweet to hear,
When sunshine splendor brightens all the way,
And far and near
Are breath of flowers and care of birds,
And bells that chime;
Our hearts are light; we do not weigh our words
At musing time!
But when the music all is hushed,
And life's great road
Doth weigh us down, and thick with clogging dust
Doth grow the road
Then do we say often that we love
The words we have given.
With pleasing eyes we look to Christ above,
And clasp our own.
Their lives are bound to ours by mighty hands
No mortal strain,
Nor death himself, with his prying hands,
Can separate.
The world is wide, and many names are dear,
And friendships true;
Yet do these words read plainer, year by year,
We love but few.—Atlantic Monthly.

Miscellany.
A LUCKY BLUNDER.
The postman tossed a half dozen letters on Russell's cluttered desk and passed along. Russell dropped the morning paper and picked up the mail.
He hurried through the enclosures until he reached the last one. Then he gained the heavy white envelope and looked hard at the dainty address. He was still staring at it as he ripped off
the end of the envelope and drew out the sheet within. A half moment later he softly whistled. He puckered his brows and whistled again. Then he turned in his desk chair so that a better light would fall on the letter, and slowly read it aloud.
"Sir," he began, "your extraordinary communication is at hand. I can think of no reason that could possibly prompt the declaration you have made. I do not look upon you even as a friend. What you ask is simply impossible, and I beg you will never allude to the matter again."
"Very truly, Cleave Vane."

A smile suddenly spread across the attractive face of the reader.
"Well," he murmured, "that's a decidedly peculiar way in which to answer a letter. I don't think I shall answer it. Hanged if it isn't serious enough to be the refusal of a proposal of marriage. By jove, that's exactly what it is! Is anything the matter with me?
Have I been proposing to some individual named Vane? Where's my letter-book?" He found the volume and turned back the flimsy pages.
"Here it is," he murmured, and read the copy aloud.
"Miss Cleave Vane, City—Dear
Madam: I am authorized to offer you
$10,000 for your lot at corner of Hayes
and Adams streets. The cash payment in full to be made at time of transfer. An early reply will oblige you very truly,
Russell Webster."

He held the book away from him and stared hard at the copy. Then he laughed. "The most anxious old maid that ever longed to change her name couldn't mistake that for a proposal," he chuckled. "No, there's some blunder, but it isn't mine." He looked again at the writing on the singular letter. "Nice paper," he said, "and beautiful handwriting—and a very agreeable odor. By George, I see how it is! It's the old blunder of getting the envelopes mixed. Wonder what the other fellow will think when he gets my letter? He certainly has missed a hard setdown. Say, this ought to be straightened out right away. Blame me if I don't go right up there and see the lady. It's the gentlemanly thing to do.
I can easily see that it's no joke from her point of view."

He looked at his watch, took his hat, and hurried to the elevator. A little later, as he sat back in a forward corner of the electric car, he tried to recall all he had heard about the lady. She had very lately taken up her residence in one of the fashionable suburbs. She had come into possession of the property of a deceased citizen, and was reputed very wealthy. She had been abroad, Russell recalled seeing her name in one of the daily papers in an item about local tourists. Her pictured her as a woman of nature age, of presumptible intelligence and refinement, and with a distaste for the demands of active society. And while he was still busy with his imaginary portrait, the conductor called the street where the lady resided.

It was a stately and handsome home of an earlier type of architecture, and the grounds were large and beautifully kept.
Russell noticed that painters were at work on the front of the residence, and mistake to some puzzled dealer in real estate.

"Well, there is no immediate danger," said Russell. "But this brings me back to business. Of course I am to understand that my offer for the lot is rejected?"
"Of course," said the young woman.
"I know the lot is worth much more," she said.
"Yes," he replied, "it is worth more. You understand that I was simply the agent of other parties."

"No doubt you thought that here was a chance to obtain a bargain from a simple and quite unambitious woman, who might be glad to jump at the chance of securing such a lump of cash."

"No," replied Russell, "but my business is of a somewhat urgent and as personal nature."

The young woman looked at him a little doubtfully.
"Come in," she said, and ushered him into a handsome apartment that seemed to combine the purposes of both office and library. She motioned Russell to a chair and paused beside the large writing table in the centre of the room apartment as if waiting for the caller to announce his business.

"My card," said Russell.
The young woman glanced at the pasteboard.
"The answer," said Russell with a little catch in his voice, "was not entirely satisfactory, and I felt it would be better for all concerned to ask for a clearer reply from Miss Hammond herself."

The young woman opened her eyes.
"I can't see how it could be made any clearer," she said.
"It depends on the point of view," said Russell. He looked about him as if for possible listeners and lowered his voice. "Are you Miss Hammond's secretary?" he asked.
"I do her writing," replied the young woman.

"Then," said Russell, "I think it would be fair to show you this extraordinary letter before Miss Hammond sees it." And he placed the document in her hand.
"Thank you for your consideration,"
she said, and unfolded the letter.
Suddenly a pink flush across her rounded cheek. Then she smiled. Then both sides of small deepened, and she suddenly sank into the desk chair, and dropping her head on the table laughed and laughed.

"I am glad you find it amusing," said Russell. "Do you think Miss Hammond will consider it equally funny?"
The young woman looked up at him with swimming eyes.
"Sir," she said, "I must ask you to pardon me, but if I were certain I would receive my discharge the next minute I couldn't help laughing." And she laughed again.

"As I have said," remarked Russell,
"I am very glad you can take it this way. It struck me as having an amusing side. Yet at the same time I can't help feeling a little anxious about the other fellow."

At this the young woman suddenly stopped laughing and opened her eyes very wide indeed. Then she hastily hurried to the most distant window and stared out for several moments. And Madam! I am authorized to offer you
$10,000 for your lot at corner of Hayes
and Adams streets. The cash payment in full to be made at time of trans-

fully satisfied that life would be a dismal wilderness without her. At the next meeting he had the courage to say, "I suppose Miss Hammond would miss you greatly if you left her?"
"She couldn't do without me," said
Miss Vane.
"Who could blame her?" murmured
Russell, and then was instantly convinced that he had said something inexcusably bold. But he quickly rallied and remarked that it was strange he hadn't met Miss Hammond yet.
"Not at all," said Miss Vane, "she doesn't meet strangers."

"But I am not exactly a stranger," said Russell.
"You will see her some day," said Miss Vane. "At present she is interested in settling her affairs, and superintending certain improvements."
When she returns from California she will open up her house and strive to become acquainted with her new neighbors.

"To California?" repeated Russell.
"And do you go, too?"
"Yes," replied Miss Vane.
"How long do you—I mean Miss Hammond intend to stay?"
"Six months, I believe."

Russell went back to his office with a heavy heart. Could he endure it to forego seeing that charming face for six whole months? He didn't think he could.
Then he picked up his courage and at dawn wrote Miss Vane a love letter that was also an offer of marriage.
It was a long letter. He told her about himself, his plans, his hopes, his present standing. He told her how she had come into his life a ray of sunshine, and how his admiration and respect and gratitude had all merged into love. There was a brief account of his family, he admitted, but he was both free and independent, and had but himself to please.

It was a nice letter, a tender, earnest letter, yet Russell dropped it in the letter-box with fear and trembling, and how eagerly he seized his mail the next morning and ran through the letters.

There was just the briefest note in the familiar handwriting: "To avoid any possibility of further mistakes, will Mr. Webster call in person for a reply to his proposition?"
There was no name signed to this and Russell turned it over blankly. Then he took his hat and started out to learn his fate.

Miss Vane received him with grave countenance, which was quite unlike her usual manner. He noticed that her cheeks were a little flushed and that there was a rose in her pretty hair.
"Sit down, Mr. Webster," she said,
and fixed her gentle eyes upon him.
"Miss Hammond," she began with a little hesitation, "was much pleased with your letter."

"Miss Hammond?"
"She liked it very much, and she was highly gratified by the compliments it paid her."
"Miss Hammond, did you say?"
"She was even inclined to look upon his offer with favor, but wanted
first to secure a personal interview."

"I am very glad to hear that," said Russell. "But I don't think I shall disturb her. When she looks around her eyes were still wet.
"I beg your pardon for being so hysterical," she said. "But you see I really couldn't help it. That last remark of yours quite capped the climax."

"Then I am to understand that Miss Hammond's answer to my offer was also in the nature of a refusal?" said Russell.
"It was," the young woman replied,
with a quick catch in her voice.
"Would it be asking too much if I requested to know the exact wording of Miss Hammond's letter to me?" said Russell.

The young woman hesitated.
"Circumstances have somewhat altered the situation," she said, "and yet I think it is your right to receive what was originally intended for you."
"But of course, the original cannot be recalled. It may be possible, however, that the receiver will come here just as I have done to find out what it all means."

The girl shook her head.
"No," she said, "he will do nothing of the sort. I think you will understand why when you see a copy of the letter that was intended for you. Here it is."

She opened a book lying on the table and handed it to him. It was a letter case, and it was filled with papers. Russell took it, and he looked at a drawer of the table and drew out a package of bank bills and counted off the amount.
"There is $250, I think," she said,
"please run it over."

Russell deftly ran through the pile and nodded, and then he asked for the letter, and he placed it on the table before the young woman.
"What's this?" she demanded.
"That's your share," he said. "Half and half, you know. I am perfectly well aware that without your aid I couldn't have touched a penny of this sum. Don't look that way. You've earned it all right."

"But I can't take it," protested
Miss Vane.
"Of course you can take it," said Russell. "You must take it. This is your gift. It's a cold-blooded business transaction. I fancy you'd know what to do with it. I'm quite sure little windfalls of this sort never come amiss to me."

Miss Vane was about to speak, but Russell shook her determined that she changed her mind and gathered up the bills.
"Thank you," she said. "I'm quite sure I never earned so much money at one time before—if I earn it."

"You did," laughed Russell, as he arose.
"One moment," said Miss Vane.
"Miss Hammond has been making inquiries about you. They are quite satisfactory. She wants a man of business. Some one who can attend to the details of the management of her estate.
She fears you. It will not take all of your time at present. Later on she may require more from you. If you take the place you will report to me here twice a week. The salary can be arranged later when the duties of the place are fully determined, but I think you will find Miss Hammond a person of liberal views on this point. What do you say?"

Hammond looked at her with an air of indecision.
"What would you advise?" he asked. "I certainly would want to earn my money."

"There'll be no fear about that," laughed Miss Vane, and her smile was very attractive.
"Convey my thanks to Miss Hammond," he said, "and tell her I am pleased to accept the offer."

The more she said, the more she was charmed by her. At the seventh meeting he was convinced he had loved her from the start. At the eighth meeting he was held them for the expected advance.

The result proved the accuracy of his judgment. This is the transaction upon which Mr. Faxon's bibulous opponents
have founded the essentially false
charge so often heard that he "made his money selling rum." The intention being to convey the impression that the temperance campaign was at one time
in his life distinctly a liquor-seller.
Relinquishing speculation, he dealt
in real estate on a large scale, and it was in this that he made the bulk of his fortune. He purchased for the most part at auction and through careful

Republican, in 1864 and 1871. With these exceptions, Mr. Faxon has never held public office, save the peculiar one of "Special Police," to enforce the laws relative to the sale of intoxicating liquors in Quincy.

A man of rare judgment, of irresistible energy, he "bowed to the line" of an unshaken purpose. His life was of

The result proved the accuracy of his judgment. This is the transaction upon
which Mr. Faxon's bibulous opponents
have founded the essentially false
charge so often heard that he "made
his money selling rum." The intention
being to convey the impression that the
temperance campaign was at one time
in his life distinctly a liquor-seller.
Relinquishing speculation, he dealt
in real estate on a large scale, and it
was in this that he made the bulk of
his fortune. He purchased for the most part at auction and through careful management cleared great amounts of money. He was the largest real-estate owner in Quincy, owning over two hundred tenements, besides having nearly one hundred in Boston and Chelsea.

Reception.

October 31, 1895, ten years ago, Rev. Edwin Nash Ward was installed as pastor of Bethany Congregational church. In celebration of the long pastorate a reception was given Rev. and Mrs. Hardy Thursday evening in the chapel of the church under the auspices of Bethany circle.

The pastor and wife were assisted in receiving by the officers and members of the circle in the ladies' parlor, the members relieving each other. In the line were Mrs. J. F. Welch, the president; Mrs. W. E. Blanchard, the vice president; Mrs. W. W. Gay, Mrs. C. H. Gilson, Mrs. E. W. Branch, Mrs. C. T. Sherman, Mrs. James E. Myers, Mrs. Maria McNeill, Mrs. Elizabeth Allen, Miss Thomas, Miss Maud MacFarlane, Miss Alice Dunn, Miss Mary Sampson, Miss Alice Everett Crane, Miss Alice Hatter, Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. George Badger and others.

The parlor was attractive with pine boughs, green vines and flowers used in decoration.

Mrs. Hardy was given in a pretty pink crepe de chine with lace and carried a bouquet of roses and violets.

Mrs. Welch wore a white lace gown. Both chapels were used and were lighted by colored lanterns and decorated with flowers.

Mrs. A. H. Gilson and Mrs. E. W. Sherrard were in charge of the refreshments and at four tables in different parts of the chapel frappe and cake were served by Mrs. H. Everett Crane, Mrs. V. E. Miller, Miss Alice Sampson and Miss Maud MacFarlane. They were assisted by Miss Lillian Pratt, Miss Helen Kingman, Miss Mary Murray and Miss Gardner.

The ushers at the reception were Messrs. W. F. Sidelinger, W. E. Blanchard, John F. Hunt, E. D. Gould, A. L. Melcher and G. E. Shaw.

Mrs. John F. Hunt kindly presided at the piano during the evening, playing songs and accompaniments.

During the day Rev. and Mrs. Hardy received several substantial checks and flowers from individual friends, some being outside the church.

During the ten years' pastorate 250 members have been enrolled in the church, more than one-half upon confession of faith. Mr. Hardy has averaged 1,000 calls a year among his people and has probably attended more funerals than any other Quincy pastor.

Immediately after the reception Rev. Mr. Hardy left for New York being one of the 500 delegates to the inter-church conference of the United States.

Twenty-seven denominations will be represented. Mr. Hardy will not return until next Tuesday.

Through Cars.

It will be good news to Quincy that at last some definite information has been received by Mayor Thompson in regard to through car service between Quincy square and Dudley street terminal. The Mayor has been an earnest worker for this result. He has had frequent interviews both with President Sullivan of the Old Colony system and President Hancock of the Boston Elevated system.

While both companies seemed anxious for through car service, it was an open question when the matter was taken to effect, owing to the failure to agree. Mayor Thompson had another interview with President Sullivan last week, at which the latter gentleman stated that he was doing all he could to further the project.

The matter has now been settled and the matter of through cars is near at hand as the following letter received by the Mayor this morning will show:

Boston, Nov. 10, 1905.
Hon. James Thompson, Mayor, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir: The Boston Elevated Railway Company and this company have agreed for operation of through cars between Quincy square, Quincy, and Dudley street, Boston.

It is intended to permanently have a new type of car for this service, plans for which are being prepared. In the meantime both companies will use ordinary cars.

I cannot at present state definitely when through cars will be put into effect, owing to the fact that some changes will be necessary, such as new signs, etc., but this will be a matter of weeks. When it is known definitely I shall be pleased to advise you.

Very respectfully,
P. F. Sullivan, President.

Mayor Thompson states under the through car service it is proposed to run cars every fifteen minutes.

President Nichols of the City Council, also an earnest worker for through cars, has received a similar letter from President Sullivan. The opening paragraph reads: "Owing to the interest which you have taken in through-car service between Quincy and Boston, I feel that I owe it to you to state how the matter stands at the present time."

Brownials.

Surrounding towns are preparing for a vigorous campaign against the gypsy and brownial mobs. In Weymouth the Selectmen have sent out notices regarding the gypsies with a copy of the statute, which calls for notice at once. Arlington has been most active, the town last year appropriating $5000 and this year $5000. It has also a society which is doing great work in recommending reliable men to the police. It also furnishes to its members free of charge, creosote, brushes, cutters, ladders and scrapers, and has an active chairman in B. C. Haskell.

This winter Quincy will have to put up a good fight as the mobs have secured a new headquarters in the Civic Betterment committee of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth chairman, is to take the matter up at once and have secured the services of Mr. Kirkland of the Gypsy Mob Commission, who will lecture on the subject on Tuesday evening, Nov. 28th, at eight o'clock in Bethany church chapel. It is said to be a very interesting lecture, and a great many illustrations by the stereopticon add much to the interest.

It is a fine opportunity for Quincy people to put themselves on the subject. The committee has had 500 guest tickets printed.

Mayor Thankful.

Mayor Thompson, when interviewed by the Patriot on the result of the campaign, expressed himself as highly gratified at the very satisfactory result received in every ward of the city, and while he had not expected other than an endorsement, had no reason to believe it would assume such astounding figures. He does not ascribe this result wholly to himself in a personal sense, but as an expression of the confidence of the voters in the present administration; and he has every reason to believe the verdict at the election in December will be as pronounced.

Mr. Thompson desired through the press, to extend his thanks to the citizens of Quincy for the result.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Ripley appeared at Wollaston Thursday evening, and many of those who enjoyed the minstrel show given by the Imperial Company last year, attended to see what the company could do in a variety line.

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Arthur McFarland Thursday, the 9th, upon the anniversary of his tenth birthday, when fifteen of his little friends and schoolmates gathered at his home on Arlington street after school hours, and with games, music and refreshments made a most memorable one.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. S. Delano of Arlington street will regret to learn that they will soon leave Wollaston. Mr. Delano having secured his connections with the Tubular River & Steel Co., and accepted a very important position with the United Shoe Machinery Co. at Beverly, Mr. and Mrs. Delano have been very active in the social events of Wollaston, especially those connected with the Unitarian church. They will take with them the best wishes of a host of friends.

Patrons of the Wollaston post office greatly appreciate the improvements made by Postmaster Burns.

Benjamin King cast the first ballot in Ward Five on Tuesday and it was marked for Mayor Thompson.

The Wollaston Alliance is planning to hold a picnic at Wollaston in Wollaston hall sometime next month.

The advance sale of tickets for the entertainment course to be given in the Wollaston Baptist church has revealed a great appreciation by the public, of the different numbers offered. The first, which will be given on Tuesday, Nov. 21, is the picture story of "Evangeline" by Rev. A. T. Kempton. Mr. Kempton's Hiawatha was so well received here last April that he is sure of an eager audience this time. The numbers to follow will maintain the high standard thus set.

George Weston, of Newport avenue, had a fall Monday, breaking his right wrist.

Abel O. Brown and family of Safford street have moved to Quincy.

Mr. Mack and family of Beach street have moved to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips street, is critically ill and has been taken to the hospital for an operation.

Mrs. Joel Pillsbury and her two children, returned this week to their home in Jacksonville, Florida. They have been spending the summer with Mrs. Pillsbury's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Hall of Mulholland street.

A very successful fair under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Park and Downs church, was held in the vestry Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

The several booths were very tastefully trimmed with tinsel and crepe paper, under the charge of the following ladies: Groceries, Mrs. Gram; candy, Mrs. Daggett; preserves, Mrs. Milbury; fancy articles, Mrs. Atkins; soap and perfumes, Mrs. Tobey; doilies, Mrs. M. Hunter; mystery box, Mrs. McDonald; grab bag, Mrs. Keith.

The supper room, in charge of Mrs. Lyons, was especially attractive, refreshments being served from small tables.

The entertainment the first evening was music by Potter's orchestra.

The fair was opened the second evening by an entertainment given in the church, and consisted of trio and duets and an original play written and directed by Mr. Hennep, the able president of the society.

The pleasant feature of the fair was the presentation to Rev. and Mrs. McGathlin of an autograph quilt. A goodly sum was netted to the treasury of the society.

The Citizens' Association.

The Citizens' Association of Quincy is now an assured fact, the organization was perfected and officers elected at the meeting on Wednesday evening, which was held in the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers' Association, and was attended by a representative body of citizens.

The committee appointed at the meeting a week ago to draft by-laws, reported, and with a few slight amendments were adopted.

The committee defines the object of the association to be as follows: "To promote the interests of the mercantile and manufacturing business of Quincy. To broaden and strengthen its business relations. To enhance the attractiveness of the city as a place of residence and business. To secure the highest standard of Municipal government and by all legitimate means to work unitedly for the material prosperity and general welfare of the city."

The by-laws also provide that any individual residing or doing business in Quincy may become a member. The membership fee, which shall include dues for the current fiscal year was placed at $5, and the yearly dues thereafter at $5.

Regular meetings of the board of directors, which includes two from each ward with the President, vice president, secretary and treasurer, will be held on the second Tuesday of each month.

The governing power of the association is invested in the board of directors. Aside from this there will be sub-committees on the following matters: Ways and means; transportation and public service corporations; new enterprises; taxation and insurance; highways and local improvements; promotion of local trade; and publicity.

Officers were elected as follows: President—Henry L. Kincaide. Vice President—Russell A. Sears. Secretary—Clarence Bugby. Treasurer—Nathan G. Nickerson. Directors—Dr. J. F. Welch and Herman F. McIntire of Ward One; John W. Miller and George L. Kincaide of Ward Two; Walter S. Plinkham of Ward Three; Harry W. Read of Ward Six.

The vacancies in the board of directors in Wards Two, Four, Five and Six will be filled at a subsequent meeting.

Before the meeting adjourned it appointed a committee consisting of Paul R. Blackman, John L. Miller, and Nathan G. Nickerson to appear before the City Council Committee on Public Buildings in the interest of a building ordinance.

The association adjourned for two weeks.

The new association staffs off with a charter membership of 25.

At the caucuses held in Boston on Thursday John Fitzgerald was nominated for Mayor by the Democrats, and Louis A. Frothingham by the Republicans.

Quincy Women's Club.

There was an overflow meeting of the Quincy Women's club at the club house on Tuesday afternoon to greet Rabbi Charles Fleischer of Cambridge. A short business session was held, followed by music and the lecture, opening with a duet by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. Albert B. Moulton, members of the club.

Mr. Fleischer took for his subject "Women in Democracy." He is a most interesting speaker, his clear enunciation enabling every one to hear distinctly in the remotest part of the hall. He took his listeners into new fields of thought, some so different from their usual way of thinking that many were inclined to differ from him, but for the most part there were words of approval at some of the special points brought out.

He thought women were asserting themselves; that the home was not her only field, that she needed to get out and broaden herself by contact with other women and other ideas, and in this way make the home more ideal and the home relations more equal. He believed men and women equally endowed, varying only as individuals. The time had gone by when women were pets and playthings. They are individuals with power to think and act for themselves as men have for generations.

Many women committed moral and social suicide when they married, giving up their individuality, others with stronger characters were unhappy because they were divorced courts and separations. The ideal life is the home life, but each must be an individual.

vidual part of it, free to think and act. Women, that is most women, do not marry now for necessity, they are capable of living their own lives, earning their own competence.

In these days husbands and wives are comrades, having much in common but each being decidedly individual. In this way would future generations be the stronger and better, and naturally also the more, the city, state and country, would gradually uplift into a larger, broader way of thinking and living.

It is impossible here to bring out all of the good points in Rabbi Fleischer's lecture, but it received the closest attention of his listeners, each of whom probably carried away some special thought to consider.

The afternoon closed with a group of songs by Mrs. Albert E. Avery, a member of the club, after which a rising vote of thanks was given the lecturer and entertainers of the afternoon.

During the social half hour, new members were greeted, and all had the pleasure of meeting Rabbi Fleischer. Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth, chairman of the Civic Betterment committee, and the Civic Betterment committee arranged the afternoon's program, and as guests Mr. Theo. Ruggles, Kison and C. E. Anderson. Mrs. Morton of the house committee was hostess and received the guests.

The next in the club course is also to be under the auspices of the Civic Betterment committee and will be held in the evening at B. Thany chapel instead of at the C. U. house, as it is of public interest. It is to be an illustrated lecture by Mr. Kirkland of the Gypsy Motif, which he will tell.

of the moth pests, the gypsy and brown-tail, which every one in the city should be interested to hear about. Members will be admitted by the blue membership tickets and the guest tickets will be white and may be procured of Mrs. Wadsworth or Miss Prescott.

The November meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club on Tuesday evening was largely attended. The banquet was served by Seiler, and was followed by an exceedingly entertaining and instructive address by Dr. Marshall L. Perin of Boston University on "Student Life in German Universities." Dr. Perin is also superintendent of schools at Wollaston, and spoke from experience in Germany.

President W. F. Wadsworth presided, and at the business meeting a new constitution was adopted, and upon motion of Walter M. Hatch a committee on resolutions appointed on the death of Henry H. Faxon. Mr. Hatch spoke in eulogy of Mr. Faxon, and the committee are: Mr. Hatch, ex-Senator E. H. Sprague and Rupert P. Clifton.

Dr. Perin showed at the outset how German universities differed from American. How the German government encouraged students to become professors and paid them a salary for life and allowed them the greatest freedom to promulgate what they discovered. How the students go about from one university to another, "bumming" for a year or two before they simply give them lectures and exercising no control.

Finally, if there is anything in the young man he studies down to work. There are no classes, no curriculum; every student must stand on his own merits, and the final examination taken alone is very severe. He said drunkenness among German students was overrated; that duelling had not been provoked but an athletic sport no more dangerous than American football. What corresponds to our hazing is a great improvement, one senior pupil being held responsible for one green pupil, to the advantage of both.

Neighboring Women's Clubs.

The Arlington Woman's club observed its tenth anniversary last week. The club has arranged for four Monday afternoon lectures by Leon H. Vincent for the benefit of the school decoration fund. The first lecture, by Dr. H. H. Harris of Harvard University is to lecture on "What shall the schools teach."

The Quinsippaugua Woman's club of Milford is to have a series of eight lectures, an author's reading, a musicale and a guest afternoon, besides six lectures in the social service department and a mother's meeting, with music at each meeting, making up a pleasant winter's program.

On Monday the New England Women's club observed the eighteenth birthday of the club historian, Miss Julia Sprague, by a reception and tea. At the last meeting of the Brightwell-stone club of Allston it was announced that a course of six lectures on "Household Economics" would be given by Miss Anna Barrows, beginning Nov. 15, with a lecture on "Dining-room economy" by Mrs. Lincoln. French classes, have already been started. The home department announced a luncheon and whist Nov. 16.

Sam Walter Foss gave some of his original readings before the Peabody Woman's club on Friday.

The Fitchburg Woman's club is arranging for a course of free cooking lessons for girls the school board having given the club the use of the Crocker Domestic Science laboratory.

The City Council.

A short but important meeting of the City Council was held Thursday evening. It was an adjourned meeting and was held to receive the report of the State election of Nov. 7.

Councilmen Adams, Barry, Burgess, Chamberlin, Gearhart, Hughes, Hynes and Piper were absent.

PETITION.

The N. E. T. & C. Co. petitioned for attachment on Updell road and station street. To Committee on Streets.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The Committee on Elections reported the result of the election of Nov. 7, amended by the recount. The figures were practically the same as already reported in this paper. Result declared as read.

The Committee on Ordinances reported correctly engrossed on the following orders which were passed to be ordained.

Amending the Fire Department ordinance so as to give the permanent men one day off in nine.

Appropriating $11,300 for laying out Maple place.

Granting the New England Telephone Co. a location for poles on Sea street.

Appropriating $500 for laying out Braxon street.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Councilman Bass offered an order that a committee of five, to include the President, be appointed to take appropriate action with His Honor the Mayor on the death of Henry H. Faxon. Adopted.

The President appointed Councilmen Bass, Stone, Sidelinger and Chase.

MORE FIREMEN.

The order amending the Fire Department ordinance so as to increase the number of permanent men from 14 to 18, took its second reading, and was referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

The following orders took their second reading and were passed to be ordained under suspension of the rules.

Granting the Telephone Company a location for one pole on Prospect avenue.

Granting the Electric Light Co. a location for one pole on Thurston street and two poles on Fort street.

Adjoining at S. 22 to meet Nov. 20.

Note and Comment.

With a Board of Trade and a Citizens' Association something should be accomplished for Quincy. It will not matter if there is a little rivalry. There is much that may be accomplished and one organization may spur on the other.

But a bare majority of the City Council of 1905 have been renominated. For this reason alone all these should be re-elected by the Democrats or Republicans. Some changes are very desirable, but there is such a thing as too much of a change.

It was a handsome victory for Mayor Thompson. While his administration did not have the full endorsement and enthusiastic support of all Republicans, they weighed all the issues involved they saw it was their plain duty in the interests of good government to give him a renomination.

His majority is larger than his most sanguine friends anticipated, over two to one, but the most remarkable part is that he should have carried every ward. In Ward Two only was the vote close, all the other wards giving large Thompson majorities. The result shows Mayor Thompson upon his renomination, and prospects for reelection.

The death of Henry H. Faxon is a great loss to the city. He was a man to note that that is the consensus of opinion among our citizens since his death. His fearless and aggressive stand for good government, particularly in municipal affairs, made him as prominent as his work against liquor selling. The fact that he was so successful in exposing publicly any questionable transaction in city departments undoubtedly had a great influence for good, and Quincy has been better governed because thereof.

The death of the Quincy young man, who are now becoming voters, owe the most to him. They have grown up in a city without having once seen an open saloon. For 23 consecutive years Quincy has voted by emphatic majorities not to license the sale of intoxicating liquors. This record is due to Faxon, in a large measure, there has been very little liquor sold. For years he made a personal fight enlisting the services of others and himself paying the expenses.

Mr. Faxon also directed his energies against the expression of opinion into Quincy, and in a measure successful, but this is more difficult to regulate. Because of no-license, Quincy children have been better fed and clothed than they would have been had saloons been numerous; wives and mothers have been happier, homes have been better furnished, bills of the grocer have been paid more promptly, children have staid in school longer, crowding our High school.

More education means better citizens, and in this and in many other ways the work of Mr. Faxon will have a good influence upon Quincy for many years. It is for others to do collectively what Mr. Faxon has often done single handed.

Joint Caucuses.

By over one thousand majority, to a total vote of less than 2,700, Mayor Thompson was renominated by the Republicans for his candidate for Mayor. The totals were: Thompson, 1,803; Johnson, 796; with only 33 blanks.

James Thompson received his largest vote in South Quincy, his home ward, which had a close rival in Ward One, while Ward Four voted with Ward Three in size of majority both giving 253 majority. In proportion to the vote, the largest majority however came from Ward Six.

Benjamin Johnson did not succeed in carrying Ward Two where he has lived most of his life. It was the closest ward, and Thompson won by 2 majority.

The total vote of the city by wards, the vote for Mr. Thompson and for Benjamin Johnson, and the majorities for Thompson were:

Ward	Thompson	Johnson	Majority
Ward One	660	391	269
Ward Two	398	184	214
Ward Three	620	415	205
Ward Four	545	321	224
Ward Five	402	301	101
Ward Six	314	218	96

Totals 2569 1803 766 1067

For Councilmen at large there were six candidates on the Republican ticket, one from each ward, and some one necessarily got left. This was Theodore Hermann of Ward Four. In the election of the rest of the nominees are Lewis Bass, H. Everett Crane, William M. Chase, Arthur C. Beal and Walter E. Piper. Councilman Piper led Mr. Hermann by 328 votes.

There was no contest for School Committee at large among the Republicans and ex-Councilman Arthur W. Newcomb of Quincy Point was nominated unanimously.

Mr. O'Neil was a candidate up to the last moment that he was one of the chosen few in Ward One, but the other three won, the vote being as follows: Madison M. Cannon; 427; Alfred H. Gilson, 413; Otto Gelotte, 363; Arthur J. Neill, 161. There were 333 blanks.

For Ward Committee there was no contest but few voted the entire list presented, and totals varied and were small. These were elected: George T. Westland, Archibald F. McLeod, Albert T. Westland, John F. Stetson, Otto Gelotte, James Moorhead, J. B. Bonifant, Benson, Thomas M. Butler, Warren W. Adams.

The result of the caucuses in Ward Two was very close. Mayor Thompson however, carried the ward by two votes, the vote for Mayor being: Thompson, 184 and Johnson, 182. This is the one ward of the city which it was expected to give Johnson a majority if any ward did. Both candidates put considerable work into the ward as the result shows.

There was no contest for Ward Councilmen or Ward Committee among the Republicans and the following were nominated:

Councilmen—Herman W. Gross, William F. Sidelinger and Eugene R. Stone.

Ward Committee—C. Arthur Sampson, Eugene C. Hultman, Eugene R. Stone, Edgar F. Hayden, Rollin H. Newcomb, Edwin W. Newcomb, George A. Sidelinger, James H. Lally, Arthur W. Newcomb.

An error of one vote in the count for ward committee was the cause of the difficulty in getting the returns from the South Quincy ward. Then the lights went out and the caucus officers worked under difficulty. This is the home ward of Mayor Thompson and it gave him a handsome majority.

There was also a contest in this ward for Ward Councilmen and Ward Committee. Double lists were nominated for each of the above which also added to the work of the election officers.

The vote for Councilmen was as follows: The three first named being nominated: George Hunter, 270; William H. Deacon, 267; William T. Spargo, 237; William T. Cummings, 225; Thomas Bishop, 209; Alexander D. McGregor, 128.

For Ward Committee the vote was as follows nine being elected: Harry S. Nicol, 343; John C. Murray, 288; Walter E. Piper, 267; William Marshall, 168; Thomas C. Smith, 210; John Masson, 167; William T. Cummings, 160; Frank Thayer, 152; William H. Deacon, 148; Frank L. Carlton, 229; John L. Miller, 170; George Mavor, 123; George Prout, 164; George Clark, 150; Bernard J. Talbot, 85; William Farquharson, 104; Thomas Mitchell, 128.

Outside of Mayor West Quincy had no contest. The Ward gave Mayor Thompson a good majority.

The Ward Councilmen nominated were: Andrew Anderson, J. Leonard Ferguson and James M. Walker. School Committee from ward—Charles H. Owens.

Ward Committee—Charles H. Owens, William P. Barry, Albert Clark, Eric A. Carlson, J. Leonard Ferguson, Theodore H. Hermann, James M. Walker, Walter H. Ripley, John R. Walters.

There were no contests in the Wollaston ward outside of Mayor and Johnson, though a large vote was cast the returns were announced in good season. The head of the ticket was made public before 10 o'clock.

The councilmen nominated were: Wendell H. Hall, Walter F. Nichols and Herbert J. Polk.

Ward Committee—William M. Chase, Charles A. MacFarland, Richard R. Freeman, Albert W. Fay, Walter S. Pinkham, Eben Hardy, Herbert V. Follett, Herbert J. Garney and Frank C. Potter.

The Atlantic ward had a spirited but friendly contest for Ward Councilmen in addition to that for Mayor. Councilman Sawyer led the list. The vote for the several candidates was as follows, the three first mentioned being nominated: George F. Sawyer, Jr., 198; Ralph W. Hobbs, 193; John Moir, 167; Charles E. Cherrington, 163.

For School Committee from the ward, Daniel A. Brown was nominated. The Ward Committee elected was: Daniel McGrath, Louis F. Rangelier, Elwyn R. Thorpe, Walter L. Winlock, Roger H. Wilde, Charles N. Brown, William G. Gassett, Alfred S. Nelson, Crawford Harvie.

DEMOCRATIC.

George H. Wilson for the third time is the Democratic standard bearer for Mayor, there being no opposition to his nomination.

For Councilman at large there was no contest, the following nominated being given in the order of the largest votes: Patrick W. Driscoll, Robert J. Teasdale, Galen V. Bowditch, Robert J. Clifford and Clifton Jones.

John H. Ash was unanimously nominated as the Democratic candidate for School Committee at large.

In the Centre Ward there were no contests for any office. No nomination papers were filed for Ward Councilmen but names were written in so that two Poetry.

Thanksgiving.
ESTHER T. HODGE.
Once in a while the rusty gate of time
Swings back upon its hinges, and the light
Of other days, dear days, is ours again.
We watch with joy the tender buds of Spring
In Summer warmth unfold their radiant race,
And Autumn treads her tinted robes o'er flowers
and trees;
The months have passed—November finds them bare.
What, though all this death of rain, and cloud and storm,
And cheerless days and dreary nights can bring
The treasures lost, restore one glimpse of Summer bloom,
But These, Thanksgiving?

Thy magic touch
Has found the secret spring where memory hides
Her precious treasures! Like April showers
The patter of feet and silvery laughs
Like chiming bells ring out upon the air.
The rosy fire-light sheds its warmth and glow
In every room. With glad, contented face
The father waits the children coming home.
Though their score years have crowned their brow with white,
And the mother's heart, the table spread,
As of old, with the "boys and girls" love
beat,
And little chairs, with foot-rests old, await
The never lost claim that a welcome there.

Joy wreathes the old time luncheon with glad eyes,
And fragrant birds tell forth their sweetest songs.
For once, full care away, be glad today!
Around the board we meet, with bowed head,
While grateful hearts breathe forth a thankful
prayer:
For life, for friends, Oh Father, Thine we bless, Thanks for our earthly home, thanks for Thy grace!
Thanks for Thy promised rest, when earthly sins Shall rise for us no more! In noontide glow, Eternity vast Thanksgiving be!

Miscellaneous.
Thanksgiving for Two.
The widow Wilson's farm had seen better and more prosperous days, and now was traveling hand in hand with at the top of Brimble Hill, where it was bounded by the county road, and straggled down to the lake shore, its hundred acres or so wandering over hills and dipping into hollows, until they terminated at the bay, with its rim of white and glistening sand.
One of the most picturesque spots of earth, and right in the center of it, crowning a rounded knoll, surrounded with stalwart oaks and butternuts, squat
the house of its owner.
It was always a difficult spot to reach in winter, when the drifting snows piled high their white billows against the loweared structure and hid the windows from the outer world. But in summer it was a delight, this moss-brown dwelling beneath the oaks, and at one time had been a home around whose hedge-stone had gathered sons and daughters.
Now it was desolate. The passing stranger would have added it to the category of deserted farms. No sign of life was visible this bright Thanksgiving morning; from its wide, paneled chimney a column of smoke drifted slowly and frosty air; the light fall of snow that had covered the ground the night before showed no trace of footstep leading from the weather-beaten door. And yet there was a stir of life in the farm yard, in the hollow among the trees, where the old barn tottered ready for its fall. There a flock of fowl and turkeys wandered disconsolately about.
In the adjacent stall an old horse stamped impatiently for his breakfast, and a forlorn cow chafed restlessly at her stallions. Except for these, the old farm was as silent as when its first owner carved it from the virgin wilderness. A rustling of the shrubbery that fringed the hill, stiff-ranked pines on the hill beyond the barn told that a visitor was coming to Lonely Farm. A human head appeared in sight. It was crowned by a woman cap, from beneath which peered a pair of black, bright eyes. Their owner took off the cap and mopped his brow. He was a rugged country lad of 18, well knit and sturdy,
with a pair of ruddy cheeks, white teeth and lips rosy, but with a droop of sadness.

New England, always hard to her children, had taken from this boy the home and mother that make Thanksgiving, even as it had taken from the widow all but the wretched framework of what had once been home.
"House looks like mother's used to after she got so she couldn't get about," soliloquized the boy, staring at the smokeless chimney. "I'll bet there ain't been nobody near the widow in a week, and I'll bet, while I'm a bettin', that she needs somebody. Guess I'll find out what's the matter."
He strode down to the house and knocked. There was no response. Only the crow in the oak tree was disturbed
by the unwelcome noise and flew away with a caw of alarm. A second knock started the fowl in the barnyard, who greeted him with a suppressed chuckle,
but there was no answer from within.
"Guess I might as well go in," he pushed open the crazy door and entered the room which served as kitchen and sitting-room, all in one. A table stood in the center of it, covered with a snowy cloth and set as if for supper.
A clock ticked in the corner under the stairs, but its rhythmic beats only seemed to make the silence audible.
"It seems kinder creepy, that's a fact.
Hope there ain't nothin' happened to her. Wonder where she is! 'P'raps she's asleep."

He rapped loudly and then put his ear down to the key-hole, listening intently. At first there was no response.
Then he thought he heard a faint, vague voice.
"It's me—Jim Hastings. I've come to see if you need anybody."
"Come in!" The feeble voice struggled with a cough, then: "Yes, I'm so glad you've come. I was taken faint yesterday and had just strength enough to crawl to bed. Perhaps—"
"What, are you ain't had nothin' to eat?"
"No," with a feeble smile.
"Well, if you'll let me try, I'll make a cup of tea."
Jim closed the door, set his gun in a corner and looked around for the place in which the widow kept her stores.

The dressers ranged against the wall sings a soft song of rest, and the fer-retted banks stretch down to the pond.
I never traveled any yet, but I don't want to; this suits me." And he returned to his work with a cheery
whistle that sent a thrill of satisfaction
through the widow's heart.
A wonderful change had been effected by the time another year had rolled another Thanksgiving into the calendar,
the roof of the old house no longer leaked; the barn had been raised from its attitude of deep dejection, and its mosses were crowded to bursting with hay and grain. The old horse spent his days chief in the pasture, while a younger and more vigorous animal did the work, assisted by a yoke of big and handsome oxen. The solitary cow now had plenty of company and frisky calves gambolled about her in the summer time. There was no longer any doubt as to the availability of the farm, there was no longer any doubt as to the availability of a Thanksgiving dinner.
Thus the seasons succeeded one another with their measure of content.
Each found the widow more and more dependent upon her stalwart helper.
She clung to him as she might have clung to the son of whom she had been deprived in the springtime of her wifehood. As her tattered footsteps were supported down the aisle of the village church on a Sunday few of the congregation knew that the handsome young man who watched over her so assiduously, through the narrow-paneled windows, was an advance guard of the outside sunbeams came streaming in, the woman with a silvery halo. Jim thought he had never seen a woman who appeared so "ladylike," and how young she looked! He paused a moment to regard her, and she opened her eyes.
He retreated in confusion a step or two,
the red blushes staining his honest, open face.

"You've made me very happy, Jim," very thankful, I'm glad of it. It's Thanksgiving!"
"What! Really Thanksgiving Day?
It's the first time I've forgotten it—ever. I must be growing old!"
Jim grew bolder.
"There's a turkey out in the barnyard. He ain't very fat, but if you say so I'll help you fix a turkey dinner."
The widow argued no objections, and both fascinated at the prospect of a Thanksgiving dinner with themselves as host and hostess, the boy trudged out to the barn.

Some sticks of hard wood were soon piled on the fire, and by the time Sir Turkey was ready for the oven, the widow had peeled the vegetables and dropped them into mysterious depths of the steaming kettles, Jim looking on with glowing, but silent appreciation.
A snowy cloth over a round table,
with all the "fixings" of a turkey dinner, the feast is one to melt hearts harder than that of the lonely widow and the homesick New England lad.
"It is the happiest Thanksgiving dinner I ever had in my life, my boy," she said to him, as he cleared away the dishes and brought out the dessert, of fragrant quince preserves.
"May God bless you. And to think how the dreadful, gloomy morning has been turned to such bright sunshine
by your coming!"
Jim turned to the window to hide
some tears that would persist in squeezing themselves out of his eyes. "I wish she wouldn't be so sentimental,"
I said to himself, quite truthfully.
But to the widow he said: "Why, ma'am, I ain't done nothin' great, no
more'n you'd have done for me, I'll bet.
I ain't enjoyed a dinner so, myself, since I can remember. I wish I could just stay here all the time."
A new light came into the woman's faded grey eyes, born of a thought that had been struggling for expression for an hour or more. "And why can't you stay, Jim?"
"I could, ma'am, if I could come as
—as partners!"
It was out at last, the boy's yearning for something as his own, and the chance he saw upon the widow's face.
"I could fix things up," he went on eagerly, "and make the chickens lay for you, and the cow give milk and—"
Jim stopped, but the widow's respectful attention led him on.
"I could care my board in saving things that's good to waste. When I noticed o'clock an' o'clock of dead trees that ought to be cut, an' made firewood of. An' as for timber, there's more'n a hundred dollars' worth there that I'll be able to sell if it ain't cut an'
sold pretty soon."

The boy hesitated, amazed at his audacity; but the widow nodded her head and smiled approval. "That is true, Jim. The farm is running down for the lack of some one to oversee out of doors. So, then, it is a bargain."
And the boy's strange partner-ship began. The first winter Jim spent in thinning out the superfluous wood in the neglected lots, stacking up behind the house enough fuel to satisfy even the cravings of that yawning fire-place for years to come, and selling to the saw mill on the pond timber for shipping that came to quite $500.
As the spring opened he was soon afloat, continuing the good work of improvement, and "planting time" found the farm with more and earlier labor performed than it had ever before experienced. In front of the western door he threw out a platform, protected by a lattice work covering, and here the widow passed all the spare time she could snatch from her indoor duties.
It had never occurred to any one before that the farm might be made attractive. The widow had only looked upon the beauties of her farm around her through the kitchen window, or during a hasty trip to the well or farm yard.
The latticed porch was a revelation to her, and a haven of rest where she sat and mused during the long twilight of summer.

"I never thought I should take such comfort here," she said. "Before you came I was more than willing to give up the farm and go away."
The last few years, her beauty, her
I was to live here the rest of my life.
I would not leave it for the world."
"That's so, ma'am. It would have been a great mistake to leave the old place. Why, there ain't a prettier view in all the world than this from your front door. If there is, then it is right there, down in the woods where the great trees meet overhead, the brooks sing a soft song of rest, and the fer-
retted banks stretch down to the pond.
I never traveled any yet, but I don't want to; this suits me." And he returned to his work with a cheery
whistle that sent a thrill of satisfaction

But it was not until the evening of April 18 that they had even been planning for their early wedding. That night, at 12 o'clock, came the clatter of horses'
hoofs down the street, and a loud
knocking at the door, arousing the patriots for the next day's battle, hardly a fitting moment for wedding bells!
John Hancock bustled out, as ready to become soldier as bridegroom, and wanted to stand at the head of the band of yeomen forming on the green to resist the coming attack of the British redcoats. But older and wiser heads counseled that he and his friend Sam Adams should flee, as they were the prizes the British general most desired to capture and forward in chains to England as traitors. So Hancock and Adams were hustled off in a coach-and-
four to Woburn. Dorothy and Aunt Lydia Hancock were left in the temporary care of Parson Clark.

She returned his loving glance, lingeringly, gratefully, as they led her to the door of her room.
Next morning Jim knocked again at the Widow Wilson's door, just as he had done on that lonely Thanksgiving Day four years ago. This time not even a feeble voice answered his repeated calls.
Three days later, as the neighbors struggled back from the little cemetery on the hill, Squire Lothrop drew Jim apart.
"I suppose you know the widow's left the farm to you?" "No, Sir!" It might be strange she didn't tell you. She made her will more'n a year ago, and her only heir was you. She seemed to set a lot by you the widow did, and (looking around approvingly over the snow-covered fields) "I don't I blame
her. The last four years, her beauty, peacefulness of her life, and she's left her peace with you, for sure!"

Dorothy Quincy.
In commenting on the engagement of Miss Dorothy Quincy of Dedham and Mr. Frederick R. Morse, the Boston
Herald goes back to the original
"Dorothy Q.," a daughter of the late Edmund Quincy of Quincy, who became the wife of the patriot John Hancock and the historic facts will be of interest to Patriot readers:
But the Dorothy Quincy that is equally well known and whose romance was as thrilling as anything in fiction or drama, was John Hancock's wife.
It was in a house on the south side of Summer street, Boston, where this Dorothy Quincy was born May 10, 1747.
Her father was Judge Francis Quincy.
When little Dorothy was about 4 years old he removed his family from Boston to the ancestral home at Quincy (near the present High School). Here his five daughters grew up to womanhood.
It became known about that Judge Quincy's daughters were rarely beautiful, particularly the youngest, Dorothy.
The young men of highest social standing of Boston and Braintree paid court to them at the splendid old Quincy manor, one of the finest country houses of that time. Among these suitors, who afterward became famous,
were John Hancock, John Adams, Gen.
William Greenleaf and Samuel Sewall.
The latter two soon carried off the elder sisters, Sarah and Elizabeth.
John Hancock, 10 years older than Dorothy, fell in love with her when she was a mere slip of a girl of 12. But he bided his time, warding off other more youthful suitors, in his own masterful way. His father was only a poor minister, but his rich uncle in Boston, Thomas Hancock, adopted the sturdy,

level-headed John Hancock and made
the young man heir to his wealth.
About this time the ominous rum-blings of the revolution were heard. In the lurid light of that time beautiful Dorothy Quincy and sturdy John Hancock became dramatic figures. The young patriot had persuaded his fiancée to come to the protection of his Boston home, the famous old Hancock house, when her father, under suspicion by the British was compelled to flee from Quincy and take refuge in Lancaster.
John Hancock's Aunt Lydia became Dorothy's chaperon.

Then John Hancock himself fell under the ban. The windows of his Beacon street house were broken by the soldiers. Its fences were hewn and the house destroyed. Hancock, in obedience to public duty, made his way secretly to Concord early in April, 1775, to attend the meeting of the Provincial Congress. He had first arranged for his aunt to convey his precious treasure "Dorothy Q." to a safe retreat at the house of the Rev. Jonas Clark, John Hancock joined them there after the adjournment of the Congress on April 15.

Here the lovers imagined themselves to be in safety. On the evening of April 18 they had even been planning for their early wedding. That night, at 12
o'clock, came the clatter of horses'
hoofs down the street, and a loud
knocking at the door, arousing the
patriots for the next day's battle, hardly

to capture and forward in chains to England as traitors. So Hancock and Adams were hustled off in a coach-and-
four to Woburn. Dorothy and Aunt Lydia Hancock were left in the temporary care of Parson Clark.

Letter from the Capital.
Washington, Nov. 19, 1905.
It is evident from what President Roosevelt said to the shoe-maker delegation last week that he does not agree with the later General Hancock, that the tariff is a local question, however much it may vary in localities. Douglas, the shoe man and the Governor of Massachusetts was the chief spokesman of the delegation and he made an argument which was quite convincing urging that the duty be taken off hides in order that the 80,000,000 American citizens might walk on and in free shoe leaves. He said incidentally that seven cents was about the measure of profit in a pair of shoes to the manufacturer, and thus the removal of the tariff on leather will cheapen shoes to every wearer in the United States and enable manufacturers to

Through Cars.

That Quincy will enjoy through car service between City Square and Dudley street within a very few days there is no doubt. The exact date has not been set as yet, but it would be surprising if the new line went into effect on Dec. 1.

One of the Old Colony cars was run through to the Dudley street terminal one night this week to see if it would take the curves all right. From what can be learned the trip was very satisfactory although the cars would not take the loop on the elevated structure.

This, however, will not matter much as under the present schedule the Neponset bridge cars do not run onto the elevated structure but the line ends in an enclosed space beneath the L. which passengers reach by a flight of stairs. No transfer is required to take an L. train.

It was on account of the congested condition of the L. structure that it was found necessary to have the Neponset line end in an enclosed space.

Under the new schedule all lines of cars will end at City Square. That is the cars from Brockton, West Quincy and Weymouth Landing which now run through to Neponset, will end at City Square where close connection will be made with the through cars for Dudley street.

As has been before stated there will be a through car leave City Square every fifteen minutes, viz: 2, 17, 32, and 47 minutes past each hour. The cars which leave Quincy at 2 and 17 minutes past the hour will run via Wollaston, and the cars leaving at 32 and 47 minutes past the hour will run via Hancock street.

The car now leaving City Square at 30 minutes past the hour for Neponset via Norfolk Downs and leaving Neponset on the even hour for Quincy via Norfolk Downs will run on the new schedule.

This means that City Square will be a busy place, especially in the summer time, but it is more than probable that the Nantasket cars will run through to Neponset if not to Dudley street.

A Ghastly Case.

What appears to be a murder committed nearly two weeks ago and peculiarly ghastly in its details was discovered in Albany, N. Y., on Thursday, when the badly decomposed body of Mrs. John Hammond was found wedged in a trunk in a room of the house on South Ferry street where she lived with her husband. The trunk stood in the fireplace.

The body within was heavily sprinkled with chloride of lime, and the disfigurement was so thickly about the three rooms comprising the flat. The cover of the trunk was propped open with the evident idea of having the odors of decomposition escape up the chimney.

The woman was supposed to be wealthy, and her husband was the missing. She was married to Hammond about two years ago; and is 57 years old.

Pounds of Sweetness.

One hundred pounds or thereabouts of honey is the result of bees swarming in the house of Francis H. Corey at 32 South Central avenue. For some time Mr. Corey has noticed bees in his house disappearing behind the partition. He paid but little attention to it at first. Gradually, however, his interest became aroused until it reached a point of investigation.

Then the partition was taken down and the sight that met his eyes made his mouth water. Behind the partition was a quantity of honeycomb and with honey. Mr. Corey is possessed of a generous nature, and his neighbors have been regaling themselves with pure honey.

Concealed Weapons.

If heavy fines will break up the habit some men have of getting drunk and having loaded revolvers in their pockets at the same time, Judge Avery will accomplish something.

Nick Costo and Edward D. Gibbons were arrested Monday night by Officers Broberg and Lyons for drunkenness. When searched at the police station both had loaded revolvers in their pockets.

When the facts were made known to Judge Avery he is among the strictest in issued against them for carrying concealed weapons. He then fined them $6 each for drunkenness and $15 each for carrying concealed weapons.

Banquet.

Upwards of thirty members of the Quincy Associates No. 1, tendered Edward J. Sandberg, Representative elect a banquet in Johnson's hall, City square, Wednesday evening.

Caterer Philip W. Quincy had the tables arranged in a tempting manner, and at 8:30 all present sat down to one of the most appetizing spreads ever offered in Quincy.

CITY BRIEFS.

A very desirable half house is advertised to let. Chief of Police Burrell is confined to his home with pneumonia.

Commissioner Burke is filling up the holes on Hancock street. The municipal campaign has been awful quiet since the caucuses.

Mrs. W. G. Chubbuck is confined to her home on Foster street quite ill. A patent was issued this week to Charles J. Hedland of this city.

Miss Estelle Tirrell has accepted a position in one of the Boston stores. Miss Ethel Merritt of Elm place entertained the Dorcas society Monday evening.

The two houses on the corner of Elm and South Walnut streets are nearly completed. Charles G. Keiser of Hancock street has gone on a business trip to New Hampshire.

Mrs. A. W. Wilcher of Beacon street is the guest of friends at Brockton for a few days. By request the Quincy Women's club is to run a series of whist parties at the club house.

Returns from the shipping terminals for the month of October, show the amount of granite shipped from Quincy that month to have been 14,572,000 pounds, an increase of 2,572,908 pounds over the same month. The amount for each terminal was: West Quincy, 7,393,545 pounds; South Quincy, 7,178,455 pounds.

One of the important questions that will be submitted to the voters at the Municipal election is to see if the city will vote to accept the act which provides that the City Auditor shall be elected for a term of three years, giving him the same powers and duties as the City Auditor retired this year and will not accept a re-nomination, the question is an important one.

G. T. Coultis of Hancock court, who has resided in this city the past three years, moved with his family on Saturday to Brookline, N. Y., where he has accepted a position in a banking firm. They will be greatly missed by the many friends they have made while in this city and the lodges of which Mr. Coultis was a member will miss his help and always willing hand.

The old Dr. French house is fast disappearing. The tides are running very high just now overflowing the low lands and meadows.

The widening of Granite street in front of the new block makes quite an improvement. Miss Emma Hayden is expected home from Connecticut today, to spend the holidays.

Herbert Cobb, now in Uncle Sam's service on the battleship Illinois, is at home this week. The battleship Virginia made the same speed as the Rhode Island on her four-hour trial, -10.01 knots.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Titton are making their home for the present with their daughter at Quincy Neck. The public schools will have a few holidays next week, closing Wednesday noon for the balance of the week.

Miss Mary E. Dearborn, former principal of the Coddington school, is to spend the winter in California. The street sprinkling this week was very welcome as the dust was getting unbearable. A rain is much needed.

Harvard-Yale football game this afternoon at Cambridge. Over forty thousand people will witness the game. Work was commenced this week on the new Johnson & Brown stable on Washington street with the sewer.

The Quincy Assembly will be held Jan. 26. As the proceeds go to charity, it is hoped every one will take interest and make it a brilliant success. If Fletcher Miller left for New York Thursday with the Harvard cross country team. Miller has been awarded his H. A. A. for making the team.

Gilbert Halliwell and family of Wollaston have moved to California. Their former home on Bromfield street is now occupied by Mr. O'Connell from Houghs Neck.

George H. Brown of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. was elected on Wednesday a member of the executive committee of the Young Men's Christian Association of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

The dates for the annual assembly already set, January twenty-sixth being selected. It will be held as usual at Quincy Music hall and its long list of patronesses assures its success.

Mrs. John F. Welch will entertain the Friday club at her home on Hancock street, this afternoon of December first. The meeting will be in charge of Mrs. Zenas Arnold and Miss Edith Randall.

A social dance under the auspices of the Pine Tree club was held at Colonial hall Thursday evening. There was a large attendance of members and a good time was enjoyed.

The Concord High school scheduled to play Quincy High yesterday requested that the date be cancelled. That is the way several clubs this year when they learn the record of Quincy High.

Miss A. M. Gove, matron of the Quincy Day Nursery, won the prize offered by the Boston American for the best bill of fare for a Thanksgiving dinner. The menu was published in the edition of Friday, Nov. 17.

In the Harvard-Yale football game today two Braintree young men will battle against each other. John Cates of Cambridge, formerly of Braintree, is on the Yale team, and William Harrison is a Harvard heavyweight.

Mrs. Susanna E. Johnson of 2 Grotland street has issued invitations to the wedding reception of her daughter Annie and Mr. Frank P. Hill, for Wednesday evening, December the sixth, from eight until ten o'clock.

The annual masquerade of Loyal Ladies, always a great success, will be held Wednesday night of next week at Quincy Music hall. Mrs. Margaret Pierce is chairman of the committee of arrangements. Concert from 8 to 9, and dancing until 4 A. M.

The weekly whist tournaments under the auspices of the Granite City club, commenced Wednesday evening. Seven tables were in play. John Lennon had the highest prize with James H. Robinson a good second. Refreshments were served.

Look after your dog as dog thieves are about. The owner of a valuable dog caught a man walking off with his dog, the other day just in time to save it. When confronted the thief tried to tell a plausible story of finding the dog, looking for owner, etc.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Braintree, will hold a service Thanksgiving forenoon at Plymouth hall, Stone street. The service will begin at 10:15 o'clock, instead of the usual Sunday hour, in order to give those an opportunity to attend who may wish to reach home at an early hour.

SOUTH QUINCY.

South Quincy has a new industry. The plant of the company is located on Federal avenue, and the business is the manufacture of concrete shingles. It is estimated that the plant will be put out, and a house once shingled, is shingled for all time.

Miss Angie Harris of 32 Brooks avenue underwent a surgical operation last week Wednesday at the Quincy hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thaxter of Quincy street, have taken rooms in Boston, for the winter.

Papers have been filed with the Registrars of Voters nominating John A. Hayes and John B. Sutherland as Democratic Citizens' candidates for Councilman from Ward Three. Miss Esther D. McDonald, Woodward 04, is assisting at the Adams school.

The Tubular Rivet and Stud Company is excavating for a large addition to its plant on Weston street, and the gravel is being used for the improvement of Weston, Wayland, Chester and other streets in the vicinity. Several new houses are being erected in this neighborhood.

Teams number 1 and 3 of the league formed among the employees at the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co. bowled Monday night at the Norfolk Downs alleys. Team 3 was vanquished to the tune of 1210 to 1180.

The Ladies of the Missionary Society of the Park and Downs church have every reason to feel proud at the result of their combined efforts. It was a case of a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull together, and three hundred dollars, the net profits of the fair, is the prize they captured.

The fair was held Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week, and a delightful entertainment was offered at the tenting bill for patronage for each evening. On Wednesday evening the Potter orchestra discoursed charming music, and on Thursday evening a clever and original play from the pen of the talented president of the society, Mrs. Northrup, was presented and many local hits were much appreciated.

It would require a judge of rare discrimination to decide which one of the booths was most attractive. The Christmas booth, containing fancy articles, occupied the center of the hall, and was in charge of Mrs. William Mathews, assisted by Mrs. William Mathews, Mrs. William Klengenberg and Miss Musas. The decorations were white—a snow effect, glittering with frost and icicles.

At the right of the Christmas booth a tempting bill for patronage for each evening. On Wednesday evening the Potter orchestra discoursed charming music, and on Thursday evening a clever and original play from the pen of the talented president of the society, Mrs. Northrup, was presented and many local hits were much appreciated.

Next the preserve table—it would make one's mouth water to look at it—the colors were red and green and the goodies found a ready sale displayed by Mrs. Milberry, Mrs. Ewen and Mrs. Shay.

At the left was the apron table dainty in blue and white, with aprons of every description, from embroidered trifles to the plain, substantial article for the kitchen. This booth was in charge of Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Green.

Near at hand was the soap booth resplendent in yellow and white most ably looked after by Miss Tobey and Mrs. Blake.

One of the largest and most attractive booths was the one devoted to the sale of groceries. Red and white were the decorations and it would have been a most exacting housewife that could not have found something here to interest her. Crackers of all kinds and all sizes, and flavors, canned goods, appetizing Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners were suggested by the good things on every hand and their respective merits were extolled by Mrs. T. C. Gram and her worthy assistants, Mrs. Sanford and Mrs. Moore.

If space would permit we could tell of many an amusing incident that occurred at the Mystery table in charge of Mrs. MacDonald, and the fun and surprises evolved from the grab bag in charge of Mrs. Keith.

Possibly there was no more alluring place in the hall nor one that received more patronage than the lunch-room, beautifully decorated in green and white. The table was presided over by Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Chute. Their cakes, pies and salads found a ready sale.

Incidental to the festivities of Thursday evening was a pleasant surprise when the pastor, Mr. Megathin was presented with a beautiful quilt, the names of the donors—all the members of his parish—were embroidered on the various squares.

The fair was an unequalled success. There was a large gathering of members of the Manet club and their friends at Colonial hall Wednesday evening for the concert given in the series of entertainments by the club. Miss Isabelle J. Bill arranged the concert, having entire charge of the program, and secured the most successful results.

The concert opened and closed with singing by the Mozart quartet, composed of B. F. Newton, J. H. Mahor, C. F. Mahan and J. R. McLeod. Their singing was much enjoyed, the selections being pleasing and the voices blending harmoniously.

One of the best numbers was the soprano solo by Miss Elsie R. Litchfield of Weymouth, accompanied on the piano by Wendell H. Luce. Miss Litchfield has a pleasing voice, of good timbre and good delivery.

No concert is complete without a reader and Miss Georgiana B. Cary gave several readings, responding each time to encores.

Miss Sarah K. Douglass of Brookline gave a group of songs, her selections being well chosen for her clear soprano voice, and an encore was responded to. Although Mr. Ramseyer's cello solo, "The Lost Chord," was heartily enjoyed, he could not be prevailed upon to give another selection.

Among the most enjoyed songs on the program was the group of songs by Mr. J. H. Mahan. Many are familiar with his singing as he has until recently been tenor in the quartet at First church. His selections were pleasing and the applause most appreciative.

WOLLASTON.

Friends of Richard Freeman of Wollaston will be glad to know that he is recovering from an operation for appendicitis which was successfully performed at the Quincy hospital. He hopes to return to his studies at Harvard in a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Wilson, Ruby Andrews, who are making their home at 191 Fayette street, Wollaston, will be at home to their friends after December first.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Bainbridge (Marion Nickerson) are receiving their friends after December first at 78 Lincoln avenue, Wollaston. Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Lester Woods (Edna Polson) who were married early in September, are at home to their friends after December first at 1122 Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

As a result of an examination in drill at Technology Carl W. Gram and Francis H. Bishop both of Wollaston were sergeants' stripes on their uniforms. Mr. and Mrs. William O. Wellington (Bertha Jameson) of 111 Prospect avenue, Wollaston, are receiving congratulations, a little daughter being welcomed at their home Tuesday night, November twenty-first.

A number of their friends were most delightfully entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Eliza B. Bird at their pleasant home on Beach street, Wollaston, Monday evening. The Little Women's club of Wollaston Des Moines at the Congregational vestry, Saturday, December 2, at 3 o'clock.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held November 30, at five o'clock in the Wollaston Congregational church. The Adelphe Male quartet of Boston, twenty-first.

Rev. George W. Cutler of Neponset conducted the Sunday morning service at the Wollaston Unitarian church. The Rev. Hunt occupied the pulpit at Rev. Mr. Cutler's church.

The Child Natures club met with Mrs. George H. Page 17 Park street, Wednesday evening at 7:45 o'clock. Mrs. Margaret J. Stannard spoke on "Home and the child."

Allan McKinlay, a former resident of Quincy, died Sunday at the Hoffman house, Boston. He was a member of John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F., and Hadesanese tribe of 33rd Men of Wollaston. He was 38 years of age and leaves a widow.

A very enjoyable and well patronized subscription dance was held in Wollaston on Saturday evening by Herbert Percival. Young people from Wollaston, Quincy and Atlantic were present. Miss Clara Thayer and Mrs. Merrill were the matrons.

The regular meeting of the Wollaston Young People's Religious Union was held Sunday evening in the Unitarian vestry. Prof. Park was to have spoken on "A visit to a Negro church," but was unable to be present. Mrs. Park spoke on this subject and as she spoke from personal reminiscence, greatly interested her audience.

The Junior Frigid club goes to Wollaston on Monday afternoon to meet with Mrs. Jesse I. Littlefield of Brook street, hostess for the afternoon. The literary program will be in charge of Miss Edna M. Prescott, the subject being the Philadelphia period in American literature. Benjamin Franklin and Charles Brockden Brown.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Gilbert Rhodes, No. 9 Old Colony avenue, next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Reports from National Convention.

W. H. F. Brown, buyer for Jordan Marsh & Co., has gone to England on a business trip. Mr. and Mrs. Delano of Arlington street have moved to Beverly.

It is rumored that one of Wollaston's well known young men, who became a hoodlum, has taken the house on Arlington street recently vacated by the Delanos.

After the auction sale V. E. Miller's store at Wollaston was cleared of all goods and is in the hands of workmen, who are renovating it as fast as possible.

Mrs. C. Nelson Smith and little daughter of New Rochelle are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Sprague of Park street.

Special mention of the life of the late Henry Faxon was made by Rev. E. D. Webster in his sermon last Sunday morning in the Wollaston Baptist church.

At the whist party given by the committee of the Improved order of Red Men in I. O. O. F. hall, Wollaston, Tuesday evening, twenty-five couples were in play. The successful winners were: Mrs. Charles Bean, Mrs. C. Loner, Miss M. Lizzie Farnall, Mr. L. W. Taylor, Mrs. Lizzie Thomas, Mr. James Thomas, Mrs. James Thomas, Mr. Murray McLeod, Mrs. E. Waterhouse and Mr. R. B. Holmes.

The Junior Endeavor society of the Wollaston Baptist church had a social gathering on Wednesday evening. Games were enjoyed, followed by ice cream and cake.

On Monday the Social and Benevolent society of the Wollaston Baptist church held an all day sewing meeting. Bunker lunch was enjoyed at noon. All the ladies worked enthusiastically and a well filled barrel was ready to be sent to the Soldiers' Relief in Boston.

Rev. T. T. Kemp delighted a very large and enthusiastic audience in the Wollaston Baptist church on Tuesday evening with his illustrated lecture on "Evangelism." A historical and geographical sketch of Acadia illustrated by a few views made so true to life by the stereopticon, that the American people. The question is, will the McCurdy, McCallis and their satellites have to pay the penalty for their sins of commission and omission, or will they be whitewashed?

QUINCY POINT AND NECK.

The voters of Ward Two will have five names from which to select three Councilmen from Ward. There are no good reasons why Eugene R. Stone and William F. Sidlinger should not be retained, and there are good reasons why they should. Both have given faithful and honest service, and the fact that so many Councilmen have declined a re-nomination makes it necessary to select all who are willing to serve.

Frank Hobart is confined to his home on Mill street by sickness. The Dashing Waves club met on Friday, Nov. 17, at Fred Spencer's, Winter street, Quincy Neck, to celebrate the president's birthday. Those present were Messrs. Lapham, E. Hayden, Jr., Mead, Kelly, Sampson, Delaney, Newcomb, C. Hayden, Tucker and Spencer. A turkey supper was served. Mr. Spencer was presented with a shaving cabinet and an original poem was read.

Mrs. Ellen Pitts has charge of the new restaurant in the Thayer block on Washington street. Papers have been filed nominating Daniel Higgins as Citizens' candidate for councilman from Ward Two. The contest at Quincy Point for Ward Councilmen promises to be quite lively.

Rumor has it that a quiet wedding will take place at Quincy Neck this evening. The Rhode Island house on East Hancock street is being repaired.

The U. S. cruiser Des Moines built at Quincy arrived on Thursday at Gaumtannam. Chester Wood of this city has accepted a position in the electrical department at the Fore River Ship-building company.

On Saturday 6 o'clock, Thursday night, a volume of smoke was seen issuing from the battleship Rhode Island at the Fore River shipyard. The yard fire department was quickly assembled, but it was with some difficulty that the fire was hushed. It was finally traced to the machine shop. A stream of water was turned on, and the flames were soon extinguished. It was found that the leather belting of the machinery, which was about all there was inflammable had been burned. Some of the water, however, worked into the engine room. It is thought that the fire started from a lighted candle left by one of the workmen. The damage was not large.

The alarm from Box 75 at 10:35 on Friday called the department to a brisk brush fire on South street, on land of the Higgin estate now owned by Julius Johnson. The fire burned over considerable territory. There was a high wind and burning embers set fire to T. J. Collins. Some of the shingles were burnt off but the fire was extinguished before any great damage had been done.

MILTON.

A special harvest service will be held at the Mission of Our Saviour church on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The fire department was called out Sunday afternoon and again on Wednesday noon for grass fires.

Mrs. Charles Thompson will entertain the ladies afternoon whist club next Monday. Miss Betty of New York is the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. W. Clark of Eaton street.

A private dancing party was held at Ellsworth hall Wednesday evening by the Viceroy's Ocular club. The matrons were Mrs. John Connell and Mrs. John McKay.

E. J. Tinker has gone to Vermont on a business trip. A cake and candy sale was held by the ladies' society of the East Milton Congregational church Wednesday afternoon and evening at the church. There was a pleasing entertainment in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George House, of Canada, are the guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Tinker. Nat C. Goodwin is the guest of his mother during his present Boston engagement.

Miss Mattie Rittner and Miss Annie Pollister of Bangor, Me., have been the guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bearse.

There was a very large attendance at the East Milton Congregational church, last Saturday evening, at the reception given by the church to Rev. Edward Anderson. Reverend, or Colonel, as he is familiarly called, was assisted in receiving by his daughter, Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth. The affair proved to be a very enjoyable one to all present.

Milton has an unusually large representation on the staff of Governor-elect Guild, viz: Lieut. Col. Samuel D. Parker and Lieut. Col. Roger Wolcott as assistant inspectors general.

Postmaster George A. Hibbard of Boston made two promotions Nov. 17. F. S. Childs, superintendent of the Milton postoffice for several years, has been advanced to the position of assistant superintendent of the money order division at the central station, and Pierce Maloney, chief clerk at the Dorchester central station, has been promoted as superintendent at the Milton postoffice.

Mr. Ernest Edward Wild of Newton, Mass., and Miss Katharine McPherson of this city were united in marriage by Rev. W. B. Barr at the home of Mr. Angus McDonald on Granite street, Wednesday evening at six o'clock.

The best man was Mr. Malcolm McPherson of Matapan, a brother of the bride, and Mrs. Malcolm McPherson was bridesmaid.

The bride and groom will make their home at Newton. Mr. and Mrs. Wild have the congratulations of their many friends.

The display of beautiful electric and gas table lamps by McKenney & Wadsworth Co., No. 181 Franklin, on Congress street, Boston, is one all should see. It includes most beautiful effects to meet all decorations, especially the art shade effects. It is without doubt the largest display in the United States.

ATLANTIC.

Tuesday a regular meeting of the Social Science and Literary Club was held at Mrs. A. L. Thompson's home, 11 Squantum street. Mrs. George Wilcox read a very interesting paper on "Chinese Immigration," followed by discussion. At the club meeting Nov. 7 "Municipal Ownership" was discussed, and proved very interesting. The study of "Hamlet" was conducted by Mrs. Thompson.

If practice makes perfect, the Athletics of Atlantic will be able to beat any football team in the vicinity of Boston. The report of contesting eleven is that the Athletics play a strong, fair game and are made up of excellent material for success in this line of sport.

The Newell and Sowning construction company show no quarter in the use of Atlantic streets for the parade of loaded teams bearing flag and creating it, but stalwart Dennis O'Neil keeps up with the procession with a steam roller, thereby reducing the ravage to the minimum. Through his efforts, something is reserved for the citizens of Quincy after the Park Commission has taken its bite from local possessions.

The Italian colony which works on the boulevard, as introduced into Atlantic, does not add to the looks of the town for all it has increased the population. For all our democratic spirit does not foster suspicion of foreigners, the fact remains that lonely walks, such as an element about lose favor for this reason.

The enviable comradeship between a certain young miss of Atlantic and her brother deserves public mention. Their love of sport and out-door life, their interest in school and above all their close friendship for each other, stand well by an example for every boy and girl to follow. A brother's or a sister's love is a dear haven of refuge in these days and cannot be too highly valued even in days of extreme youth.

Agent Arthur Parker has noted increased receipts at the Atlantic station for some time. October, however, proved to be the banner month, for the receipts exceeded in amount any previous month at that station.

The three Republican candidates for the City Council from Ward Six have issued an appeal to the voters to stand by them because they are Republicans. Politics are very seldom mentioned in the City Council and it is the best men that are wanted as our representatives. If all three of the Republicans are the best men, then vote for them, but Councilman Lane of the present Council has a good record and should not be overlooked.

At the head of it, backs toward him,
a little group of boy crickets gathered
round a case of athletic implements.
One was a baseball, and two were on crutches, and the little one clung tight to the hand of a tall girl who stood in their midst. They were pointing out everything of interest to her,
and she let them do it, as if she had never seen any of the things before, and she laughed blithely over their childish joys.

In spite of the surroundings, Chivers quickerened his steps as he heard the laugh and saw the girl's gold-brown head rising out of the little clump of boys. She was his friend, and he came up the broad low steps she leaned to catch some question, and Chivers was at her side when she raised her head again. She smiled at him and gave him her hand in welcome.

"Where did you get them?" he asked, tactfully.
"It's Crippled Home day," explained the girl, "and I just happened to be here, and these boys were waiting for some one to take them around, so I did it. They haven't enough attendants, you know."

"See," said Chivers, in awe. "And have you time to talk to me a little while?" he asked.
"Not just now," said the girl, "but if you will wait until the boys and I have gone around the hall, why, then,
Chivers, you may take me home."

Chivers said he would, and the girl started off. Then she beckoned to him.
"Chivers, will you do something for me?"
The little boy is so small that the people crush him, and he can't see a doll. Not a doll!" she repeated. "I have tried to lift him, but he is too heavy for me. And it's his first frolic this year, and I want to know if you won't carry him around the hall for me."

Chivers gave a cowardly recoil, and gazed a little with fright.
"Please do, Chivers," said the girl.
"I'd rather ask you than anyone else."
Her eyes were shining, and in her eagerness she put out her hand and touched his arm.

Chivers looked for an instant at his new gloves and thought—never mind what he thought. He looked at the girl and squared his shoulders, and said yes, as she knew he would.
Chivers was a gentleman. But he took off his gloves.

"You'll come too, won't you?" he asked of the girl, as they made their way through the crowd. "Just to talk to the little fellow, you know," he added waiting for her reply with unconcealed anxiety.

The girl turned round toward him
and laughed. "Oh yes!" she answered.
"It was cruel enough to ask you to carry the baby. I wouldn't be quite so heartless as to leave you all alone with him in this crowd."

Chivers smiled, but he was heartily grateful. It was not half such martyrdom when she was going to share it.
"See," said the girl, when they had pushed their way through to the corner
where the little lad was patiently waiting for them. "Wouldn't you like to sit on the shoulder of this great big man, and be taller than anybody else in the room, and see everything that is here?"

Chivers prayed for a refusal, but in vain. The child considered her proposition seriously for a moment and gave Chivers a judicial survey. "Yes," he
said finally, and held out his arms.
With set teeth, Chivers braced himself
for the strain. The girl took up the two tiny crutches and led the way.
People gave place instinctively for the little procession.

"They visited the Indian dolls and the baby dolls, then they stopped before an enchanting cotton-bat scene where

Poetry.
Life's Average.
I never talk Philosophy Life pessimists, an' such,
Who try to make a fellow think
That life ain't nothin' much.
I guess there never was a spot
Where shoulders didn't fall;
Dat shadler's just the other side
O' sunshine, after all.
An' there ain't no use in fumi-
When the world seems out o' gear,
Fer music's always in the air.
An' 'fore an' 'sone an' cheer.
Just keep a fellow's spirits up,
An' kinder make him glad;
An' come what will, he's bound to think
Life ain't so awful sad.
Sometimes a fellow has ter weep,
Sometimes he has ter laugh,
The shadders an' the sunshine mix,
Jest kinder half an' half.

Miscellany.
MISS LADY.
Chivers was awfully bored. And the other fellow was a cad because he did not see it. Not to be able to walk unmolested up Broad street on a crisp December afternoon! Another square of this would kill him. For the sake of escape, Chivers would—he wondered what he would do.

A gay poster flashed a sudden bright idea into his head, and Chivers turned into Horticultural hall with quite a sensible relief.

"So long, old man," he said, almost joyfully. "I'm due here."
The other fellow went plodding up the street. "I wonder," he said to himself, "why Chivers is due at a doll show?"

If Chivers had realized what his escape from the frying-pan meant, it is doubtful whether he would have made this move of his. For there were never dolls without children, and Chivers's betel noire was a child. He had really come dangerously near losing some of his best friends because he had staid away from their houses for months after knowing that he might meet a child there.

Fortunately none of the genus were in the lower hall, and Chivers sauntered in unsuspectingly, and tossed his money to the doorkeeper.

"Just to see who's here," he reflected. "The Willingdons are sure to be here, and the Appletons, and perhaps—" He did not finish the sentence even to himself, but started up the broad staircase.

At the head of it, backs toward him,
a little group of boy crickets gathered
round a case of athletic implements.

Chivers a judicial survey. "Yes," he
said finally, and held out his arms.
With set teeth, Chivers braced himself
for the strain. The girl took up the two tiny crutches and led the way.
People gave place instinctively for the
little procession.

"They visited the Indian dolls and the baby dolls, then they stopped before an enchanting cotton-bat scene where

Canadian puppets were sleighing and tobogganing and snowballing in bewildering succession.
"You'll like this, I know," she said
to the boy.

He smiled at her gratefully, and leaned over Chivers's back. "Miss Lady," he said, and held out something in his little closed fist. The girl reached up, and he dropped a warm penny into her hand. "Please buy some feng for me will it," he whispered. "Wight now."

The girl chattered for an answer, and saw the girl go quickly over to the candy-counter. Then he devoted himself to blissful absorption of the things before him.

Chivers had not heard the quick little whisper nor seen his answer. But he thought, after a while, that things were remotely kind around him, and he looked to the girl to see why. She was not at his right, nor on the other side.
Great heavens! she was not there at all!
She had left him alone, absolutely alone,
with a child!

Chivers looked about him helplessly, and with the least bit of a vision of light in his eye. That girl just wanted to put him in a ridiculous position and leave him stranded with the crippled thing in his arms! For one wild moment he debated dumping his burden to the floor and making a clean bolt of it.
Thoughts of people thronging in and would look after the little chap. Then he did not dare put the child down, because it could not stand alone, and its crutches of course had gone with the dolls, and, for pity's sake, what else could he find in common to talk about to this broken baby? His arms were getting tired too. The situation was growing desperate.

"I say," he suggested desperately to the boy on his shoulder, "have you seen one of these things yet?"
The child clasped his hands, a little tighter around Chivers's neck and gave a wisp of delight.

"Oh, no!" he said, wrenching his eyes for one minute away from the doll beauties. "There are lots of fings yet, very lots of them. We didn't see ve talking dolls, nor ve-some-thing, but Miss Lady called them, nor ve football game, and vat will be vester, don't you tink?"

He leaned down so that he could scan Chivers's face with his big brown eyes, and he caught a glimpse of Chivers's face. "Are you very tired of lifting me?" he asked politely, in a plaintive little voice that went straight to Chivers's heart.

"Not at all, sir," was the cheerful assurance that person hastened to give.
"You needn't get down until you have seen everything you want. But—er—you wouldn't mind climbing over to my other shoulder, would you?" Chivers lifted him gently with his big strong hands and moved him across. Then, a good deal ashamed of himself, he faced about and followed the choice of the boy's pointing finger.

When the girl came back she found them laughing together like life-long friends. Chivers greeted her very un-graciously. He had forgotten how he had been longing for her in his agony of ten minutes before.

"Oh, you're not needed at all," he said, in the scorn. "I'm an excellent nurse. And we have been all round
now. Pray don't stay on my account!"
The child turned and smiled at her.
She seemed not to realize the seriousness of her misdeed. Her hands were full.

"Put him down, Chivers, why don't you?" she said, "if you have seen everything. I have some candies for him."

Chivers lowered his load doubtfully upon the child's stout rear, and he gave her the burden into the child's lap.
"And here is your change," she said,
pressing the penny back into his hand.
"The boy looked up aggrieved. 'You didn't get anything my money?' he said, in disappointment. 'I wanted you, Miss Lady, something of my very own.' His lip trembled."

Chivers shrugged his shoulders.
"The greed of a child!" he muttered.
"It isn't," Chivers, protested the girl, quietly. "he only wants to feel that he has the right of ownership over something." She slipped away to buy another sugar animal, and brought it back in triumph to the child.

His face lit up with perfect satisfaction as he clasped the beast tight and his cheeks glowed.

Chivers staid by the chair a moment longer while the girl went to speak to one of the attendants.

She came back with her soft furs all about her face. "I must go now," she said, bending down, "and don't forget you are to come to see me, if Miss Harrison will bring you."

The woman behind her nodded assent to the child.

He put up his arms very gently around the girl's neck; he was almost afraid to touch her.

"Good-by, Miss Lady," he said.
"Good-by, sir," said Chivers, shaking his hand heartily as man to man. He added, mysteriously, "That was awfully good of you, you know, that last thing."

Then he ran down after the girl.
They were both silent as they came out into the stinging cold and the glow of the brightly lit great-lamps.

The girl glanced up expectantly after a few moments. "Well?" she said.

"I think," responded Chivers, thoughtfully, "that I am very much obliged to you, Miss Lady. And, by-the-way," he added, "I'll take back what I said about the child's greed."

He produced his coat pocket and brought out a sticky object in a piece of paper. "The boy gave it to me," he said.

"Why, Chivers?" she exclaimed, with a soft laugh. "And it was his right of ownership?"

"Yes," said Chivers, thoughtfully.
"What the Dickens shall I do with it?"
He held it gingerly in his fingers.

The girl laughed at his dilemma, but caught his arm as he aimed at a little snow-bank. "Don't throw it away, Chivers," she said. "Give me your
right of ownership."

"Elizabeth," he answered, quite gravely, "it is yours already, you know. Do you really mean you will accept it?"

For answer the girl stretched out her hand. "Nancy Vincent McCalland.

The Adams House on Adams Street, Quincy.

The above illustration gives our readers a very good idea of the old Vassall house in Quincy, which was bought by John Adams in 1785. From its doors have gone forth succeeding generations of the Adams family, which for more than a century held commanding positions in national affairs. In its parlor were celebrated the golden weddings of three famous members of that family.
In its living room is a paneled of mahogany of great rarity and unusual historic associations. The house is not open to the public, but the following interesting description of the same we copy from the Boston Globe:

In several respects this charming old house in Quincy is the most remarkable in the United States, for it was the home of two Presidents from the same family, a distinction no other house can claim; while under its roof there have lived succeeding generations of that family, which has the unique distinction of having had one or more representatives in commanding positions in national affairs longer than any other family in America.

Cars to Dudley Street.

The long looked for Through Trolley Service between Quincy and Boston now is a reality.

The first through car of the Old Colony Street Railway Company left City Square, Quincy, at 6:02 A. M., today (Saturday) for the Dudley Street Terminal of the Elevated, the running time being fifty minutes. Cars run every 15 minutes, leaving City Square at 2 and 32 minutes past the hour via Wollaston, and 17 and 47 past the hour via Hancock Street. Cars leaving Dudley Street at 2 and 32 minutes past the hour run via Wollaston, while those leaving 17 and 47 minutes past the hour run via Hancock Street.

Quincy will be more of a street railway center than ever, all lines of cars making their terminus there, where good connections will be made to all points along the South Shore. By the new arrangement, long waits or delays will be avoided, and thus do much towards popularizing this line.

City Election.

Next Tuesday is the date for the annual municipal election. Never before has Quincy had so quiet an election.

The work of the City Council will be dependent upon to vote, and the total vote will be about as large as usual, excepting only the phenomenal vote of last year influenced some by the Presidential election.

There are three candidates for Mayor, Hon. James Thompson, Republican, who has been renominated; ex-Councilman George H. Wilson, Democratic, who was a strong candidate in 1902 and 1903 against Hon. Charles M. Bryant; and William J. Whitling, Socialist.

Since the big majority obtained by Mayor Thompson in the Republican caucus it seems to be the general opinion that his honor will be reelected by a large majority; but Candidate Wilson has come out squarely for municipal ownership of lighting plants which is expected to help him some.

All three parties—Republican, Democratic and Socialist—have nominated full tickets of five for Councilmen at large, but the chances are good as in recent years for the election of all the Republicans, four of whom are members of the present Council.

There is a contest this year for one member of the School Committee at large, both parties having nominated new men. Arthur W. Newcomb, the Republican, is an ex-Councilman and several years of service. Dr. John H. Ash, the Democrat, is an ex-member of the School Committee, but has never been elected at large.

Wards Four and Six have contests for School Committee from ward, and all the wards except Wollaston have contests for Ward Councilmen.

There are two questions upon which a yes and no vote will be taken, but if a big NO is recorded on both, no mistake will be made in assuming that the policy of Quincy, and also annual elections. It would be contrary to the City Charter to elect a City Auditor for more than one year.

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is a day of family gatherings, and was not forgotten at the public institutions of the city.

Feasts were served and there were home-like gatherings.

AT THE CHURCHES.

Religious services were held on the holiday in five of the churches of Quincy, including Christ church, Bethany Congregational, the United Presbyterian, St. Mary's and the Wollaston Congregational, the last mentioned being a union service of the Wollaston churches.

CITY HOSPITAL.

While it was not possible to serve turkey to all the patients at the City Hospital, everything possible was done to make the holiday a pleasant one for those who by illness were not able to enjoy the day at their own homes.

Many of the patients received visitors during the day.

QUINCY HOME.

Turkey with everything that goes to make an ideal dinner was served to the inmates at the Quincy Home. Only the necessary work was done and the day was made one of good cheer to all.

SAILORS HOME.

Thanksgiving at the National Sailors Home was passed in the usual manner. At noon time an old fashioned dinner consisting of turkey all the fixings was served.

AT Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. building was a popular place for the young men on the holiday. The association kept open house, and several members entertained guests.

SNUG HARBOR.

The sailors at Snug Harbor were treated to an old fashioned dinner Thanksgiving noon, which included turkey, vegetables, pudding and pie.

After dinner the old sailors gathered in the smoking room and told stories of the times when they sailed on the briny ocean.

AT DEDHAM JAIL.

Samuel H. Capen, sheriff at the Norfolk County jail and house of correction, treated the inmates of that institution to a Thanksgiving dinner, with about thirty turkeys, a variety of vegetables, mince pie and other pastry.

The dinner was enjoyed by ninety-six men and six women. After the dinner, yard liberty was given.

Roast Pig.

A roast pig supper was the feature of the night before the holiday at the Granite City club. The little squelcher was furnished by President Jones and was done to the Queen's taste.

During the first part of the evening the weekly whist tournament was held. Before this was through the well browned pig arrived and its arrival nearly broke up the game.

Dr. Jones held the little follow on the improvised operating table and went to work to cut him up. By the time the operation was completed, the whist tournament was over and all hands got busy with the pig and other good things for the inner man that had been prepared by Steward and George W. Prescott.

Cold Holiday.

The Thanksgiving temperature was on a toboggan and went down rapidly. At 6 A. M. it was 30; at 9 A. M. it was 25; at 12 noon it was 20; at 3 P. M. it was 15; at 6 P. M. it was 10; at 9 P. M. it was 5; at 11 P. M. it was 0; and at midnight it was at 15, and it was but little colder at sunrise.

It was the coldest November 30 for ten years but not the coldest November day Quincy had colder November days in 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898 and 1899.

The Thanksgiving holidays of the public school children began earlier than scheduled, no-school signal being given at 7:30 A. M. Wednesday. It was the first time since the summer vacation that the no-school signal has been given, an unusual record for pleasant weather. No school until Monday.

Over two hundred enjoyed the dance Nov. 24 at Faxon hall, the first in the series of entertainments in the First Church Social club course. Music was by Daggett and dancing was enjoyed until eleven. Young people were present from Quincy, Wollaston and vicinity. Was very pretty party.

The freshmen of Amherst college held their class banquet at Young's hotel, Boston, Monday evening. Quincy was represented by Alden H. Blanchard. He and his brother Cecil, who is a sophomore at Amherst college, were the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Blanchard of Presidents hill.

The Brotherhood of Bethany church are holding frequent rehearsals for the mock session of the City Council to be held Wednesday evening, Dec. 13. Subjects which have agitated the Quincy Council and many others they have not dared to tackle will be touched upon and an effort will be made to show how business should be dispatched.

The through street car service to Boston will give Quincy something that there has long been a demand for, namely a late car for Boston. Under the new time table that goes into effect next Saturday the last through car for Boston will leave Quincy square at 12 minutes of 12, and returning the last car for Quincy leaving the Dudley street terminal at 11:37 and Neponset at 12:07.

Capt. Henry J. Howes of East River street has been appointed superintendent of the Sailors' Snug Harbor at Quincy, and he will take possession the first of month. His family will accompany him, residing in a fine old house in connection with the home. It is a fine position and the captain is well qualified in every way to make the home for the old sailors attractive as well as successful.—Hyde Park Gazette.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Crane, who have lived for several years on Revere road have this week moved into their beautiful new home on Presidents hill. It is one of the most highly on the hill and Mr. and Mrs. Crane's friends wish them every happiness and comfort in their new abode.

A large number of applications for membership were received at a meeting of the Citizens Association, Wednesday evening, so that the association now has a membership of about 50. There was a general discussion on matters pertaining to the welfare of the Association and the city.

A ton of coal is a very acceptable present at this season, but two tons is a bonanza. This is the first prize offered by C. Patten & Son for the best estimate on the weight of a large lump of coal in their office window. One ton will be given as a second prize, and half a ton as a third prize.

William Nelson, 62 years of age, was assisting E. J. Sandberg yesterday in moving away a small L of the Dr. French house on Maple place, when he was knocked over and injured by a falling timber. He was taken to the hospital and ambulance to the City Hospital. The injuries were not serious.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Chase, who were married early in October, are at home to their friends on Wednesday street, December at 654 Washington street, South Braintree, where they have a very pleasant home. Mrs. Chase will be remembered in Quincy as Miss Jennie Holt, a favorite teacher at the Coddington school.

The holiday was saddened by the announcement of the death of Mrs. John Shaw of Goffe street. Her good comradeship, loving disposition and charity towards her many friends who sincerely mourn her loss and share in the sorrow of her husband, daughter and grandchildren, to whom sympathy is extended. She will be particularly missed by the ladies of First church where she has ever been a most faithful worker.

Nearly 150 couples attended the sunlit and evening party of Elmer W. Baker at Quincy hall on the holiday. It was a very pretty and enjoyable party. A young miss from Atlantic, a pupil of Mr. Baker, gave an exhibition of fancy dancing. Wilson's orchestra furnished music, which was very popular with the dancers. Several spectators were in the balcony.

The second attraction of the Y. M. C. A. entertainment course was given Wednesday evening by The Pierce society entertainers who presented a very pleasing and new program. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce are young and very attractive people, talented and highly versatile, and have the very best recommendations possible for their work in humorous orations and light drama.

The bare and bound run for boys by the Y. M. C. A. on the holiday, was participated in by 18 boys. The hares, Walker and Baker started at 10:14 the hounds nine minutes later. Walker returned at 10:51 followed 4 minutes later by Baker. Of the hounds Bakers, Talbot and Miller returned at 10:55 but had missed the trail. Therefore the first hounds to finish were Leathers, Harkins and Murray. The first hare gained two minutes over the hounds. The second hare took two minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart, a lawyer, has been appointed receiver of the Milford Pink Granite Quarries at Milford, Mass.

JOHN HALL.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Two Democratic Independents are making a contest in Ward Three against the three Republican candidates, John B. Sutherland and James A. Hayes.

Only one of the Republicans, William T. Spargo, is a candidate for reelection.

Messrs. William H. Deacon and George Turner being new candidates.

There was a pretty home wedding at 48 Brook road, South Quincy, Sunday evening when Mr. Evert Heikilla and Miss Sofia Riihola both of this city were united in wedlock by William M. Marden, Esq., in the presence of the friends of the young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Heikilla are well known members of the Finnish church of this city and will reside at 48 Brook road.

Duncan McLeannin is the happy possessor of the trombone formerly owned by James Copland, and Water street people will have music for awhile.

William T. Spargo, Esq., of New Paul Revere Post, A. R., has been confined to the house for several days. There will be a baptism service at the Calvary Baptist church on Sunday evening.

G. W. Tuttle has removed from Shaw avenue, to 225 Independence avenue, Quincy.

Mrs. Dawson of South street is visiting at her former home in Pittsburg, Pa.

WEST QUINCY.

Mr. Richard Williams of the S. S. Illinois, is enjoying a fifteen day vacation with his mother, Mrs. Sarah C. Williams of Cross street.

Owing to a hitch with the railroad, William Caselman has not yet built his spur track from Farnum avenue to the coal yard. At the present time the coal is unloaded from the cars to bins near the railroad track.

The stone arch bridge over the boulevard and under the tracks of the Grand branch, near the residence of E. H. Doble, is nearly completed.

Minister services for men are being held all this week at St. Mary's church. A very largely attended meeting under the auspices of the Ward Four rallying committee in the interest of the candidacy of Mayor Thompson was held Nov. 24 in the St. John Baptist hall on Greenleaf street.

Copeland started a March contest to show and plans were formulated to get out a big Thompson vote at the coming municipal election.

The No-Licence League has been very fortunate in getting Father E. C. Mitchell to speak at Music hall, as he is Faxon on the death of his father, and make the next issue of "Our Message" a Henry H. Adams memorial number.

The South Quincys football team was taken into camp Thursday morning on the Ward Four playground to the tune of 5 to 0.

The field was not in the best condition owing to the storm the night before. There were about forty guests, a good spread on the field. But for this the Copelands believe they would have won by a much larger score. There was a large crowd of spectators at the game.

Murchison-McLeod.

Thanksgiving night after the good old custom, Mr. Samuel A. Murchison and Miss Catherine McLeod were united in marriage at the home of Mr. Hugh Gillis, 40 Albertina street, by Rev. W. B. Barr.

The bridesmaid was Miss Margaret Murchison, a sister of the groom, and the best man was Mr. Simon Stewart, a nephew of the groom.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a white Persian lawn trimmed with lace, she wore a bridal veil, and carried a bouquet of white carnations.

The bridesmaid was dressed in white lawn trimmed with all over lace and carried a bouquet of pink.

After the ceremony a supper was served. There were about forty guests present from Boston, Cambridge, Milford, North Abington, Wollaston and the west.

Mr. and Mrs. Murchison received many beautiful ornamental and useful presents.

The supper was served on the second floor in their own apartments which are already furnished for housekeeping. These are two of our very popular young people and their numerous friends extend congratulations.

Slavin-Matheson.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. Bonum, 32 Broadway, Quincy Point, Wednesday evening at 7:30, when Mr. Frank Slavin was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Matheson by Rev. W. B. Barr.

The bridesmaid was Miss Bertha Ross of Lewiston, Maine, and best man, Mr. Daniel McLeod.

The bride looked very beautiful in a white lace and lace trimmed gown, with white satin and lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in white cashmere, also carried roses.

After the ceremony the bride and groom received congratulations and best wishes until late or rather, an early hour Thanksgiving morning.

At the end of the fourth dance the order came to unmask. Then came the surprises. The people you thought you knew turned out to be someone else, and those you were positively sure of, effect January 1, 1906. These appointments must be made from the civil service list. The names on the eligible list are as follows: George W. Leonard, Arthur W. Priest, Charles E. Anderson, William Carroll.

The number of men on duty will not be largely increased as arrangements made by the City Ordinances gives each fireman one day off in nine, or 52 days per year including the annual vacation. Two or three of the eighteen men will be off duty every day.

Four days to election!

NOTICE.

The business of Funeral Undertaker, for many years carried on in Quincy by the late John Hall, my father, will in the future be conducted by me.

While I know that I cannot fill the place in public esteem that a long life of faithful service has given him, I wish to say that I shall use my best endeavors to meet the requirements of all occasions that may arise, and I ask his friends and mine to believe that I shall not fail in an earnest effort to make good his loss.

I will add that the business is now thoroughly equipped in regard to the work, and in other respects I am fully qualified to give prompt and efficient attention.

JOHN HALL.

Quincy, Dec. 1.

64 p.w.

WOLLASTON.

Mrs. Frank W. Pratt of Hopedale, formerly of Wollaston, was the guest of Mr. E. G. Thayer of Willow street on Tuesday.

Many friends of Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of Arlington street, Wollaston, called at her home on Monday afternoon to meet her daughter, Mrs. C. Nelson Smith, Zettia Sprague, of New Rochelle, New York.

Mr. Erastus Osgood, whose card appears in this issue is a teacher on the piano, and a very enjoyable pianist. He was the soloist at the St. Paul School, Concord, N. H., and four years at St. Mary's school for girls in that city. Mr. Osgood is also an impersonator and monopolist of wide reputation. With his readings and music he can furnish a very enjoyable evening.

He is making Wollaston his home for the winter.

Thomas Broadbent and I. Heyer of Wollaston have received a patent for a trolley wheel.

A large number of Wollaston people were present at the Harvard-Yale football game on Saturday.

The men of Wollaston M. E. Church are going to have an oyster fry and stew at the church on December 14.

The annual meeting of Wollaston lodge of Masons will be held next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Florence W. Loring and Mr. Lawrence F. Loring of Willow street, spent Thanksgiving with relatives in Marlboro.

Miss Lizzie Linnell of Davis street, had for a guest on Thanksgiving a Simon's college friend, Miss Peters.

D. E. Little in class A and A. H. Latham in class B at the holiday tournament of the Wollaston golf club. The first round was also played for the Schurmer cup.

One of the prettiest dancing parties ever given in Wollaston, was held on Thanksgiving eve, in Wollaston hall. It was a very successful dance given by Mrs. Joseph W. Bartlett, Mrs. Charles R. Hendrie and Miss Mollie Gilbert Brown.

Notwithstanding the storm, about eighty people were present, including many friends from out of town. The hall was prettily decorated with evergreen and Japanese cherry blossoms.

Mrs. Frederic C. Allen of Abington and Mrs. Ralph Flinders of Brookline patronized the party. Excellent music was furnished by Weston's orchestra.

DOWNES AND PARK.

Charles T. Ewell and family of Hamden circle have moved to Westboro.

Miss Elvira Ewell, has been confined to her home at Norfolk Downs the past three weeks by sickness.

Word was received on Wednesday of the death of Augusta, Me., on Monday, Nov. 24, of Miss Helen G. Taylor, formerly of Wollaston.

After the death of Mr. Plummer Mrs. Plummer removed to Maine, where she has since made her home.

Masquerade.

One of the events of the season among South people in the annual masquerade ball of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor. It is sure to draw a large attendance and those who attend are assured of a grand good time.

Such was the case Wednesday evening. Just at the time when the merry-makers were about to start for the night, rain fell in torrents and for a time the rain fell in torrents. It is no wonder that the attendance, however, and a person at the hall would never have any idea, that it was stormy without, for within all was jolly.

The hall itself presented a very pretty appearance. Streamers of red, white and blue were suspended across the ceiling and along the walls, while on either side of the platform were two large National flags. Among the drapery were numerous Japanese lanterns which added greatly to the effect.

The merry-makers began to arrive early, and at 8 o'clock, the hour for the grand march to start, the hall was well filled. The larger part of those present were en-masque.

Almost every conceivable character was represented. There was the overgrown and awkward school boy, the trim little school girl, the sailor boy, circus clowns, girls in white, girls in blue, girls in red and girls in fancy and grotesque costumes. Among these were mingled gorgeous attired court knights, Johnnie Hamman, maids in college gowns, some maids with the red cross on their arms, his Stancie Majesty and scores of others representing the sublime and the ridiculous.

Of course Uncle Sam and Victoria were to be and to them fell the honor of leading the grand march which they led in great style. Following in the wake were upwards of seventy-five couples. This march was a feature of the evening. No attempt was made to execute any fancy figures, just plain marching. That however was enough. Then came the general dancing which continued until late or rather, an early hour Thanksgiving morning.

At the end of the fourth dance the order came to unmask. Then came the surprises. The people you thought you knew turned out to be someone else, and those you were positively sure of, effect January 1, 1906. These appointments must be made from the civil service list. The names on the eligible list are as follows: George W. Leonard, Arthur W. Priest, Charles E. Anderson, William Carroll.

The Rebekahs are planning for a large meeting on Thursday Dec. 7th, when a public supper will be given, new applications received and out of town visitors entertained.

Friday Club.

The Friday club met on December first with Mrs. John F. Welch of Hancock street instead of with Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, owing to her recent bereavement. The writings of Henry Thoreau and George Eliot were discussed with Mrs. Z. S. Arnold and Miss Edith Randall as the committee in charge of the program.

Daughters of the Revolution.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution held their December meeting on Monday afternoon December fourth, at three o'clock, at the birthplace of President John Adams. This will be the last meeting at the old house until spring, as the Chapter will meet at the homes of members during the cold weather.

Junior Friday Club.

A very enjoyable meeting of the Junior Friday club was held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jessie Litchfield, Brook street, Wollaston. Three of the members were missed, Miss Lillian May, Miss Emma C. and Miss Griswold, who are ill.

Hospital Aid Association.

The meeting of the Hospital Aid Association held Thursday the 23rd in the Women's clubhouse was largely attended. It was decided to have an entertainment during the Christmas season. Various plans were discussed and the matter was left in the hands of the officers. The president, Miss Joseph C. Morse of Goffe street, has invited all the members to an all day sewing bee and box lunch at her home on Thursday, December 29th. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance and that they will come as early as 10 A. M.

ALLIANCE.

The meeting on Monday afternoon in the parlor of First church of the Quincy branch of the National Alliance of Unitarian women, was one of the best of the season. Considerable business was transacted, followed by an especially interesting paper on "James Martineau and Modern Unitarianism" by Rev. Albert Leavenworth of Lynn. Mr. Leavenworth is an Englishman and had a personal acquaintance with Martineau, so that his paper proved most entertaining, being full of personal anecdotes. During the social half hour, chocolate and light refreshments were served.

NEIGHBORING WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Next Monday will be a home afternoon with the Milton Woman's club, the meeting being held in the parlors of the First Parish church, at the Centre.

The Ladies' Library association.

Rundolph is busy at work preparing to observe its golden anniversary this month. It is thought to be the oldest women's club in existence.

The New England Women's club.

The New England Women's club is to hold the first of this season's club suppers at their rooms on Clarendon street, Boston, on Monday December the fourth.

On Monday afternoon Rabbi Fleischer.

At the last meeting members were reminded of their responsibility in exterminating the gypsy and brown-tail moths and more earnest work urged. An appeal was also made to members to register, and vote for school committee, etc.

School Committee Meeting.

The School Committee at its regular meeting, Tuesday evening, voted to send a communication to the City Council, asking for a new school building at the Coddington, also to provide additional accommodations in the Lincoln district.

The committee has already called.

the attention of the City Council to the need of additional accommodations in the Lincoln district.

The resignation of Miss Florence J.

Davis of the Willard school was accepted. Miss Davis has accepted a position with the academy at Taunton.

Miss Ira M. Harden was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Davis.

Miss Laura B. Tolman was elected as master's assistant at the Quincy school. The financial statement to date is as follows:

	Aprio-	Expend-	Balance.
	1905.	1905.
Salaries,	$88,250.00	$79,003.72	$9,246.28
Supplies,	7,390.00	6,771.95	618.05
Books and	5,000.00	8,441.97	558.03
Fuel,	6,668.00	6,618.71	159.29
Transportation	1,000.00	923.20	76.80
Rent,	810.00	717.50	92.50
Electric School,	1,000.00	1,102.65	297.35
Totals,	$110,000.00	$104,111.70	$5,888.30

Church apportionment of $1,000.00.

The members present were Messrs. Churchill, Halliwell, Hunting, Miller, Porter and Smith.

Bert's Birthday at Y. M. C. A.

One of the faithful, constant and popular workers in the Quincy Y. M. C. A., was given a birthday party Tuesday evening at the Association building by a few of his many friends. Tables were spread for 14 and shortly after 10 the party sat down to a delightful repast.

City Election.

Municipal ownership did not "cut much of a figure" in the Municipal election in Quincy Tuesday. George H. Wilson who stood on that platform received an unusually small vote.

It was not upon that issue, however, that the election was fought, nor was it particularly a Republican triumph, but a grand victory for Mayor Thompson, who was a candidate for reelection.

The Majority vote was as follows:

THOMPSON, R.	2,822
WILSON, D.	1,178
WILLIAMS, S.	147
Blacks	67

The total vote was only 140 less than the big total of last year, but Mayor Thompson's vote is larger, and his plurality of 1614 is over fifty per cent larger than his phenomenal plurality of last year.

The Republican candidates at large for the City Council are all elected by handsome pluralities, having twice as many votes as Patrick W. Driscoll, the leading Democrat.

Two Councilmen from ward who were candidates for reelection were elected, W. F. Sidelinger, Republican in Ward Two, and B. A. McLean, Democrat in Ward Six, so that the City Council of 1906 will have only ten experienced members, viz: Messrs. Bass, Chase, Crane and Piper at large; Stone in Ward Two, Spargo in Ward Three, Flaherty in Ward Four, President Nichols and Mr. Polk in Ward Five, and Sawyer in Ward Six.

Ward One has an entirely new delegation, Messrs. Cannon, Gielotte and Gilson.

Arthur C. Beal of Ward Six is a new Councilman at large.

William T. Donovan and Hermann W. Gross are new Councilmen from Ward Two, and William H. Dacon and George Hunter Loon Ward Three.

Ward Four sends a new Democrat, Charles J. McGilvray, and by way of surprise sends L. Leonard Ferguson, a Republican.

Ward Five will initiate Wendell H. Hull and Ward Six send as new men Ralph W. Hobbs and John Moir.

The turn over in the School Committee could not be more complete. James H. Churchill at large and Dr. F. J. Peirce did not care to make a contest and both parties made nominations for both places. Arthur W. Newcomb, Republican, is elected at large by 734 plurality, and John A. Duggan, Democrat, wins by a close vote in Ward Six.

In Ward Four there was a surprise when James F. Burke was elected for election by Charles H. Owens, Republican.

LICENSE QUESTION.

The vote on the license was even more emphatic than ever, the figures being:

NO,	2957
YES,	557
Blacks,	394

MAYOR INTERVIEWED.

Mayor Thompson when interviewed by a representative of the Patriot, on Wednesday expressed himself as both gratified and flattered by the extraordinary plurality given him at the election yesterday. He feels that the work performed during the current year meets approval of the citizens and is an endorsement of the efforts of the administration to meet the needs of the city. For the ensuing year he promises, with the cooperation of the citizens, to further in every possible way what may be deemed by them necessary to advance the material interests that make for the progress of the city.

'H. H. Faxon Estate.

An estimate of the value of the property of the late Henry H. Faxon places the amount at $70,000, of which $70,000 is real estate and $30,000, personal estate. The real estate is almost wholly in the city of Quincy, but there is some in Chelsea, and some in Boston.

The will of Mr. Faxon was allowed by Judge Flint on Wednesday at a session of Norfolk County probate court held at Dedham. Henry M. Faxon, only son of the testator, was appointed executor and gave bonds for $50,000 without sureties.

The executor is given full authority to sell, assign, transfer and convey the whole or any part of the estate.

Membership Growing.

A regular meeting of the Citizens' Association was held Thursday evening in the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers' Association in the Adams building.

A number of applications for membership were received and acted upon. The membership of the Association is now 75 representing all parts of the city.

There was a general discussion on different topics pertaining to the welfare of the city.

The sub-committee has not as yet been appointed, but probably will be at a meeting to be held at the call of president at an early date.

Mrs. Rogers Executed.

Windsor, Vt., Dec. 8. Mrs. Mary Rogers was hanged in the State prison at 1:14 this afternoon for the murder of her husband Marcus Rogers, three years ago.

The hanging of Mrs. Rogers had been an incident of world-wide interest. Governor Bell has been deluged with petitions and counsel for the Rogers woman have used every means possible to have her sentence reversed but to no purpose.

In spite of all these protests Gov. Bell has stood firmly by his decision that the law must take its course.

Library Lawn.

The beautiful, green lawn at the Thomas Crane Public Library has received a black eye this week. The grass roots are to be infected and invigorated by a coat of barn manure. No doubt we shall see the benefit next summer of this good dressing, but it does seem too bad to see the coarse, nasty manure laying around for several months. There ought to be, and perhaps there is, a good fertilizer that could be used two or three times during the year, that would keep the lawn as green and beautiful as the manure.

Universalist Church.

A new choir has been engaged at the Universalist church, and sang for the first time last Sunday, giving excellent satisfaction. Next Sunday Dr. Perkins' subject is "Quo Vadis?" The discourse will be a summary of "Sur le Pierre Blanche." A recent book by Antoine France dealing with the industrial and religious future of man. To any one caring to know the trend of French thought on these subjects this discourse will be of great interest.

CITY BRIEFS.

Elections are over for this year.

Owen Trainer is seriously ill at his home on Coddingdon street by illness.

Mrs. Theodore Hardwick is confined to her home on Chestnut street by illness.

Miss Emma F. Hayden returned to her school in West Hartford, Connecticut, Monday.

Mrs. Julia Swan of North Abington, is the guest of Mrs. W. W. Ewell of Foster street.

Ex-Councilman H. M. Federhen Jr., was in town Monday, and was at City Hall in the evening.

Walter E. Lord of Washington street returned Saturday from a five weeks' concert trip through the southern states.

Ward One gave Mayor Thompson more votes than any other ward, but Ward Five gave him the largest plurality.

The conference of the older boys of the neighborhood, Y. M. C. A. at Quincy on Saturday was well attended and profitable.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stetson of School street entertained the Wednesday night whist club at their home this week.

Some guesses have already been recorded on that lump of coal in the office window of C. Patch & Son, which is said to weigh less than a ton.

The estate of the late William A. Hodges on Hancock street, at the corner of Revere road, has been sold by Charles H. Burgess to Fred B. Rice.

Rev. B. F. Eaton, of Medford, formerly of the Universalist church at Quincy, has been called by the Y. M. C. A. Memorial church at Dover, N. H., where he was once a pastor.

A grand bazaar is being held in the new $250,000 high school building at Newport, R. I., for the benefit of the teachers' retirement fund. Sept. 11, W. Lull is chairman of the finance committee.

A return game of base ball on skates between the Tubular River and Fore River teams was played at the Coliseum on Thursday night before a large audience. The game was a spirited one, and was won by Fore Rivers by a score of 11 to 5.

A number of the ladies of a whist club of which Mrs. W. W. Ewell is a member gave her a surprise call Saturday evening. There were a few hours of whist, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Ewell was remembered with a pleasing gift.

Rev. D. M. Wilson, a former pastor of the First church, assisted Rev. E. C. Butler on Saturday at the funeral of Mrs. John Shaw of Presidents hill, which was largely attended by friends. The interment was at Mt. Wollaston.

Miss Julia E. Underwood attended on Dec. 1, the reunion of the Herald Educational Association, composed of teachers who won in the contest and took the trip to the World's Fair at Portland. Once more she appeared in a group picture in the front row.

At the session of probate court for Norfolk county at Dedham on Wednesday, the wills of Henry H. Faxon, Mary Crane and Hannah Ford of Quincy, and Clara Stoddard and Margaret Maher of Weymouth, were allowed. Administration was granted in the estates of Friend Crane of Quincy, Bridget Keating, Bridget McGowan, C. H. Thomas and Pamela Willard of Weymouth.

The first annual concert and ball of the Quincy Associates was held Monday evening at Music hall, and was largely attended. From 8 to 9 o'clock there was a promenade concert which was followed by dancing. The floor was in charge of Benson E. Myer, Michael Scannell, James E. Moorehead, John W. Fitzgerald, Joseph J. Kelley and a large corps of aids.

There was a very large attendance Sunday afternoon at the no-license meeting at the Swedish Lutheran church. The addresses were by Rev. John A. Bernhard, Rev. E. C. Blonquist, Rev. John B. Bjork, Rev. S. L. Garlander of Quincy and Rev. O. Linbergren of Boston. Made during the services was by the Mission and Swedish Lutheran church choruses and the Swedish Lutheran Orchestra.

A largely attended and enthusiastic rally under the auspices of the Scandinavian club was held last Monday night at Plummer hall. Theodore Hermanson presided, and addresses were made by Mayor Thompson, Principal Assessor C. H. Johnson, Councilmen Piper and Crane, Assessor Julius Johnson and Representative-elect E. J. Sandberg. The club voted to support Mayor Thompson and to vote No on the license and auditor questions.

The Y. M. C. A. debate next week promises to be lively and instructive. The subject as chosen by the club is: "Resolved: That Judas was a better man than Pilate." The affirmative side is composed of two debaters who have often been on the program, Stanley Sherman and Glover Howe, and the negative will be held down by Walter Sutermeister and J. D. Gourley. The club is open to all High School and Academy fellows.

Next Monday evening the Boys' Glee club of the Y. M. C. A. will have its first social of the season, at the home of Mrs. William Edwards on Greenleaf street. This promise to be a good time and all boys in Quincy, twelve years old or older, who wish to join the club, are invited to attend. They can do so by giving their names to Walter Sutermeister or Mr. Noon this afternoon. This is an exceptional opportunity for vocal training in the Glee club, as Mr. Claude Patch, the leader, is well experienced in such work.

The regular meeting of the Debating Club of the Y. M. C. A. composed of High school boys, was held Wednesday evening. The usual supper was served at 6:30, and Speaker Buster Parker called the meeting to order at 7:15. The subject for debate was: "Resolved: That David's grief for Absalom was an indication of weakness rather than strength." The affirmative was upheld by Ralph Marden and R. W. Noon, while the negative side consisted of two extremely good debaters, Albert Jones and George Bjork. At the conclusion of the debate, the speaker announced that both sides had secured the same number of points in the merits of the argument.

Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution held their December meeting on Monday afternoon at the birthplace of President John Adams. Owing to the cold weather and it being almost impossible to heat the house comfortably only a few members were present. Hon. Charles Francis Adams is to assist the chapter in securing a fine oil painting to be placed in the room in which John Adams was born and the chapter has decided that its next work will be the proper fitting up of the room in which Adams died. The 27th of the chapter is to celebrate its tenth anniversary. Just in what manner has not been decided but probably will be at the regular meeting on New Year's day.

WEST QUINCY.

The funeral of Mr. Wilfred A. Jose was held Wednesday afternoon from the residence of his brother, Charles Jose, Crescent street. The services were conducted by Rev. A. B. Tyler. The burial was at Sea, Me.

John A. Spogher, aged 40 years of 10 McDonald street, Quincy, was run over at the corner of North and Union streets, Boston, on Saturday afternoon by a two-horse wagon owned by Wason & Co. He sustained a fracture of both legs above the knee. His right hand was also badly crushed. He was removed to the City Hospital Relief station where he died later. He leaves a widow.

The no-license meetings at West Quincy were held at St. Mary's church which were in charge of the Paulist Fathers. Six masses were held throughout the day and there were no-license talks at each. The services were all very largely attended, especially at the evening service when the talk was by Rev. Fr. Gleason S. J.

Mr. Charles H. Johnson delivered a stirring address on No-License at the Methodist church, West Quincy, Sunday evening. During his remarks he paid a touching tribute to the memory of the late H. H. Faxon.

T. F. Ring of Farmington, N. H., is visiting in Quincy, under Thomas Ring of Station street.

Miss May Ring of Station street and her sister, Mrs. Edwin McIntosh of Copeland street, have returned from a pleasant week's visit spent in Dover and Farmington, N. H.

The South Union of West Quincy Plain A. M. will play basket ball with the St. Mary's at West Quincy this evening. On Wednesday evening there was enjoyed another one of those delightful suppers, entertainments and social occasions under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of West Quincy.

The Friday club met Friday afternoon with Mrs. A. E. Sprout of Hancock street, instead of with Mrs. Welch. It was a postponed meeting on account of illness and death on regular scheduled date.

W. R. C. Norfolk County Association will hold a quarterly Friday club at Town Hall, Stoughton, Wednesday, Dec. 13, commencing at 10 A. M. A lunch will be served by members of Corps. Train leaves South Station at 8:30.

I. F. Hoyt, of this city, secretary of the Veterans Association of the 32d Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, has issued this week the call for the annual meeting to be held at the Anniversary of the battle of Fredericksburg.

The cars of the Old Colony street railway used on the City Square-Druid street route are the best cars the company owns. They are of the largest type, and are upholstered in plush. They were previously in use at Fall River.

Miss Etta M. Prescott is hostess and entertains the Junior Friday club at her home on Monday afternoon. The New York period in American literature: the Knickerbocker school and Washington Irving make up the afternoon's program under the guidance of Miss Edith Randall.

The Schoolmasters' club of Quincy which includes the masters of Adams Academy and the Woodward Institute as well as the public schools, held its December meeting on Wednesday evening and there was a discussion of history as taught in the grammar schools.

The only meeting this month of the Women's Alliance of First church will be held on Monday afternoon at the club of three o'clock in the church parlors. It will be a Christmas program in charge of Mrs. John W. Sautron. The Alliance is arranging for its annual children's Christmas party with games, supper and a tree.

Mrs. Blackmar, Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Price and Mrs. Peirce are to dispense hospitality by pouring coffee at the promenade concert which Mr. Bumpus is giving at the Quincy Women's club house next Saturday evening. Among the entertainers are: Miss Bessie Tuckerman, a singer who recently made her debut, Miss Bertha Everett Morgan impersonator, from the Emerson School of Oratory and Mr. Stevens of Boston, pianist.

Masonic Installation. The officers of Rural lodge, A. F. and A. M., were installed Thursday evening, by D.D.G.M. E. Francis Pope, assisted by George A. Thatcher as grand marshal and Past Master Emerson.

After the installation Worshipful Master, Joseph P. Prout was presented a past master's jewel. Speeches were made by the grand officers.

The Fellowship degree was worked on several candidates.

There were a large number of visitors present from lodges in this vicinity.

After the work of the evening a banquet was served.

The officers installed were as follows: W. M.,—Joseph P. Prout.

November Crime.

The returns of Probation Officer Francis A. Spear for the month of November show the total number of criminal cases before the district court for that month to have been 148, an increase of 19 over November, 1904.

The cases were divided as follows: Drunkenness, 63; larceny, 10; assault, 12; search for liquor, 15; search for stolen goods, 7; keeping and exposing liquor for sale, 5; assault with dangerous weapon, 4; disturbing the peace and violation of the park rules, 3 each; carrying concealed weapons, malicious mischief, non-support, and liquor nuisance 2 each; and one each for felonious assault, battery, breaking and entering, concealing mortgaged property, and disorderly conduct.

Of the warrants issued 14 were not served.

Of the other cases 7 were continued for dispositions; 4 to pay fines; 3 for further hearing, 5 appealed, one was held for the grand jury, and one was defaulted.

An appropriation of $11,000,000 was voted Thursday toward the construction of the Panama canal. The amount was a compromise between the $10,000,000 carried in the bill under consideration and an estimate of something over $6,000,000 recommended by Democratic Leader Williams to carry on the work until the middle of January. The bill was amended in accordance with suggestions of Mr. Cannon of Illinois, directing the President to require annual reports from canal construction officers covering all detail of the work.

WOLLASTON.

Mrs. U. Seelye, of Providence, R. I., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Seelye, of Belmont street.

There will be a meeting of the parents of the scholars in the seventh and eighth grades of the Wollaston schoolhouse next Wednesday afternoon.

Friends of Mrs. G. H. York of Wollaston will be glad to hear that she is improving in health very rapidly and will soon be home again from the hospital.

Every one should take an interest in, and patronize the fair to be given this afternoon and evening at 242 Belmont street. The proceeds are to be given to the Day Nursery.

John Dorey of Wollaston has been promising a poultry farm can be found in this vicinity. There has been a cent addition to it in the hatching of one hundred and twenty-five chickens.

A new recruit has arrived at Wollaston, and Mr. and Mrs. George Wardwell are receiving the congratulations of their many friends, a little son arriving on November 20th, to join the family circle and help brighten the household. It is the first heir to the family, and George is smiling benignly on everyone, and naturally he thinks there is no one like him. May the little son make as good a soldier as his pa.

Highland Park. A successful fair was held this week in the vestry of the Universalist church.

Tuesday evening an appetizing supper was served at 8.30 to 100 or more. At 8 o'clock the laughable farce "Sun Bonnet" was given by members of the North Weymouth Dramatic Club to the delight of the audience. Tables for the sale of aprons, candy, dolls, fables and Japanese articles are tastefully arranged, and the articles have met with ready sale. Several small boys dressed as Brownies are the vendors of pop corn and candy.

Note and Comment.

Congratulations to Councilman Polk, who received the largest vote of any Councilman from Ward, an even 500. Mr. Cannon of Ward One was second. At large Councilman Bass had a big lead over all others.

Two Thompsons were elected mayors on Tuesday, one in New Bedford and one in Quincy. The former was pictured in the paper in overalls and shirt-sleeves, but then he was a people's candidate, and the people are known to the front.

That even and well rounded 2000 votes against license which was the goal of the No-License League, looks well in the summary of the vote on the license question in the different Massachusetts cities. We congratulate Mr. Cronin and Waltham, upon increased "No" majorities, and also Fitzburg upon changing its policy to No-License, but Quincy desires to be known as the binner No-License city.

Quincy's population is increased by the revised figures given out by Chief Fridgen of the Census bureau. The city's total is now 28,706. Twenty cities are larger and twelve smaller. The census usually places the number of legal voters higher than the actual number on the list, and finds 6,000 in Quincy while there are on the list, but 5,392. Brockton with a population of 49,994 has twice as many voters as Quincy, namely 12,080. Brockton has an unusually large per cent. of men, over one-fourth the population being voters, while in Fall River about one-sixth are voters, and in Quincy over one-fifth.

Congratulations to Mayor Thompson upon his reelection as the executive of the City of Presidents for the year 1905. In a total vote 140 smaller than last year, his Honor is elected by a plurality 580 larger. A plurality of 164 in a city with only 3500 names upon its voting lists, while there were three candidates for the mayoralty, is almost unprecedented. It was tremendous.

Mayor Thompson in joking with his friend at City Hall on election night, facetiously quipped, what would have been the plurality if "weak" appointments had not been made? But it could not have been much larger than it was.

The Mayor's total is over 200 larger than last year, while Mr. Wilson received over 300 less than Peter T. Fallon, and Mr. Whiting about 50 less than B. Bates. Mayor Thompson has every reason to feel very proud of the endorsement of the voters.

Undoubtedly ex Mayor Bryant is envious of his successor, Mayor Thompson, because through cars between Quincy and Boston have been established under the latter's administration. No one questions but that Mayor Bryant worked hard to secure this improvement, scarcely a week passing without a communication to the Old Colony street railway, or the Railroad Commissioners, and there were interviews and hearings. But somehow Mr. Bryant antagonized the companies and when he attempted to force the issue he was not successful.

Grand Bazaar.

On Wednesday evening no supper was given. The entertainment at 8 o'clock was under the auspices of the Dorcas society. Those present thoroughly enjoyed the musicale which had been prepared for them. Those taking part were: Miss Frances Murray, pianist; Master Hudson, reader; Mrs. Herbert Morton, soloist; Master Howard Ellison, violinist; Miss Mary Murray, pianist; Miss Marion F. Bell, fancy dancer; Miss Cecilia Belliveau, soloist. The committee in charge were: Miss Mabel Ross, Mrs. W. F. Carmon and Mrs. Calvin Fletcher.

Thursday night, the fair being held in the Universalist vestry came to a successful close. At 6.30 a salad supper was served under a competent committee from the Ladies' Aid Society. An entertainment followed at 8 o'clock, consisting of vocal solos, piano duets, a trio on banjo, guitar and lute, and selections by reader. This has been a most successful fair and those who had it in charge feel that the results amply repay the efforts made.

The tables were in charge of these ladies and gentlemen: Domestic table.—Mrs. Susie Harris and Mrs. Charles F. Yearis. Fancy table.—Mrs. Blanche C. Richardson. Sunday School.—William Childs, Chester French, Bartlett Spooner, Elmer Sprague, Lester Sprague, Everett Andrews, Irving Fletcher, Herbert Morton, Walter Loomis, Russell Loomis, and James Morrissey. Doll table.—Mrs. Grace Condon, Mrs. John Lathrop, Miss Etta French and Miss Ethel Merritt. Japanese tea table.—Mrs. G. R. White, Mrs. F. L. Hoke, Miss Mabel Ross, Miss Mary Blake and Miss Josephine French. Candy table.—Mrs. George Sprague, Mrs. Flora Dunn, Miss Maud Dyer and Miss Marion Sprague.

A petition for a recount of the votes cast for Ward Councilmen in Ward Six at Tuesday's election has already been received, and a petition for a recount of the votes for Councilmen from Ward Two is expected before night. The recount will probably be held Monday morning.

Large No-License Vote

The city is to be congratulated upon the largest No-License majority ever recorded. The No vote was larger than ever. Perhaps the most encouraging feature, however, was the fact that the Yes vote fell below 1000. It is the first time since 1892.

Since 1902 the Yes vote has been dwindling from 1340 to 1170, to 1094, and now to 957. The blank votes on the license question were also smaller than any year since 1890, and is another very pleasing feature.

It is gratifying to note that Quincy is to continue as strong a No-License city since the death of Henry H. Faxon as before. That the work of this great apostle of temperance will be a power for many years there is no doubt, and it is many years he would not.

No-License has continued prosperity for Quincy, and has become the settled policy of the city. May there never be a wavering or a change. Quincy's enviable record since the local-option law went into effect last year is as follows:

Fifty-ninth Congress.

The 59th Congress began its session at a warm place for the meeting on December 5. The session of the opening session were those with which the country has been made familiar through the press. There were nearly four hundred members on the floor of the House and seventy-five senators in the chamber at the opening of the session. There were no flowers and the spectacle of certain members sitting behind magnificent floral arrangements was lacking. This is a custom which, in the future, will be more honored by the breach than the observance. No one except perhaps the florists, will regret its discontinuance. The galleries were crowded with ladies, many of them visitors to Washington, and others, wives, daughters or friends of members and Senators on the floor. Miss Alice Roosevelt with a party of friends was in the Executive Gallery, as was also Mrs. Fairbanks, the wife of the Vice-President, and her daughter.

Among those conspicuous by their absence were Senators Mitchell of Oregon and Burton of Kansas, and in the House, Mr. Herndon and Mr. Williamson of Oregon. These gentlemen are expected to serve their country in another capacity and other localities. Distinguished and long familiar faces were missing on the Senate floor—George Frisbie Hoar, so long a Senator from Massachusetts, and John H. Mitchell, Connecticut and his colleague, John R. Hawley; Matthew Stanley Quay of Pennsylvania; and Vest and Cockrell of Missouri. Of these distinguished men who may almost be said to belong to another era, Senator Cockrell is the only one living, and is a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It is almost incredible, but over four thousand bills, and resolutions were introduced in the House on the first day of the session. Of these, 1,000 were introduced and thirty-one measures of a public character. The remainder of them were private bills, the vast majority of them being for pensions. Mr. Brownlow, of Tennessee, presented the largest number, nearly four hundred bills. Of these, 100 were introduced close second with more than three hundred and fifty bills. Mr. McGuire, of Oklahoma, presented the first bill which was for the admission of Oklahoma and Indian Territory as a joint state with seven representatives in Congress.

A number of insurance bills were introduced incited by the widely published insurance scandals and investigations. One by Mr. Morrell, of Pennsylvania, has for its object the inspection of insurance companies by United States marshals, and another bill upon the same subject by the same author, is for the purpose of placing insurance companies under the supervision and control of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Through Cars to Boston.

Dec. 2 will go down in the history of Quincy as the day when through car service between City Square and Boston went into effect. Four cars an hour are being run both ways and they are making good time.

It was expected that there would be some delays on the opening day, but there were none. The first Dudley street car left City Square at 6.02 running via Wollaston Bliss Chapman operated the controller and Frank Simpson saw to it that all fares were collected. The register showed 12 fares collected during the trip.

The second car left the square, running via Hancock street at 6.17. It was in charge of Conductor John Kelly and Motorman Richard Forrest and carried 20 passengers.

The first car from Dudley street arrived in City Square at 6.45. Cars from Brockton, Weymouth Landing and East Milton, which have been running through to Neponset, now go as far as City square, but now go as far as Adams Academy, when they cross to the outward rail.

As has been stated before, cars leave City Square every fifteen minutes, those leaving at 17 and 47 minutes past the hour running via Wollaston, and those leaving at 17 and 47 minutes past the hour running via Hancock street. Plan to be in City Square at least 10 minutes before the car will be in time.

Returning cars leave the Dudley street terminal at 17 and 47 minutes past the hour, running via Hancock street and 22 and 52 minutes past the hour via Wollaston. The running time between Quincy and Dudley street is 50 minutes as follows: 20 minutes to Neponset, 10 minutes to Fields corner, and 20 more to Dudley street.

Quincy Women's Club.

The next meeting of the Quincy Women's Club on Dec. 12th promises to be one of the most interesting in the series. Dr. and Mrs. Jeffrey R. Brackett are to pay their first visit to the club at the clubhouse.

The afternoon will be in charge of the Philanthropy committee and Dr. Brackett will speak on "Possibilities in Social Work." By request Mrs. Hatch the visiting nurse will repeat her paper on her experiences in visiting nursing in Quincy. Hospitality committee for afternoon Mrs. J. Henry Emery and Mrs. John Gow, who will serve light refreshments in the tea room, during the social hour. It will be an open meeting and those interested in charitable work or the work of the club are invited to attend.

No-License club voted to increase its membership to 350 and those on the waiting list who have been notified by the secretary of their eligibility should not fail to qualify before Dec. 12th, as after that date their names will be dropped and others on the waiting list substituted.

Mrs. E. C. Bumpus, president of the Quincy Women's Club is arranging for a fine musical to be given at the club house, on Saturday evening, December 10th, the proceeds to go toward "Visiting Nursing and the Club." The subscription list will be open to club members at the next club meeting on Dec. 12th.

Quincy Day Nursery.

A regular meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery Association was held Tuesday, Dec. 5, in the committee rooms of the Woman's club; fifteen members present. The visiting directors for the year, and the bride a composer since her graduation from the Woodward Institute a few years ago. The Patriot staff was well represented, almost the entire force attending the reception to personally extend congratulations and good wishes.

On Wednesday evening, at 104 Cranich street, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Emma Gustafson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gustafson, to Mr. Oscar F. Frinke. Rev. Mr. Anderson of Springfield street Congregational church performed the ceremony.

The bride was prettily given in white silk while the maids of honor, Misses Hilma and Ester Gustafson, were gowned in lavender. The groomsmen were Adolph Johnson of Pigeon Cove and John Matson of Quincy. Music was furnished by Miss Pearce of Boston.

Quincy Charitable Society.

The Quincy Charitable Society held its monthly meeting at the residence of Mrs. Charles H. Porter, Monday afternoon, Dec. 5.

Reports of directors, relating the good work, accomplished by them during November, were listened to with much interest. Their discretion in giving, characterized by universal benevolence good will and cheer, makes the society a people's power for good in the community. The January meeting will meet with Mrs. Helen Bias, Hancock street.

Annual Fair.

The Parish House of Christ church, Elm street, took on a very festive and holiday appearance when the annual sale of two days opened on the afternoon of December sixth. In the main room on the first floor were nine tables covered with white and decorated with evergreen and red.

On these tables was found a very attractive display of articles suitable for holiday gifts. The tables were in charge of the following: Fancy table.—Chairman, Mrs. Frank Brewer, assisted by Mrs. H. G. Crocker, Mrs. R. C. Drinker, Mrs. G. F. Green, Mrs. W. W. Jenness, Miss Alice L. Putnam and Mrs. Charles Wilson. Stock table.—Chairman, Mrs. Hazen Ricker, assisted by Miss Mary Brewer, Mrs. C. T. Hadwick, Mrs. Frank Moore, Mrs. Leigh Morrison and Mrs. Herbert Steadman.

Household table.—Chairman, Mrs. Samuel Oxford, assisted by Mrs. E. J. Boyce, Mrs. C. F. Darby, Mrs. John Emery, Miss Mary Gibson, Mrs. F. L. Jones, Mrs. E. Packard, Mrs. W. L. Thomas. Flower table.—Chairman, Miss Gertrude Babcock, assisted by Miss Constance Herfeldt and Miss Avonia Eldridge. Candy table.—Chairman, Miss Emily Wilde.

Refreshment table.—Chairman, Mrs. Amos Littlefield, assisted by Mrs. James Malcolm, Mrs. Alexander C. Smith and Mrs. Harry Sprague. Respers table.—Chairman, Miss M. H. Pollock, assisted by Mrs. E. H. Taylor, Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Thomas Smith.

Lemonade table.—Chairman, Miss Mildred Crowley assisted by Miss Alice Findlay and Miss Minnie Barneault. Children's table and mystery basket.—Chairman, Mrs. M. Morrison assisted by Mrs. C. Emery.

There were three special features of the fair. A very unique and inexpensive church calendar with beautiful half-tone of the present church and rectory and a standing for over a hundred years in the ancient burial ground on School street.

The second feature was a humorous reproduction of Paragon Park. Above the stairs of the parish house one finds a miniature of the noisy park atmosphere. A fortune teller and pop corn vendors were in evidence. The park was run by the Manet club under the direction of Miss Sarah Thomas and John Emery.

The third feature of the fair is to be an entertainment given by the Men's Club on Monday evening, Dec. 12th. The entertainment is entitled "The Magazine," the contents being music, poems, prose, drama and plenty of humor and beautiful illustrations.

Men's Club.

The Men's club of Christ church held its 10th monthly meeting at the Men's Club on Monday evening, Dec. 5. There was a full attendance and an excellent program. After the business meeting President W. L. Thomas introduced Col. Edward Anderson who spoke on "Laboratory," and charged the society with the lantern slides, those of Dr. Grenfell and his work receiving the most applause. The entertainment included vocal solos by Mr. William Wardle, Mr. J. H. Steadman and Mr. John H. Emery; whistling solo by Mr. Arthur Thomas and a back and wing dance by Mr. Westley A. Beaulieu; Mr. Wendell Luce was the accompanist. Refreshments were served at ten o'clock. The next meeting in January will be the annual banquet and Christmas night.

Hill-Johnson.

At the home of Mrs. Susanna E. Johnson, 2 Goshall street, was solemnized at five o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, the marriage of her daughter Annie E. Johnson and Mr. Frank P. Hill. Rev. C. J. Wigen officiated. The maid of honor was Miss Lily Johnson and the best man Carl J. Johnson. Miss Annie Johnson at the piano played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served to twenty-five relatives, and in the evening a reception was held from eight until ten. The bride couple were assisted in receiving by the bride's mother and the maid of honor and best man. William Johnson and J. Fredrick Johnson ushered the guests.

During the reception ice cream, cake, hot chocolate and coffee were served, and each guest was given a box of wedding cake before departing.

Miss Johnson made a very pretty bride, her blond coloring being enhanced by her brilliant robes of white silk and her veil of white silk. She wore a long tulle veil and carried a large bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor wore a flowered white silk muslin and carried white carnations.

The house decorations were palms, potted plants and cut flowers. During the reception congratulations were received by telegram from New York, Worcester and other friends unable to be present. Among the presents was an oxen clock from associate workers at the Quincy Patriot office, where the groom has been foreman for many years, and the bride a composer since her graduation from the Woodward Institute a few years ago. The Patriot staff was well represented, almost the entire force attending the reception to personally extend congratulations and good wishes.

Frinke-Gustafson.

On Wednesday evening, at 104 Cranich street, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Emma Gustafson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gustafson, to Mr. Oscar F. Frinke. Rev. Mr. Anderson of Springfield street Congregational church performed the ceremony.

The bride was prettily given in white silk while the maids of honor, Misses Hilma and Ester Gustafson, were gowned in lavender. The groomsmen were Adolph Johnson of Pigeon Cove and John Matson of Quincy. Music was furnished by Miss Pearce of Boston.

Flowers and potted plants formed a pretty backdrop for the bridal party. Refreshments were served throughout the evening. Friends were present from Cambridge, Boston and Reading.

Hunters' Picnic.

Did you ever go to a Hunters' Picnic? We attended one last Wednesday evening at the Wollaston Baptist church and such a good time as we had and so many people were there. The whole chapel was a veritable woodland. Cedar trees growing here and there afforded good hiding places for the many animals of all kinds. After a hunt one is always ready to satisfy the inner man and we all went to the lunch counter for tempting viands which were served in real picnic style on wooden plates and there was popcorn, candy, corn-balls and peanuts to complete the feast. A jillaroo crowd you never saw. While we were resting in the shade, some of the party entertained us. Mr. William Hammond Putnam of Duxbury rendered three tenor solos in a beautiful manner: "Dreamland," "Greeting" and "The Promise of Life." Miss Edith Olney accompanied him on the piano. The Oddities of Boston were some of the party entertained us. Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. B. Baxter, Mr. Humm, Mr. Fred Beckwith, Mrs. Harry Beckwith and their accompanist. A missionary from China sent some exquisite drawn work done by the women of that country and many of the ladies persona and their hands to their Xmas gifts then and there. The proceeds from this special sale go back to China with additional sums toward building a much needed home for Chinese girls.

Miss Marjorie P. Rideout was chairman of the picnic committee and her aid des corps were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Fisk, Miss Elsie Albee, Miss Edith Perry, Miss Eva Sheldon, Miss Dorothy Beckwith, Mr. Harry Beckwith, and Mrs. Dimmock.

In spite of the storm Sunday afternoon there was a good attendance of ladies and gentlemen at the Memorial service held at Greenleaf hall under the auspices of Quincy Lodge, B. P. O. E.

Exalted ruler Frederick W. Tirrell, held charge of the exercises. They opened according to the ritual of the order, music during the ceremony being by a quartette composed of James Lee, Miss Josephine McCarthy, Miss Angela McCarthy, and William Bigness.

The program included a duet by the Misses McCarthy, recitations by Miss Anna M. Egenhoff, solo by James Lee, solo with violin obligato by Miss Angela McCarthy and Miss Margaret McCarthy, and eulogy by R. V. William E. Gardner. John Mahan was accompanist.

Memorial Services.

The reorganization committee are Theophilus King, Charles A. Howland, Frank Redmond, John K. Hayward and William B. Winslow.

Poetry.

The Hurrying Hours.

HARRY LEWIS.

How often the thought comes to me,
As the minutes hurry away,
Of the many things I intended to do
Somewhere, sometime, some day.
There are promises that have not been kept,
Though I always meant to plan,
But time is too short for all the things
That a body intends to do.

I will answer a letter, or read a book,
I will write a bit of rhyme;
I will do the things that I ought to do—
Some day when I have time.
So I look beyond, as I hope and plan
For the days that are just ahead,
While the day that is here goes into the grave
With its opportunities dead.

Notes and Comments.

—The gypsy moth, which infested 350 square miles of territory five years ago, now infests 2,083 square miles. Considering that the whole trouble started in the first place by the escape of a single pair of moths, the task of extermination looks formidable, if not impossible.

—Some men are "never" satisfied. Henry Scardon of California brought a revolver, intending to commit suicide. The pistol would not go off when he pulled the trigger, and now he is looking for the storekeeper for the return of his money.

—There are 17,000 men now at work on the Panama canal, but only about 1,500 are white Americans. Race, color, or previous condition of servitude is not a drawback there.

—The world delights in sunny people. The old are hungering for love more than for bread. The air of joy is very cheap; and, if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise, it will be better for them than blankets, said Henry Drummond.

—Dr. Robert Hutchinson of London says that bread is the most important of all foods. He says that a man could subsist well on only two pounds of bread a day, and that rye flour is far below the nutritive value of white flour, as proved by him in his experiments of many years duration.

—Beginning last Sunday, the Public Library in Brookline will be open for the delivery of books, as well as for readers, on Sundays, from two to nine o'clock.

—In Spain Christmas comes to court with all the gorgeous rites and ceremonies of the Catholic Church and lasts twelve days. It opens with the midnight mass on Christmas eve when the king, his mother and his sister, accompanied by the grandees of the court, magnificently attired, march in state to the royal chapel of the palace. On Christmas morning the king's court again attend mass in state, after which the day is spent in merry-making—Woman's Home Companion.

—Greater New York has a population of 4,014,304, and New York state 8,000,672, according to the recent census. From the skill with which they reached the four and eight million marks, it appears that the New York enumerators possessed of the necessary patriotism.—Somerville Journal.

—The man who appreciates to the full the kind of autumn weather that has been vouchsafed us is he who gives hearty expression to his appreciation without making comparisons, and without anticipating what the weather will be tomorrow. "Just wait," says the cynic, "we'll have all the snow and cold weather we can attend to, in another month, to pay for all this." He makes life disagreeable for everybody, while the day-by-day optimist goes about exclaiming at the unusual delight of the season, and trying to keep his neighbor's thought concentrated on the beauty and gladness of the present hour. Certainly, it has been an unprecedented fall and inimitable November.—Boston Courier.

Quincy Teams Defeated.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. teams were simply not in on Saturday. In the league series in Boston the senior team was defeated by the Boston 5 to 11, and the second team was defeated 5 to 1.

At Quincy the Maiden Intermediates defeated the Quincy intermediates 45 to 3, and the Boston juniors defeated the Quincy juniors 40 to 4.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. basketball team lost both games at Melrose on Tuesday night. The first team was defeated by a score of 75 to 3, and the junior team by a score of 35 to 1.

The joint Committee on Finance and Ordinances reported an amendment to the order amending the ordinance concerning salaries. The amendment increases the salary of the City Treasurer to $1,400, the City Clerk to $1,400, and the City Auditor to $800. To Ordinance Committee.

The joint Committee on Finance and Ordinances reported a substitute order amending the Woodward Ordinance. The substitute provides that no salaries shall be paid from the fund and that the City Treasurer, City Clerk and City Auditor shall be ex-officio treasurer, clerk and auditor of the fund. Referred to Ordinance Committee.

COTTAGE AVENUE.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on the petition to widen and accept Cottage avenue. This hearing was accepted this street some weeks ago was voted, as proper notice had not been given to some of the abutters. The order was recommitted to the Committee on Streets.

A public hearing was held at 8:30 o'clock on the petition of the N. E. T. & C. Co. for attachments on Woodward avenue, Whitney road, Walker, River, Charles and Silver streets. The order was recommitted to the Committee on Streets.

A public hearing was held at 8:30 o'clock on the petition to widen Bates avenue. This was made necessary as a part of this street which had been used as a public way had been fenced in by the owner. The order was recommitted to the Committee on Streets.

Grant-Tate.

Miss Gertrude Lillian Tate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Tate of Phillips street, was united in marriage to Mr. Alanson Schuman Grant, son of Rev. Father Coan of St. John's church at eight o'clock Wednesday evening.

The maid of honor was Miss Mollie Tate. The groom was attended by Mr. Frank Tate.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride from eight until ten; the bride and groom being assisted by their parents and Mr. and Mrs. Esmond, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Coste.

The house decorations were very beautiful, consisting of hyacinths, tulips and callas, and above the receiving party hung a ball of maidenhair fern and callas, all a pretty setting for the bride, who was charming in a gown of white crepe de chine trimmed with Irish point lace, and wearing a picture hat of white meline with white plumes.

The maid of honor was also in white, wearing a gown of white crepe de chine with a pink and white plume hat.

A wedding supper was served. During the evening frappe and ices were served by young friends of the bride, who were assisted by the bridesmaids. The bride and groom were assisted by their parents and Mr. and Mrs. Esmond, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Coste.

Household Receipts.

Creamed Oysters. Cook for two minutes one ounce of butter and one ounce of flour sifted; stir in half a cup of milk, let the mixture come to a boil and add one-half cup of cream, salt, a dash of cayenne, and of nutmeg. Wash one quart of medium-sized oysters, cutting out the hard part, and stir them in the boiling sauce until they begin to curl.

Cranberry Jelly. Pick over and wash sufficient berries to measure two quarts. Put them into a large granite stew pan with two pounds of granulated sugar and one pint of water. Cover closely and bring quickly to the boiling point; boil for ten minutes without stirring, then skim and press through a sieve. Pour into wetted molds and set away in a cold pantry.

Great-Grandma's Pie. Lay the apples on to an under crust as usual; put on a few grains of salt or bits of butter, use allspice for seasoning, sprinkle on an even teaspoonful of flour, add two large tablespoonsful of molasses and an upper crust. Bake about an hour in a moderate oven. Eat hot or cold.

Nut Bars. Peanuts, almonds, English walnuts or p. nuts may be used for this candy. Prepare the nuts by removing the inner covering and chopping them. Grease the bottom and sides of a broad shallow tin pan with fresh butter, and put the nuts into it spreading them evenly. Put one pound of granulated sugar with half a teaspoonful of water and a pinch of cream of tartar, into a kettle and boil until thick but not too brittle. Pour the syrup over the nuts and set aside to cool. When slightly stiff mark off into wide bars with a sharp knife, and let stand several days, when it will become soft and delicious.

Fig Sandwiches. Stem and chop very fine a sufficient number of figs. Add enough water to make of the consistency of marmalade and simmer to a smooth paste. Flavor with a little lemon juice, and cool spread on thin slices of buttered bread. Sprinkle thickly with finely chopped nut meats.

Chicken Pudding. Dress and cut one chicken into small pieces, put them into a small pan with a little water and season until it begins to grow tender, take out and put into a large pudding dish. To one quart of green corn (canned may be used) add three well beaten eggs and one pint of sweet milk; season with salt and pepper and pour over the chicken. Dredge with flour, lay bits of butter over the top and bake until done.

Children's Entertainment.

Friday evening December first the children of First Church Sunday school assembled in the chapel to enjoy an entertainment by W. A. Cole, the blind entertainer, humorist, impersonator and ventriloquist. The entertainment was given at an early hour so that the youngest child could be present.

It was hard to believe that Mr. Cole was blind, every movement was so assured. He delighted the children with his humorous stories and the talking dolls were especially fascinating to them.

The entertainment was given free to the Sunday school children, teachers, parents and friends, being arranged by Mr. Charles H. Johnson superintendent of the school.

Henry L. Kneale & Co. are always prepared to give furniture repairing prompt attention.

After the ceremony a collation was served and a most enjoyable evening was spent. At an early hour the guests departed after showering congratulations upon the young couple. This being the first marriage that has taken place among the members of the Copeland club, great interest was displayed by the members.

The warmest day of December last year came on the last day of the month 44 degrees—the lowest noon temperature was on Dec. 11—14 above. On fifteen December days last year the mercury was at or below 32 at noon.

Poetry.

The Woman That's Good.

Ho, gentlemen! Hit your glasses up—
Each gallant, each swain and lover—
A kiss to the beads that him in the cup.
A laugh for the foam that splurges over!
For the soul is gay and the heart beats high,
And care has untold its tether;

"Now drink," said the sage, "for tomorrow
we die!"
So, let's have a toast together.
Swing the goblet aloft; to the lips let it fall;
Then bend you the knee to address her;
And drink, gentle sirs, to the queen of us all—
To the woman that's good—God bless her!

O, Youth is a madcap and Time is a churl!
Pleasure palls and Remorse follows after;
The world battles on its pitiless whirl,
With its kisses, its tears and its laughter!
But there's one gentle heart, in its bosom of white

Dear Love with the tender eyes gleaming,
Who has all the wealth of my homage tonight,
While she lies in her innocent dreaming—
And a watch o'er her ever my spirit shall keep.
While the angels lean on the windows lip
And I'll pledge her again, in her beautiful sleep—

The Woman that's good—God bless her!
Ah, Bohemia's honey was sweet to sip,
And the song and the dance were alluring—
(The milk-and-honey maid with the milk-and-honey lip
Had a charm that was very enduring)
But out from the music and smoke wreaths and ice

Of that world of the twaddlers' evening,
There flits the rare spell of the pure little face,
That has chased away folly forever!
And I pledge my last love to my rest—
O, fortunate earth to possess her!
To the dear, tender heart in the little white
breast

Of the Woman That's Good—God bless her!
The Woman that's good—God bless her!

Several men followed on the heels of one another. When they were all gone Christy's mind had largely recovered its ordinary temper.

"Jim Perry is an awfully decent
chap; it was upsetting to see him looking so done up. If he had stayed in this country, three-quarters of a lifetime of work would probably be before
him. One can't help remembering it.
But I can accept the logic of missions."

He took the little cardboard box from
the drawer into which he had thrust it,
and read the inscription on its lid.

By Way of Experiment.
Christopher Morton, Jr., Esq., was looking through the morning mail in
the office when there came a knock
at the door. He glanced at the clock and frowned. It was too early for visitors by five minutes, and this vigilant young man of business was very careful of his minutes.

While he hesitated the door opened
without ceremony and admitted a gaunt, unfashionable figure, hollow-cheeked and
sallow-faced.

"Hello, Christy, old chap!" cried
the intruder, stretching out a hearty
hand, and feeling, apparently, no doubt
of a welcome. "I'm here to see you."

For an instant the other looked at him vaguely, the crease still showing in his forehead. Then his eyes lit.

"Why, Jim Perry, is it you?" getting around the table at a bound.

"Part of me," said Jim, sinking in a chair. "He panted a little, but he smiled
yet."

Christy looked him over discon-
tentedly.

"What have you been doing to yourself?" he asked.

"Caught a fever," explained Jim
with a nod. "The missionaries sent me
home. I might better have stuck it out there, but I had no breath to argue with them, so they packed me off. I am to go back in September."

"I have always believed in foreign missions," said Christy, "but when they took you out of the country I found it hard to keep my faith."

"And now?" he stepped abruptly.

"It was a mighty good day for me
when I went," said Jim Perry. "I have got a lot out of living these past three years."

"There was no mistaking the ring in
his voice."

"You have sung quarters here," said Perry. "They tell me that you are a prosperous man of affairs."

"I am getting on," said Christy
modestly. "I have some turn, I think,
for making money."

"We are out in it," said Jim, with a chuckle, "haven't any; it is the last thing we can do. Our strong point is spending. We claim that nobody on earth can surpass us in that. We will invest for you if you like. By the way,"
he plucked his hand into his pocket and
brought out a bit of strip of cardboard,
which he proceeded to fit together into a
mummy box.

"There!" he said, setting it up gravely on the corner of the mantlepiece, "you will kindly contribute."

"What is it?" asked Christy, regarding the small object distrustfully, very much as if it were a dynamite bomb.

"We are trying," explained Jim, "to raise a special Christmas offering for missions. Along with the rest of her Christmas giving the Church is asked to give to those who have never learned what Christmas is."

There was a slight pause.

"Could anything," Jim asked, "be more acceptable to him in whose name our festival is kept?"

"The original meaning of Christmas has been overlaid in a good many minds," connected Christy briefly.

"To their loss," said Jim. "And to the bitter loss of many besides."

He rose from his seat and began to pace back and forth over Christy's thick carpet. But he was weak; he soon came back to his old place.

"I have walked," he said musily,
"the swarming streets of heathen cities.
I have gone into heathen homes, I have stood face to face with weary, heavy-laden souls, and I have been taught what darkness is. But then, thank God, I have them break in the black sky and stand over some place where the Christ was born, and I know, yes, I know the brightness of his rising!"

There was another silence.

Again Jim was the first to speak.

"No doubt," he said, "you give a number of Christmas presents."

"But I don't begin to think of them in September," said Christy.

"That is fortunate," responded Jim travelling; "it will give you more leisure to think of this better."

He looked at his watch and said that he must go.

They walked together to the corner
where he took the car, and then Christy hurried back to his work.

"That man will never go to China next September," he muttered to himself, as he rang up the elevator. "It will be another celestial kingdom for which he will start, unless the signs are wrong."

For the rest of the morning Mr. Morton was not so undivided in his attention to business as was customary with

Poetry.

Who has all the wealth of my homage tonight,
While she lies in her innocent dreaming—
And a watch o'er her ever my spirit shall keep.
While the angels lean on the windows lip
And I'll pledge her again, in her beautiful
sleep—

The Woman that's good—God bless her!
Ah, Bohemia's honey was sweet to sip,
And the song and the dance were alluring—
(The milk-and-honey maid with the milk-and-honey lip
Had a charm that was very enduring)
But out from the music and smoke wreaths and
ice

Of that world of the twaddlers' evening,
There flits the rare spell of the pure little face,
That has chased away folly forever!
And I pledge my last love to my rest—
O, fortunate earth to possess her!
To the dear, tender heart in the little white
breast

Of the Woman That's Good—God bless her!
The Woman that's good—God bless her!

Several men followed on the heels of
one another. When they were all gone Christy's mind had largely recovered its
ordinary temper.

"Jim Perry is an awfully decent
chap; it was upsetting to see him looking so done up. If he had stayed in this country, three-quarters of a lifetime of work would probably be before
him. One can't help remembering it.
But I can accept the logic of missions."

He took the little cardboard box from
the drawer into which he had thrust it,
and read the inscription on its lid.

By Way of Experiment.
Christopher Morton, Jr., Esq., was
looking through the morning mail in
the office when there came a knock
at the door. He glanced at the clock
and frowned. It was too early for visitors by five minutes, and this vigilant young man of business was very
careful of his minutes.

While he hesitated the door opened
without ceremony and admitted a gaunt,
unfashionable figure, hollow-cheeked and
sallow-faced.

"Hello, Christy, old chap!" cried
the intruder, stretching out a hearty
hand, and feeling, apparently, no doubt
of a welcome. "I'm here to see you."

For an instant the other looked at him vaguely, the crease still showing in
his forehead. Then his eyes lit.

"Why, Jim Perry, is it you?" getting
around the table at a bound.

"Part of me," said Jim, sinking in a chair. "He panted a little, but he smiled
yet."

Christy looked him over discon-
tentedly.

"What have you been doing to yourself?" he asked.

"Caught a fever," explained Jim
with a nod. "The missionaries sent me
home. I might better have stuck it out
there, but I had no breath to argue with them, so they packed me off. I am to go back in September."

"I have always believed in foreign missions," said Christy, "but when they took you out of the country I found it
hard to keep my faith."

"And now?" he stepped abruptly.

"It was a mighty good day for me
when I went," said Jim Perry. "I have got a lot out of living these past three years."

"There was no mistaking the ring in
his voice."

"You have sung quarters here," said Perry. "They tell me that you are a
prosperous man of affairs."

"I am getting on," said Christy
modestly. "I have some turn, I think,
for making money."

"We are out in it," said Jim, with a chuckle, "haven't any; it is the last thing we can do. Our strong point is spending. We claim that nobody on earth can surpass us in that. We will invest for you if you like. By the way,"
he plucked his hand into his pocket and
brought out a bit of strip of cardboard,
which he proceeded to fit together into a
mummy box.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1905.

Self-Improvement Society.

Several of the former residents of Quincy have been cooperating with the Rev. and Mrs. D. M. Wilson to gather all the young people of Northfield into a self-improvement society. Their efforts culminated Thursday evening last in the dedication of rooms in a little building which has been named "Camelot." John Adams Thayer, one of the proprietors of Everybody's Magazine contributed liberally to this result. Pictures given by him and Wm. R. Polson adorn the walls. A large photograph of Mr. Thayer, solicited for the occasion, occupied a prominent place. The aim of the organization is to make country life more interesting and stimulating for the young people.

Christmas Gifts.

Christmas gifts of nature are the best gladdening the hearts of the fishermen of Provincetown. Usually the dories have to go a dozen miles away. Just now they are in luck, the cod school having come right into Cape Cod bay and sought the shoal ground of Wellfleet and nearer shore waters off Panet harbor, Truro, enabling the fishermen to get to and from their trawls in quick time.

Strike at Brockton.

A strike involving some 15,000 shoe workers is considered inevitable after the lasters' union vote on Thursday at a mass meeting attended by nearly 1500 members. The decision of the state board of arbitration upon grievances in the lasters' department of E. E. Taylor & Co.'s factory was denounced for the third time, and unless the wishes of the union are granted, labor leaders predict one of the greatest industrial wars of the year.

Licenses Surrendered.

Nine places in Boston where liquors were sold under the fourth-class license were revoked on Thursday by the new District Attorney Moran. The places were within the 400-foot limit of public schools.

Among the number was the fashionable Hotel Touraine, corner of Boylston and Tremont streets. J. Reed Whipple, head of the syndicate which controls the Touraine, the Parker house and Young's hotel, is not ready as yet to say what will be done. May also close the hotel.

High School Bids.

The Commissioner of Public Works asks proposals for the additions and alterations of the Quincy High school building, upon the basis of the completion of the entire work on or before Sept. 1.

Bids will not be opened until Dec. 28, the last Thursday of the year, so that it will not be possible to begin work until January, and the severity of the winter may prevent any work before March.

Dropped Dead.

Thomas Cuniff, a well known resident of Atlantic, dropped dead Thursday evening in the station of Combination No. 2. Mr. Cuniff was formerly attached to this company and was at the station making a call.

Big Plurality.

The full vote of Norfolk County at the State election for County Commissioner has just been compiled, and shows that ex-Senator Merrill of Quincy was elected by a vote of nearly two to one. The totals were: 12,241 for John F. Merrill, and 6,807 for John Cavanaugh of Braintree.

On Tuesday afternoon, Canton and Randolph, gave pluralities for the Democratic nominee.

A Nice Christmas Present.

We have at the Patriot Office for sale a dozen copies of the old and valuable history of Quincy, by the late Dr. Pattee, giving quite full and complete account of everything of importance to Quincy and Braintree from the time Capt. Wollaston landed at Mount Wollaston with about thirty other adventurers in 1625, to the time the history was published in 1878.

In the early hours of Thursday morning the first successful double escape from the Claires-street jail, Boston, which has occurred there during its history of 55 years was accomplished by Charles Howard and Edward H. Carr, held for hearings on many charges of burglary in Boston and surrounding cities, and said by the police to be two of the most daring housebreakers in the United States.

County Commissioner Marshall P. Wright, who goes out of office Dec. 31, has a new title. He has recently been appointed United States public roads correspondent for Norfolk county. This is a government position and corresponds furnish the government any information desired about the roads of Norfolk county.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt announce the engagement of their daughter Miss Alice Lee Roosevelt, to Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Ohio. The wedding will take place about the middle of February.

Notices were posted in the mills of the Farr Alpaca company of Holyoke, on Thursday, notifying the 1700 employees of a voluntary increase of 10 percent in their wages to go into effect Jan. 1, 1906, meaning an increase of probably $100,000 in the yearly payroll.

Mrs. Mary Barab of Franklin street, Brockton, celebrated her birthday yesterday. She spends most of her waking hours in a rocking-chair reading her French books and smoking her pipe.

Brig.-Gen. Herman Haupt, the engineer who built the Housatonic canal, died suddenly on Thursday, in his eighty-sixth year, while riding with his son on the cars in New Jersey.

It's pretty hard on the brave crew of lightship 58, after their terrible ordeal, to find they are out of a job and discharged.

Temperature of 24 degrees below was recorded yesterday in the Adirondacks and at Bangor, Maine.

CITY BRIEFS.

Mrs. Edward Tucker of Medford is the guest of Quincy relatives.

Mrs. G. F. Spooner is confined to her home on Revere road by sickness.

The local stores are displaying some handsome goods for Christmas presents.

The best place for Quincy people to purchase Christmas gifts is in Quincy. Plants, cut flowers and violets for Christmas at William Patterson's green houses.

Quincy officers are in attendance at the criminal session of the superior court at Dedham.

William T. Richards, Jr., Adams street, is on a business trip to New York and Jersey City.

Mr. Simeon Ellis of Maine is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Winslow of Bent place.

The National Mutual Wollaston Bank has issued a calendar for 1906 which is ornamental for home or office.

Miss Lila Lane, formerly of Quincy, has been the guest the past week of Miss Avah Gilson of Liden place.

A small party of people from Lexington came to Quincy on Monday. They visited several points of interest.

At the dance in Quincy Music Hall this evening the first 100 ladies appearing will receive green pins.

A power letter cancelling machine has been installed at the Quincy post office, which does the work remarkably quick.

The membership in the Y. M. C. A. is steadily increasing and now amounts to a total of 300. Of these 150 are boys.

Frank H. Milliken, Esq., of Mansfield, is the guest of Willie Westinghouse, Jr., 33 State street, on Saturday and Sunday.

Probation Officer Francis A. Spear has been taking a few days off this week superintending some additions to Lacyhurst.

Mayor Thompson is putting all his spare time on his inaugural address. It will probably be about the same length as last year.

The block of stores on Granite street have had their fronts boarded in so that work completing them can go forward no matter what the weather.

At the whist tournament at the Granite City club Wednesday evening, prizes for the best scores were awarded to Warren H. Rideout and John Curtis.

Never have the local stores looked more attractive for Christmas than at the present time. Wise ones will avoid the crush and jam in Boston stores and trade at home.

An enjoyable dance was given at Col. Adams hall, December 8, music being furnished by Leavitt's orchestra. The matrons were Mrs. Theophilus King and Mrs. A. H. Gilson.

At the billiard tournament at the Granite City club Saturday night, Henry McGrath beat Dr. C. B. Marston 15 to 8, and W. H. Mitchell beat Charles H. Penman 15 to 11.

Quincy delegates attended Convention State branch of International union of steam engineers at Brockton on Sunday and Robert McVitie of this city was elected one of the vice presidents.

The president is A. N. Huddell of Boston. Eight tables were in play at the whist party given by Mrs. Porterfield Wednesday afternoon and souvenirs were tendered to Mrs. A. Hall, Mrs. W. Pratt, Mrs. W. Mitchell, Mrs. W. Thomas, Mrs. Wilsher and Mrs. Cullen.

James J. McGrath and Alexander Phillips of this city are on the jury in the Superior court at Dedham which is sitting at the trial of Giuseppe Sabatino charged with murder in the second degree of Alfonso Tura at Hyde Park last March.

At a meeting of the Quincy Bar Association held on Dec. 9 it was voted to induce the candidacy John W. McNamee for District Attorney. It was also voted to appoint a committee to wait upon the Governor and urge his appointment.

The New England Telephone Co. has purchased two lots of land on Merry-mount road in the rear of Rogers Bros. store. They will erect a brick building in which will be located the central exchange, the office of the superintendent of the South Shore district, the construction department, etc.

The Junior Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held a very successful candy sale Saturday afternoon, Dec. 9, at the Association building. Mrs. E. C. Melville of Jamaica Plain gave a lesson in candy making which was instructive as well as interesting. Over fifteen dollars was netted from the sale.

The Quincy Women's club has been presented with two beautiful Boston ferns by William Patterson of the Hillside conservatories at Wollaston. They adorned the platform at Tuesday's meeting and were very effective. The club is to have them well looked after and hope they will beautify the club house for months to come.

Mrs. Moore, mother of Mrs. William P. Barker Greenleaf street received quite a large fall at the Quincy depot, Dec. 8. She came from Boston on the 1:49 train. After alighting she caught between the rail and the plank and she was thrown. She fell forward onto her face and was quite badly cut and bruised. She was attended by Dr. Gordon and removed to her home.

Mrs. William Edwards of Greenleaf street, entertained at her home Monday evening twenty-seven Y. M. C. A. boys, the occasion being the first monthly evening of the Boys' Glee Club. The evening was spent in a "Parlor Field Meet," and was very much enjoyed, after which Mrs. Edwards and her two daughters served refreshments. Eliot Jackson then thanked Mrs. Edwards, on behalf of the boys, for so royally entertaining the party.

Mrs. L. B. Titus as President of the Massachusetts branch of Daughters of the Farr Alpaca company of Holyoke, on Thursday, notifying the 1700 employees of a voluntary increase of 10 percent in their wages to go into effect Jan. 1, 1906, meaning an increase of probably $100,000 in the yearly payroll.

It was on Dec. 20 last year that the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium was opened. Christmas, and New Year, and also inauguration day will come on Mondays. History says that Quincy had temperature twenty degrees below zero on Dec. 10 seventy years ago.

C. F. Pettengill, the jeweller, has a rich display of holiday goods, which are offered at reasonable prices.

The Saturday eight-page issue of the Daily Ledger will be a Christmas number with several columns of Christmas news.

A week from Monday will be Christmas day. Churches are requested to forward their holiday programs to the Daily Ledger office early next week.

The show windows about town are so beautiful that one almost wishes it were the Christmas season all the year round. Some exceptionally pretty ones are noticed.

The game of basket ball scheduled for Thursday night at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. with Chelsea was not played, the latter team having been dropped from the league.

Rev. W. E. Gardner of Christ church will begin on Sunday to hold services at Braintree in the Christian Science hall. The services are at 4 P. M. and the invitation to the public is general.

All sections of the city seem to be interested in the promenade concert at the Quincy Women's club house Saturday evening, and it is promised to be not only a musical treat but a most enjoyable social affair.

A number of Quincy people attended the Calumet Club dance which was held Tuesday evening at Ellsworth hall, East Milton. The Criterion orchestra furnished excellent music which 35 couples enjoyed dancing till 11:30.

Mr. Richard Stevens, a graduate from a teacher at the New England Conservatory of Music, also a pupil of Denner, is to play at the concert this evening at the Quincy Women's club house, bringing with him one of Henry F. Miller & Son's grand pianos.

Friends of Harry H. Moody, the captain of the Quincy High football team, have entered him at the foot of the list in the Globe scholarship contest, but there will be an organized effort to reach the goal. Quincy to win has never won on one candidate.

Although it is usually hard to know just what to give your boy for a Christmas present, yet this year something new in Quincy solves the problem. A membership in the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. is as much as any boy would desire, and lists all the year round. Every live boy wants to join.

The show windows of the men's furnishing store of George W. Jones in the Adams building look very attractive, especially at night, when illuminated. The color scheme is red, and crepe paper is used with good taste. This color makes a good background for the display. One window is devoted to foot wear, and the other to gentlemen's furnishings. Numerous electric lights with fancy shades are used in the decoration.

Tomorrow at Quincy the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. boys will line up against the home team. As Quincy is improving, the games will be close. The games will be open to the public. One feature of the Quincy boys' basketball team is the clean play. At the two games against the Boston Y. M. C. A. Juniors on Saturday and Sunday a single foul was called on the Quincy boys, and absolutely no unnecessary roughness was observed. Many who have seen many basketball games said that a cleaner game than this was seldom seen. The Quincy boys are determined to keep up this record.

The present indications are that there will be a contest over the presidency of the City Council of 1906 when it organizes on January first. There are said to be two candidates in the field. Walter F. Nichols, president of the present city council and Walter E. Piper who represents Ward Three in the present Council but will be Councilman-at-large next year.

Both gentlemen by their length of service are familiar with the routine of business. President Nichols has been a member of the City Council for six years, next year being his seventh. Councilman Piper is now serving his fourth year and will enter upon his fifth year in January.

President Nichols was elected to the presidency at the organization of the City Council in January 1904 and has served two years. During the latter part of the year 1904 there was talk of Councilman Gassett becoming a candidate but it never reached a head as the latter gentleman withdrew before inauguration day.

President Nichols has made a good presiding officer and has been fair in his rulings and appointments. During Councilman Piper's service in the Council he has served on such important committees as Finance and Public Buildings. He looks into every matter carefully before he votes and then says yes or no as he believes for the best interest of the city.

The locality argument is as usual entering into the contest and the friends of Councilman Piper say that Ward Five has almost had a monopoly of the presidency, Wollaston members having been at the head of the City Council in eight years out of seventeen.

The presiding officers by wards and years have been:

H. M. Federline, Ward 2, 1888; H. O. Fairbanks, Ward 3, 1890; James Thompson, Ward 3, 1891-92; E. W. H. Bass, Ward 1, 1893-94; C. M. Bryant, Ward 5, 1895-97; W. S. Plunkham, Ward 5, 1898; G. A. Sidelinger, Ward 2, 1899; C. M. Bryant, Ward 5, 1900-01; Charles Alden, Ward 6, 1902-03; Walter F. Nichols, Ward 5, 1904-05.

Three of the nine presidents have been elevated to the office of Mayor of the city.

Brick Apartments.

Swell foot brick houses, which were so graceful and distinctive a feature of Boston's beauty, fifty years ago; are again coming into vogue, and the Dorchester district is being favored by the builders in this manner, considerably.

Henry B. Blackwell will at once proceed to erect on Walker place, off Prospect street, Atlantic, a block of three houses of this character; the block will be of brick with freestone trimmings; two stories in height; granite approach; providing seven rooms and a bath for each house, with separate yards; the entire structure covering forty-nine by fifty-four feet, and facing south. It will be remembered that Mr. Blackwell made special effort to induce the city government to extend Walker street from Newbury avenue to Prospect street; he believes in Atlantic progress.

It was on Dec. 20 last year that the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium was opened. Christmas, and New Year, and also inauguration day will come on Mondays. History says that Quincy had temperature twenty degrees below zero on Dec. 10 seventy years ago.

C. F. Pettengill, the jeweller, has a rich display of holiday goods, which are offered at reasonable prices.

WEST QUINCY.

A surprise party was given William Anderson at his home on Nelson street, Friday evening, Dec. 8. He was presented with a ring. Games were played and refreshments served. Those present were: Jader Peterson, Esther Hermon, Mrs. Sullivan, Gertrude Bradley, E. Edgar Peterson, Ellen Anderson, Mary Dugga, Henry Sandberg, Carl Anderson, George Friberg, Fred Beaudin, Robert Peterson and Vassar Johnson.

John R. Richards of Centre street is happy over the birth of a son Wednesday.

West Quincy ladies have always taken an active interest in the annual fair in aid of the Free Home for Consumptives. The fair this year opened Monday evening in Paul Revere hall, Boston. The West Quincy table was in charge of Hope Catherine Teasdale.

The second meeting of the Alpha club of West Quincy was held Monday evening at the home of F. Wesley Fuller on Hall place. Twenty-seven members were present. Mr. Wm. Williams, who is attending Boston University, gave an interesting talk on astronomy.

The stone arch, where the boulevard passes under the railroad at West Quincy, is complete. It is one of the finest pieces of work ever built in Quincy and reflects great credit upon John Cashman, the contractor.

The M. E. church at West Quincy was dedicated 31 years ago Friday—Dec. 15, 1874.

A very pretty surprise party took place at the home of Miss Mary McDonald of Bannington street, South Quincy, on Saturday evening. Just at the hour of seven the surprise arrived. After a brief speech by Miss Louise Prout, a beautiful ring was presented. The entire evening was spent with the friends of the party. Prizes were awarded Florence Williams, Russell Parham, Violet Smith and John Marshall. Refreshments and ices were served and a general good time enjoyed by the young folks.

Mrs. J. Warren Fletcher of Garfield street, after recovering from a serious attack of peritonitis, managed to walk a valuable full blooded Scotch terrier, owned by Elmer E. Abercrombie of Braintree, was killed by the cars at Quincy Adams on Sunday.

The Alexander Clark Co. has incorporated with a capital of $50,000 as manufacturers of quarry and granite. The incorporators are Alex. Clark, John F. Howbridge and Edward Howbridge. The granite sheds are preparing to close down the Saturday before Christmas until after New Year's. Work which has been brisk all the year has begun to slack off a little, although the manufacturers have considerable work ahead for early spring delivery.

It has been reported to the police that parties unknown entered the house of Moses Swartz on Gilbert street Wednesday night and carried off a dozen or more chickens.

There will be an exchange of Christmas gifts at the Belcher school next week.

M. L. Kelsie has gone to California for the winter.

A largely attended subscription dance was held at Ellsworth hall Tuesday evening.

The churches are getting ready for their annual Christmas festivals.

A whist party and entertainment was held by the Thursday Evening club this week.

The first lecture in the Acme course will be given at the East Milton Congregational church tonight by George W. Penman on "Picturesque America."

John A. Turner of Central avenue, Milton, entertained about forty of his friends on Wednesday evening at a clam supper. Most of the guests were Knights Templar or Ancient, and included the following from Quincy: Col. H. L. Kiveland, Sergt. Geo. H. Wilson, Sergt. Fred W. Tirrell, Robert Fraser, H. F. McIntire, Frank A. Packard, E. G. Hiles, Jr., Dr. F. E. Jones, Dr. Souther and J. E. Glover.

Miss Bertha Joselyn, who is a teacher in the Haled school for girls in Yonkers, New York, will be at home after the twenty-second of the month.

Many Wollaston people are taking advantage of the offer of the Telephone company of free service for three months and are having telephones put in.

E. B. Bird, of Wollaston is in New York on a business trip.

Mrs. E. E. Ross of Wollaston announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Ross, to Mr. Woodford Ketchum of Boston. The marriage took place on Thursday evening, December 8, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ketchum.

There is an excellent skating rink on Brook street, Wollaston. Many skaters go there every day and hotly contested hockey games are played.

The regular monthly social of the Wollaston Congregational church was held Thursday evening, and took the form of a "singing party." After a good supper at 6:30 Rev. Mr. Webber of the Baptist church gave a short talk. The "singing" consisted of paying five cents and after being blindfolded drawing prizes from a line. The proceeds are to be used for a charitable purpose.

Several Wollaston young men visited some of their Harvard friends at Stoughton hall, Cambridge, last evening.

"She Stoops to Conquer" was presented at Redcliffe college on Friday and Saturday last week. Miss Mollie G. Brown of Wollaston took the part of Miss Constance Neville.

The date of the midwinter concert of the Wollaston Glee club is Jan. 17.

Several new houses are going up on desirable lots within a few minutes walk of the Wollaston station.

Yonkers is excellent skating rink on Brook street, Wollaston. Many skaters go there every day and hotly contested hockey games are played.

QUINCY POINT AND NECK.

December 8, at the Washington Street Congregational church, a large number of people gathered to witness the public installation of the officers of "The Husbands of the King," a society for young men, teaching purity, manhood and loyalty. This society has a historical foundation. After an address by Rev. Charles S. Bates, officers were elected and installed.

The new mercury-vapor lights which have recently been installed in the machine-shop at the shipyard are not giving universal satisfaction. These lights burn with a peculiar greenish glow, giving objects a hue that is often startling. To most of the men, the strange tint merely affords amusement, but one solemnly declared that though one might get used to this in time in so doing his mind would, in all probability, become affected and then he would have no use for the lights.

Mrs. Hannon has moved from Broadway, Quincy point, to Charleston.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cain have moved from Hersey place to North Weymouth.

Rev. Dr. R. L. Greene of Wollaston, who was intimately associated with General Phil Sheridan as orderly in the Civil war, gave a very interesting talk on his experiences Tuesday evening at the Quincy Point church. He was with Sheridan at the Battle of Cedar Creek and the actions were held by his vivid pictures of those terrible scenes.

Rev. Edward Anderson, a former pastor of the church, introduced the speaker. Singing of war songs added spirit to the evening's entertainment.

Ex-chief of Police Joseph W. Hayden quitted his position as chief of police, after a long and successful career, on Sunday, Dec. 10th.

Several of the officers who will have charge of the new battleship Rhode Island after she goes into commission are already on board, becoming accustomed to their new charge. These include the chief gunner and several of the engineers.

The inter-department shooting contests which were recently held by the Shipbuilders Club aroused great interest among men of the various departments. The club rooms, on Washington street, are undergoing improvements and this branch of amusement will be especially provided for.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams have moved from Edwards street to Edison Park.

Nelson and Ericson are having their new house on East Howard street painted.

Mrs. Dawson of South street has returned from a visit to her home in Pittsburg, Pa.

Capt. and Mrs. W. B. Crosby of Cotuit, will spend the week-end with relatives in Quincy.

The engagement is announced of Miss Bertha B. Bays, a popular young lady of North Weymouth, to Mr. Harry Glendon of Quincy Point, and they are receiving the congratulations of their many friends.

Mr. Blackwell has asked out three lots for new houses to be built on his estate on the corner of Billings and Prospect streets, Atlantic.

Four years ago and since has made his home in San Francisco, Cal., visited friends at Atlantic the past few days. His home is in East Milton.

Mrs. Buxton and family removed from Atlantic to Pope's Hill this week. She took with her a number of young ladies who have made their home with her and who will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Horatio Tower and son of Cohasset are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Eljah Hall of Newbury avenue.

Squanto street has begun to look vital as far as the connection between the Squantum and Quincy cars is concerned. In a week's time there will be no necessity for changing cars at the Atlantic station for Newport and patrons will appreciate this now that the cold weather

Poetry.

Christmas.
J. B. M. WRIGHT.

Though all outside the wild winds blow,
And it is wintry weather,
Beside the firelight's ruddy glow,
Dwell love and peace together.
And sweetly mid the breaking dawn,
The chiming bells ring ringing,
Repeat anew the olden song.
That heavenly hosts were singing.
And it beneath the drifting snow,
The buried flowers are sleeping,
Each heart still with joyous bliss,
A happy Christmas keeping.
And when the light of day is low,
To darker night declining,
How fair beneath the mistletoe
The Christmas candles shining.

Miscellaneous.

Kid McGinness's Tree.

Kid McGinness was walking down the street. He had sold all his "Chinols," and "Woylds" and "Times," and was on his way home to count his money and Mickey. As he came to the corner there was a yell.

"Hi! Look out there! What yer doin'?"

"Wal, d'yer want the lul road?"

"You bet I ain't goin' to give my sides of it to no hog trolley-driver!"

Then came a grinding and a cracking, and the Kid got wrapped up in time to see the car go clear of a big wagon loaded with Christmas trees, in front of Mulligan's grocery.

The tips of the trees had brushed the car windows, and one of them fell to ground just as the horse in the express wagon started up. The hind wheel went over the tree and left it in two pieces on the pavement. The Kid pounced on the pieces and dragged them to the sidewalk, saying:

"Yer o' yars, Mc Mulligan."

Never mind what Mulligan said, nor how he expressed his opinion about the trolley-man, nor what he thought would become of that headless lumber of the earth. This is a Christmas story, and Mulligan's language was not cheerful for our ears—nor elegant enough either. But when he turned to the Kid he did not hit him or kick him as you might have supposed he would, but just said very mildly:

"Tain't no good! Haul it away!
Chase yourself!"

And that was the brilliant idea dawned on the Kid that he would have a Christmas tree.

But you do not know the Kid as well as I do, so I must tell you about him.
Kid McGinness, well, he was just a kid, and his name was McGinness.

That was all. His father was Big McGinness, as they called him, the red-headed stevedore down at the sugar wharf. That is, he was a stevedore when he was sober, which was not often.

His mother was a scrub woman who supported the family. Somewhere had work. It was precious little they ever got from the big stevedore. All his wages went to the grogshops roundabout for half a mile. Then there was little Mickey—ah, yes, there was little Mickey, who had a withered leg, "all little witer paley," as Kid used to say.

He had to be taken care of. He had no use of his leg since his father kicked him one night, when he came home drunk. There had been a terrible time over it, and the neighbors had threatened to call in the police. But little Mickey and his mother had begged them not to, for they said "the old man" didn't mean any harm; 'twas the drink made him that bad." But never since that day had little Mickey walked without a crutch, and never had he anything, when he was small, but stunted. He went to school, and he was very bright and keen and quick at figures; and there was a regular joke between him and Mrs. Finkenstein, the lady who kept the dry-goods store on the avenue, that he got through the grammar school he was to be her cashier. But poor little Mickey had been rather poorly all the fall, and now he was sick in his room, or rather the room and a half where the McGinnesses all herded in together. It was dull business for him to sit there all day when the folks were off. But it would have been harder yet to have any of them grumbling about, as they did when they were out of work. All but the Kid, he was jolly and kind and very gentle with the little cripple. And every afternoon when he had some of his papers, he went home to count up receipts with Mickey. That was where he was going to-night when he found himself with a Christmas tree on his hands.

Nor were there two or three things that most of the Kid's companions and contemporaries would have done with that tree. Some of them would have hurried it home for firewood. Some of them would have turned it into a battering-ram, and pounded front doors with it. Some of them would have broken it into clubs and hammered each other with the pieces. But the Kid curiously enough did none of these things. His mind worked in a different direction. The first thing to occur to him, in any new venture or with regard to any new possession, was how he could use it to please little Mickey.

And the moment Mr. Mulligan told him he could have the broken tree, the whole brilliant plan flashed across his mind. He saw it in a second. Mickey should have a Christmas tree, just as sure as if he were a whole Sunday school all by himself. And the Kid set about to bring it to pass.

The first thing he did was to hail Peter Coker and make him lend a hand at getting the tree down to the tenement where the McGinnesses "hung out,"
as they called it. Peter was willing, partly because he liked the Kid, and partly because the performance gave him some dignity in the eyes of the rest of the fellows. And they soon had the tree landed at the street door. Then came the painful question where that tree could be stored for the long weeks, safe from the raids of the numberless
"gangs" of the neighborhood, from the ugliness of Big McGinness, and the thrift of Mrs. McGinness who would see in it only so much fuel. The whole matter was agreeably settled by Mr.
Stumcke the little Dutchman who kept the market across the street, he whom the boys called "Stumpy." He was a good-hearted man, and when he heard the story and the intention, offered storage in his tiny stable around the corner on River street; and in it went,

in one corner where Stumcke promised to care for it and keep it for the boys.

It would be too long a story to tell all the details of the preparations for the Christmas-tree. Every day, three times or more, the stable had to be visited and the prizes inspected. Profound financial problems—big ones for the Kid—had to be undertaken in order to determine how far his money would go, and what for. Every shop-window for a mile up and down Broadway was scanned and studied; and chiefly the wonders at Scliper's Bazaar. Many a deep trick was practised on little Mickey to find out what he would choose if he had his choice and was going to a Sunday school tree. Eager were the councils with Peter Coker, to decide whether it would do to run the risk of Big McGinness being at home, or whether to take the chance of his being on his rounds among the saloons; and whether it were wise to invite any outsiders for company. The Kid took his mother into the plot, but he did not warm up to the scheme as he had hoped; still she was to be away Christmas eve, anyway,
to wash dishes for the Thomas J.
Hartley Club, which would exclude all apples and rather pucker oranges. So the Kid was bound she should have her share in the grand festivities.

It was seven o'clock on Christmas eve, when the Kid sold his last copy of the "Times," and was off like a shot for home. Up the two flights of worn and rickety stairs he went, and finally opened the door. It was dark inside, and when he whispered "Mickey," a little voice piped up, "Do coast is clear." "Is he gone already?" said
the Kid. "Yep," was the answer.

"He was an hour gone, and he was that drunk he won't be back." Then the Kid went in and lighted a mean little lamp, and for the first time exposed in all its triumphant brilliancy the scheme of the great festivity.

"Now Mickey," he said, "are ye feelin' up to a game?" "Sure," said Mickey. "What game?" "No now dat yer give me no chin," said the Kid.

"Dere's de goin' ter be a Christmas tree,"
said the Kid, "and yer got to see."
The little chap on the rickety chair gave a low whistle and said in a scornful tone, "Rubber!" "O dat's right,"
said the Kid, "and yer got to see."
With that he went out and down the stairs, into the street and signalling for Peter Coker with a whistle like a car-starter. The young gentleman was not far to seek, and came out from the shadows like a small and dirty ghost.

In a trice the two of them were in the dark into Stumpy's story, and round
the corner at the stable. As they fumbled with the key in the padlock they were filled with nervous fears. Suppose somebody had stolen the tree! Suppose the horse had trodden on it! Suppose Stumpy had cut it up! They groped in the dark into Stumpy's story, and round
the corner at the stable. As they fumbled
with the key in the padlock they were filled with nervous fears. Suppose somebody had stolen the tree! Suppose
the horse had trodden on it! Suppose Stumpy had cut it up! They groped in Christmas Services.

Programs for the Christmas church services, with music, etc., will be found in the Daily Leaders of Friday and Saturday.

Tucker's Sentence Deferred.

Attorney General Parker's request that Charles L. Tucker, convicted of the murder of Miss Mabel Page, be called to the bar for sentence to death, has been deferred because counsel for the defendant notified the attorney general of their intention to file a motion for a rehearing by the supreme judicial court on several of the exceptions.

Congress.

President Roosevelt signed on Thursday the bill passed by Congress appropriating $1,000,000 for the Panama Canal. This is the first bill passed by Congress at its present session.

December.

This has been a beautiful month—so much pleasant, delightful weather. Everybody seems to have noticed it and spoken of it. Very little snow and not much cold weather.

Disagreeable Officer.

The new District Attorney Moran is kicking up considerable stir in Boston at the present time. Whether his movements toward the large and popular hotels in Boston is for the best interests of the city remains to be seen.

Sad Occurrence.

Raymond Panillo, who died soon after being rescued from the big fire on Green street, Boston, on Thursday, left a widow and three children at the immigration quarters in Boston. They arrived the same day of the fire after a journey of 3,500 miles from Italy, and were joyously anticipating the happy Christmas reunion.

Neponset River Improvements.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: It is understood the big project for the improvement of the Neponset river in Massachusetts has been approved by Col. Stanton, in charge of river and harbor work in that state. He recommended a survey, costing $1800, which is completed. It is not known how large an appropriation will be required to do the proposed work.

A Nice Christmas Present.

We have at the Patriot Office for sale a dozen copies of the old and valuable history of Quincy, by the late Dr. Patton, giving quite a complete account of everything of importance to Quincy and Braintree from the time Capt. Wollaston landed at Mount Wollaston with about thirty other adventurers in 1625, to the time the history was published in 1878.

CITY BRIEFS.

A merry Christmas.

Quincy stocking has been well filled during the year 1905.

Postmaster Hammond has put on extra carriers for the Christmas week.

The Malet club will hold a subscription dance Wednesday evening, Jan. 3.

A number of family reunions are being planned for the Christmas holidays.

D. E. Wadsworth & Co. have holiday boxes with gloves, handkerchiefs and hosiery.

The regular meeting of the School Committee will be held next Tuesday evening.

One more meeting having adjourned on Wednesday evening, Dec. 27.

Four serious accidents for four successive days is an unwelcome record for Quincy during Christmas week.

Two more names are mentioned for City Auditor, making five in all. The new names are Warren W. Adams of Ward One, and John P. Bigelow of Ward Three.

Store decoration or Christmas has been more general this year than ever before. Nearly every store shows some signs of decoration some of them being very artistic.

The regular monthly meeting of the Junior Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. for December will be omitted because of the Christmas holidays.

Joseph W. Johnson, of Johnson & Anderson, who was blown up in the quaires on Monday is doing nicely, and his chances of recovery are said to be good.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. basket ball teams were outclassed at Newton on Wednesday evening. The first team was defeated 20 to 11, and the second team 25 to 4.

At the winter tournament of the Granite City club on Wednesday night, the souvenirs for the best scores were captured by Benjamin Johnson and Dr. H. C. Halliwell.

Representative Edward J. Sandberg, president of the Quincy Board of Trade, was among those who received a bunch of tickets for the charity ball at Hyde Park and contributed.

The annual dance of the Terpsichorean club was held at Quincy Music hall on December 22 and will be a pretty party as usual. The music will be by Condit's orchestra.

The entertainment and dance of Clan McGreggor next week will be the 25th annual. To successfully conduct parties so many years is a good guarantee that they are successful and enjoyable.

A horse kicked off one of the sewer manholes on the corner of Green street, Wednesday night, and got one leg in it. The animal was not injured and the cover was replaced by the street department.

A pleasing program was given in the Y. M. C. A. course Wednesday evening by John Seaman Gans, baritone and impersonator. One of the best numbers was "Mike O'Connor, the strategist."

The Punkham Construction Company has been incorporated for Quincy, Mass. Charles F. Punkham is president, Geo. F. Moulton as clerk and treasurer and Wilfred R. Mathewson of Quincy as director with the above.

Invitations are out for a Christmas party to be given by the D. L. K. of the Woodward Institute, at the home of the secretary, Miss Maud E. Read, Squantum street, Atlantic, Wednesday evening, December 27th.

The free lamp renewals of the Quincy Electric Light and Power Company have struck a responsive chord. Treasurer Faxon says many new ones are being exchanged for old lamps that have been considerably service.

Hilding, the young son of Charles F. Carlson was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis Wednesday night and removed to the City Hospital where he was operated upon. He was reported as being comfortable this morning.

The annual meeting of the Boston Press Relief Association was held Wednesday evening when a glowing tribute was paid to the late Henry H. Faxon of Quincy, an honorary member of the association, and a liberal donor to the press relief.

The names of ex-City Treasurer H. Walter Gray have been mentioned as a candidate to City Auditor George A. Sidelinger. This makes three candidates for the office; the other two being ex-Mayor Henry O. Fairbanks and Councilman Arthur W. Lombard.

There are now four candidates in the field for appointment as District Attorney in the Norfolk-Plymouth district—John W. McKenney, the ex-City Solicitor of Quincy, Judge Thomas E. Grant of Canton, Robert H. Scholz of Dedham and William L. Baker of Brookline.

Miss Myrtle Lathrop entertained about thirty friends on Saturday evening on the date of her eighteenth birthday, giving quite a complete account of everything of importance to Quincy and Braintree from the time Capt. Wollaston landed at Mount Wollaston with about thirty other adventurers in 1625, to the time the history was published in 1878.

Deaths by which Richard A. McCurdy, ex-president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company and other members of his family have transferred property in Elizabeth, N. J., recently have been made public. Mr. McCurdy and his wife on Dec. 16 and again on Dec. 19 transferred parcels of real estate to their son, Robert H. McCurdy. The son on Dec. 19 transferred to his mother his interest in the new McCurdy home which has been occupied by Richard A. McCurdy and which is said to have cost about $400,000. They seem to be bound to hold their ill-gotten property if possible.

Lieut. General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, made a visit to Quincy Tuesday and called on Lieut. Col. Henry L. Kinsdale. He has just been relieved from duty as Inspector General in this state and paid a very handsome compliment to Lieut. Col. Kinsdale in recommending his name to the Governor as Inspector General for the remainder of the term. General Miles not only just his request in writing, but also said that the Governor's term is so near a close, it is doubtful if he has already made the appointment as he has already held several appointments.

The Dorchester Mutual Fire Insurance Company has issued a calendar for 1906 which illustrates their home office at Neponset. The same company has also issued a little memorandum book for the pocket with handy data relative to postage, interest, weather flags, population, etc., and several blank pages for memoranda.

Congressman McNary has introduced a bill in Congress for a canal across Cape Cod.

WEST QUINCY.

Box 46 at the corner of Copeland street and Furnace avenue, was pulled at 3.22 yesterday afternoon for a fire in a little building on the east side of John Cushman street.

Miss Alice S. Hatch, teacher at the Washington school, is spending the Christmas holidays at North Marshfield.

The heavy rain Thursday carried away all the snow and it looks as though it would be a green Christmas.

It is a common sight to see the father of the family sending his way home with a Christmas tree under his arm.

At the billiard tournament at the Granite City club Saturday night Henry McGrath beat W. W. Mitchell 150 to 100.

Rev. E. C. Butler spoke before the Alliance at Bulfinch place chapel (Rev. Christopher Eliot pastor) on Wednesday evening.

Miss Eliza Crane of North Weymouth left Wednesday for Pelham Manor, N. Y., going over for the Christmas holidays.

The Knights of Columbus of Greater Boston will give a comedy in Boston the week of Feb. 5, to raise funds toward a temple to be erected in Boston.

George Ames, who has been in business in Weymouth as a plumber, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, placing liabilities at $560.69, and assets at $150.

Quincy people will be interested to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McTeer of Providence, R. I., both formerly of Quincy, have moved to Brooklyn, New York.

Guiseppi Sabatino of Hyde Park was found guilty by the Norfolk Superior court on Wednesday and sentenced to life for murder in the second degree of Alfonso Tura last March.

In most of the lower grades of the public schools on Wednesday there was some observance of Christmas, an hour or more being devoted to a good time. Christmas stories were read, cards or candy presented, etc.

Since the accident at the Quincy depot Thursday, a popular feeling of remembrance has arisen over the habit of running express trains by the Quincy depot while another train is standing at the depot.

At this season of the year in particular, Quincy shoppers appreciate a Christmas tree. This year his stock of holiday goods is larger than ever, and after all useful presents are most appreciated.

The Christmas noon temperature for nine years has ranged between 16 last year and 46 in 1900. In four of the nine years it was below the freezing point, but only two years above 40. In December last year there was but one colder day than Christmas.

A whist party was held at Greenleaf Hall Thursday evening under the auspices of John Adams Commandery, Knights of Malta. Eighteen tables were in play. Prizes were given to the victors and gentlemen for the best scores. Hot chocolate and fancy crackers were served.

There was a large attendance of young people at Woodward hall, Wednesday evening, at the reception given by the Class of '05 by the Class of '08. The receiving party was Miss Ruth Penman, Miss Margaret Brown, Miss Irene Dahan and Miss Catherine Moran, the officers of the Class of '08. The other members of the class acted as ushers. Following the reception there was dancing. Frappe was served in the library.

In the mechanics lien case of Bates vs. Johnson, which was on trial Tuesday and Wednesday in the Superior court at Dedham, the jury returned in favor of the plaintiff, Judge Avery made the same finding last year in the District court and the case went to the Superior court on appeal. Mr. Bates had furnished labor on plumbing and heating jobs in three houses in Wollaston in 1900 and 1901, and liened the buildings to secure his pay.

Reminded by Firemen.

A reception was given the members of the Central Fire station, on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. John Murphy, 131 Liberty street, recently married. The firemen were all present.

By an order recently passed by the City Council and approved by the Mayor the permanent firemen have been increased four men. These as well as all call firemen must be appointed from the civil service list. There is yet another game to be played in the Merrimack Valley football league, and upon it the champion ship depends. It is the postponed game of Oct. 7, and will be played at Quincy between the Fore Rivers and the Andovers. Should the latter team win Sunday will be tied in points with the Fore Rivers, but will lead in goals won. Should the Fore Rivers win or draw they will be the champions, as a win will put them four points ahead, and a draw two points ahead. Fore Rivers have won 11 games to 9 for the Andovers, but have won only 38 goals where Andovers have won 40.

Members of the Quincy Women's club have a rare pleasure in store for them on Dec. 26, when John Colby Abbott is to deliver his lecture on "Ludwig the Dreamer," in Bethany church.

The "Mad King" of Bavaria, Ludwig II, is one of the most unique figures in history. His picturesque life and tragic death, his enthusiasm for art, finding expression in his beautiful castles and chateaux, and in devotion to classic music, all combine to make him of surpassing interest. The lecture is illustrated by sixty beautiful stereoscopic pictures of the king's palaces hidden away in the forests of the eastern Alps. There should be a large audience to welcome Mr. Abbott and thus show an appreciation of his unusually pleasing entertainment.

QUINCY POINT AND NECK.

Invitations have been issued this week by Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Smith of Baxter avenue to an engagement party in honor of their daughter, Miss Annette Houtness Smith, and Mr. James Allen Melville, to be held Monday evening, January first. The many friends of the young people will be pleased to extend congratulations and best wishes.

Cyril Randall, principal of the Putnam Grammar school of Sutton, is at home for two weeks.

At the regular meeting of the Husarids of the King on Monday, the following new members were initiated, Clarence Sewell, Charles Yale and John Stitt.

The hand painted fruit dish, which was painted and given to the club by Mrs. Ler, was awarded to J. Peterson. After the meeting, military drill was instructed by Mr. W. E. Lee. It was voted by the members of the order that they give an entertainment to the society at Song Harbor on or before Christmas, assisted by the Christian Endeavor of the Washington street Congregational Church.

The patrol wagon had another call to the Rhode Island house on Sunday evening.

Rumor has it that a restaurant will soon be started on Washington street near South, by one of town parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kenney are occupying the house on Cherry street, recently vacated by Mr. Fred Eaves and family.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKenzie of Claremont avenue are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay are occupying the house on Quincy avenue, near New Bedford square, which was moved from Howard avenue. It is said that a lunch room will be carried on in the front part of the house.

The carpenters have begun work on another new house on East Howard street.

Poetry.

Bridget's Country Week.

Through the bleak December day
Little pale-faced Bridget lay
On her shabby trundle-bed,
Covered with a threadbare spread.
Little Bridget lay alone,
Trying not to cry or moan
For her mother, who must stay
Out at work the living day.
Poor the room, was poor and plain;
But the narrow window pane
Let her out into the free air,
Landscape wide and fair.
Once, when summer days were long,
Once, when she was brisk and strong,
Kind hands had brought her far away
Into the green fields to play.
Oh, the happy Country Week,
When the children went to seek Flowers and sunshine on the hills,
Far away from the city hills!
Little Bridget lived it over,
Each again and over,
Watched the frisky squirrels play,
Fed the birds, and tossed the hay.
Little Bridget's eyes were bright
When her mother came that night.
"Thoughts have wings," she said, and I
With them through the window fly.
"I forget the old," she said,
"I forget my aching head,
While I wander long, long hours
As I used to gathering flowers."
Brighter Little Bridget's eyes, Shone with wonder and surprise,
Gazing on her window-pane,
When the morning dawned again.
Who had been there in the night,
Tracing, all in outline white,
Blossoms, ferns, and leafy grass
On her little square of glass?
Down the chill, gray dawned fell Echoes of a Christmas bell.
Little Bridget scarce could speak,
But a flash sufficed her cheek.
And her heart with joy grew faint.
"Mother, did the angels part Flowers and ferns I used to see
For a Christmas gift to me?"

Notes and Comments.

—Brother White of the Mansfield News certainly believes in "modern times," as illustrated in the last issue of the News. The first page is given up entirely to local news; the absence of advertisements being conspicuously noticeable. Formerly "ads" played an important part on this page, and while advertisers may not appear particularly pleased, the readers will appreciate this new feature. The dress of the paper has been changed to a somewhat larger face, 10-point type now being used for the body, presenting a very neat and well printed newspaper. Congratulations to Brother White on his enterprise and method in trying to please his large number of subscribers.

—The greatest cranberry growing in the world is located in Plymouth county. There is on the assessors' books 194 different cranberry bogs, containing from 1-8 of an acre to 100 acres, making a total last year of 1008 acres; and our stores are asking fifteen cents a quart.

—Brookline has a new claim to fame, which is that in 1740 the first cannon ever produced in America were cast in that city, then the "North Parish" of old Brookline, according to data now in possession of the town of Brookline. It appears from the records that the Hon. Shepard Fisk came from Braintree to the north parish in Brookline in 1724, and became a prominent merchant and public official, serving 14 years as a selectman. Fisk was a member of a syndicate of four men, who established a furnace on the north side of the stream that runs by the C. A. Eaton Co.'s present shoe factory, and cast the first cannon.

—The protest against the destruction of the relic "Old Ironsides" is being eagerly upheld by all who are loyal to the traditions of our country's valorous deeds, in which the brave old ship and its crew took so prominent and notable a part. Ever our finances at low ebb and our patriotism at a comparatively low ebb, we can only say that we should afford to part with the Constitution that we have managed to hold on to up to date. But there is no excuse for the Secretary of the Navy's advice that the relic be done away with. Let the old ship be renovated and placed on a respectable footing with the notable relics of our history still extant.—Boston Courier.

—New Jersey is out of debt and has a surplus. This is of interest to Massachusetts legislators.

—The return of election expenses by the several candidates in this state makes one open his eyes as he reads them. It cost Mr. Wilbur just $42,000 to get within 2000 votes of the election, which Mr. Draper secured after paying out $31,000. Last year Gov. Douglas reported an expenditure for political expenses of $34,000. To speak correctly these are enormous amounts to pay for the chance to occupy the position desired, and show something wrong in the political arena, which keeps many good able men out of the battle.—Athol Chronicle.

—Chelsea is another place where the consumers demand that the price of gas be turned down lower.

—They thought Queen Lili had in various ways been given a quietus and that perhaps she had forgotten all about the fact that once upon a time she had been queen of a group of islands away out in the middle of the Pacific Ocean. Queen Lili was too long a sovereign in her own right to allow a few social functions in American society to make her forget that fact. Now she is going to put aside any go-between in the shape of an attorney, and it is her intention to place before Congress her claim of $10,000 for the loss of her property. The ex-queen believes the United States is wealthy enough to do this for her in return for taking away her heritage. She is so persistent that at last she is going to get a hearing.—Boston Courier.

Help! Help!
I'm Falling

Thus cried the hair. And a kind neighbor came to the rescue with a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. The hair was saved! In gratitude, it grew long and heavy, and with all the deep, rich color of early life. Sold in all parts of the world for sixty years.

Concert at Club House.

Not for years has the Brackett house on Presidents hill looked so inhabited and so cheerful as on Saturday evening for the promenade concert. Light streamed from every window from basement to roof, and approaching the house from the east it looked the castle it has always been called, being originally copied from Abbotsford, the home of Sir Walter Scott.

The cheerful exterior led one to be prepared for the warmth and brightness within. Beside light from many chandeliers there was the soft glow of the candle from old-fashioned candelabra placed on mantels, in dim corners, and on the tea tables. The interior of the house has recently been renovated by the Quincy Women's club, who now occupy it as a club home.

On arriving the guests were ushered up stairs where they found commodious room for their wraps, and on descending, ushers were in waiting to introduce them to Mrs. Bumpus, who was assisted in receiving by the vice-presidents of the club Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. C. Theodore Hurdwick; the treasurer, Miss Annie L. Prescott; Mrs. Charles R. Safford, of the board of directors, and Mrs. James H. Stetson and Mrs. George W. Morton, representing the club. Mrs. John L. Gow and Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, ushers.

The reception was very informal, and was followed at half-past eight by a fine program of song, piano and readings, by Miss Bessie Tuckerman soloist, Miss Bertha Everett Morgan reader, and Mr. F. E. Stevens piano.

Each artist contributed three numbers, giving the following program: Song, "Surrender," by Mrs. Daggett Reading, "Christopher Cobb," by Chlopie. Piano, Scherzo in C sharp minor by Chopin. Song, "Love me if I live," by Arthur Foster Reading, "Mistress Jeannette," by Lizet. Song, "Rhapsodie No. 13," by Tosti. Reading, "Mrs. Shaver's Recovery," by Arensky.

It was a fine program and much enjoyed, the artists receiving much flattering applause. Miss Morgan, the reader, was a favorite, and in responding to her, she gave "Entertaining the Minister" and "Christmas Savings." Her selections were original and pleasing; not after the style so many readers affect. She is a graduate from the Emerson School of Oratory.

Miss Tuckerman had a rich contralto voice, singing easily, clearly and sweetly, giving much pleasure to her listeners. To the music lover, Mr. Stevens, at the piano, was a source of much pleasure. He used a Henry F. Miller & Son grand piano, which he handled most skillfully. Mr. Stevens was graduated from and is also an instructor at the New England Conservatory of music. Although a young man, much is heard of his ability, and Quincy people appreciate the opportunity of hearing him play.

The concert Mrs. Bumpus invited the guests to any for a cup of coffee, and social chat. Mrs. Paul R. Blackmar, Mrs. Harry L. Rice, Mrs. Edwin E. Davis and Mrs. F. J. Peirce presided at the daintily appointed table, pouring coffee, and at the piano tables were Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth, Mrs. Herbert Lyman, and Mrs. Clarence Bargin, assisted by Miss Etta M. Prescott, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Miss Alice G. Cor, Miss Norma C. Lowe, Miss Alice N. Redding, Miss Marjorie Rideout and the Misses Hatch. Mrs. Bumpus was very simply gowned in a deep cranberry color. A gold watch was found on George Riley. He said it had been passed to him by an unknown man at Neponset.

They were locked up and later Eagan identified the watch and the men. As the theft was committed in Boston the watch was turned over to the Boston Police. It was a very pretty affair, which was to be used for the benefit of the poor of Hyde Park, Mass., and to make their children's lives more comfortable.

George Riley was sentenced to four months in the house of correction, and William Riley was discharged. Large Families. Two large families which have descended from Quincy people were illustrated in the Boston Saturday papers. The Herald told of the Thanksgiving gathering of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Phipps Suther, who now reside at 691 Adams street, Dorchester.

Mr. Suther was born in Quincy 69 years ago, being the son of the late Henry Suther. He married Miss Mary M. Smith of Boston. All their eleven children are living, five sons and six daughters, and there are ten grandchildren. Thirty were at the Thanksgiving gathering.

The Globe illustrates the family of Mrs. Abbie Lavinia Barrell, aged 83, who has ten sons and daughters and 49 grandchildren. Mrs. Barrell formerly lived in Quincy, and the Patriot recently told of the Thanksgiving reunion at 280 Eastern avenue, Malden.

Another large Quincy family will have a Christmas reunion at a Boston hotel. The Robert F. Murphy, a four-masted schooner of 697 gross tonnage was launched at Bath, Me., on Saturday.

Accidents. The Christmas Tree—"It is strange that children are so green as to believe in the existence of a Santa Claus."

The Christmas Candle—"But they are not evergreen."—Woman's Home Companion.

Rastus—"No, sah; you bet I ain't. I don't steal turkeys befo' witnesses, sah."

"Say, pop," inquired Willie, "why do we call women the opposite sex?"

"I guess, replied the old man, thoughtfully, 't'cause they're contrary."—Philadelphia Record.

Johnny—"Grandpa, have you any teeth?"

Grandpa—"No, my child, they have all gone."

Johnny—"Then I think I'll let you haul my nuts while I run an errand."—Glasgow Evening Times.

Washington and Summer Streets

A Quick Capture. Robert Eagan, night starter of the Old Colony Street Railway at Neponset, was relieved of his gold watch late Saturday night. The watch was in the pocket of Eagan's overcoat. He took the coat off and hung it in the boiler room while he was getting ready to go home. A row started in the car barn and Eagan ran out to see what the trouble was, and some one ran in and pinched his watch. He missed it in a few minutes, and telephoned to the starter in City Square a description of the men he thought took the time piece.

When the car arrived in City Square and Kellier were waiting for it. They arrested two young fellows giving the names of George Riley, aged 24, of South Boston, and William Riley, aged 27, of 4 Main street, Quincy. A gold watch was found on George Riley. He said it had been passed to him by an unknown man at Neponset.

They were locked up and later Eagan identified the watch and the men. As the theft was committed in Boston the watch was turned over to the Boston Police. It was a very pretty affair, which was to be used for the benefit of the poor of Hyde Park, Mass., and to make their children's lives more comfortable.

The Globe illustrates the family of Mrs. Abbie Lavinia Barrell, aged 83, who has ten sons and daughters and 49 grandchildren. Mrs. Barrell formerly lived in Quincy, and the Patriot recently told of the Thanksgiving reunion at 280 Eastern avenue, Malden.

Another large Quincy family will have a Christmas reunion at a Boston hotel. The Robert F. Murphy, a four-masted schooner of 697 gross tonnage was launched at Bath, Me., on Saturday.

Accidents. The Christmas Tree—"It is strange that children are so green as to believe in the existence of a Santa Claus."

The Christmas Candle—"But they are not evergreen."—Woman's Home Companion.

Judge—"You are charged with stealing six turkeys from Colonel Sillax. Have you any witnesses?"

Rastus—"No, sah; you bet I ain't. I don't steal turkeys befo' witnesses, sah."

"Say, pop," inquired Willie, "why do we call women the opposite sex?"

"I guess, replied the old man, thoughtfully, 't'cause they're contrary."—Philadelphia Record.

Johnny—"Grandpa, have you any teeth?"

Grandpa—"No, my child, they have all gone."

Johnny—"Then I think I'll let you haul my nuts while I run an errand."—Glasgow Evening Times.

Household Receipts.

Nat Cookies. Take one pound of light-brown sugar, one cupful of lard, two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of soda and one cupful of chopped bicarbonate of soda, flour enough to roll out. First mix sugar and lard together and work to a cream, next add the eggs, then the milk, into which you must stir the soda, then add the nuts and then flour to stiffen; have the oven hot, so they will bake in about three or four minutes.

Frosted Afternoon Teas. Make a stiff meringue, allowing two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar to each white of egg and beaten until very stiff. Add half a cupful of chopped nuts and spread lightly on afternoon tea biscuits or any fine crackers, then place in a moderate oven to set and brown very lightly. A change may be made by coloring some of the frosting pink or red with cranberry or currant juice. In this case leave in the oven only enough to "set" but not to brown.

Scalloped Oysters and Macaroni. Drain about twenty-five oysters, put in a layer of boiled macaroni, cut in small pieces into a baking-dish, then a layer of oysters, a seasoning of salt and pepper, continue so doing until the dish is full; cover the top with breadcrumbs and bits of butter and bake one-half an hour.

Sweet Potato Croquettes. Bake the sweet potatoes until they are tender; then scoop out the centres and put them through a vegetable press. To each two cups of mashed potatoes allow a tablespoonful of butter, level teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar and a half spoonful of white pepper; mix thoroughly. Form into cylinders, dip in egg, then in breadcrumbs and fry in smoking-hot fat.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Tomato Beef. Sprinkle small pieces of beef cut from the remains of a roast, with salt, pepper and flour. Put a layer of meat in a baking dish, over it put a layer of canned tomatoes or sliced fresh tomatoes. Scatter bits of butter over it. Cover with a layer of beef, then tomato. Make the top layer of buttered crumbs. Bake slowly for one hour.

Dancing Party.

Saturday proved a busy night socially and among the most enjoyable of the affairs was the dancing party at Colonial hall. It was a subscription party arranged by Miss Helen Cladin and Miss Georgiana C. Lane.

The guests were received by Mrs. Rupert F. Cladin, Mrs. Cushing Lane and Mrs. N. S. Hunting, and the ushers were Nixon Wiley Elmer, Carlton C. Lane, Gerald Howland and Dr. Ellsworth.

It was a very pretty party, some especially pretty gowns being noticed. Lunch was served throughout the evening and ice during intermission.

Sent to Reformatory.

Henry Haskins was sent to the reformatory by Judge Sherman of the Superior court at Dedham on Monday for assault on a young girl on Monday place, West Quincy, several weeks ago.

The case was one where Haskins was captured after a lively chase in which Rev. A. H. Tyler of the West Quincy Methodist church, Fred L. Badger and an officer participated. The girl had been attending a meeting at the church on Monday place.

After the meeting she accompanied a girl friend part way home and was returning to her own home when Haskins grabbed her and threw her to the ground.

Her cries for help were heard by Rev. Mr. Tyler and Mr. Badger who gave chase. They were joined by an officer and Haskins was captured on Willard street.

Later the girl positively identified him as the man who had assaulted her. That same evening an hour previous, a woman had been held up at Wolliston. While this woman could not identify Haskins, the police believed that he was the party who made that assault.

THE engagement of Alice Rose to a government building there is considerable doubt. The Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript says: "Notwithstanding Speaker Cannon's announcement that no public buildings will be allowed to pass Congress this session, the faithful representatives are introducing bills in behalf of their old and new pet projects. This is a matter of precaution. As long as the end of the session is months away and the Buildings Committee must have something to occupy its attention the possibility exists that enough pressure can be brought on the speaker to let the 'perk' measure in. Each member must, therefore, be prepared to say he did his part. Last year the general bill was drawn and reported, but no action was allowed. Speaker Cannon is not averse to arousing expectations, feeling perhaps that the pleasant reality of the disappointment. His action also enables members to shoulder the blame for failure on the speaker when they go home."

Wollaston Whist Club. The Wollaston whist club played their weekly club tournament Saturday evening and the results as follows show that the leading pair Hoxie and Broughton are in a class by themselves, simply invincible at the game of whist.

Poetry.

The Fading Year.
Toward the sunset-gilded Past
See the Old Year gliding along;
Yell the twilight shadows fast
And the restless winter blast
Shrills its eerie evening song.

From the rugged harvest lands
And the peaceful woodland Nature waves her wasted hands
In a last adieu, and stands
Mourning for her golden days.

Over forested plain and hill
Broods the white repose of death
And the river's heart is still.
And the river's voice is still.
As in fear it holds its breath.

Down the winding path that leads Into ages dark and dim
Slow the gray Old Year recedes,
And a phantom host of deeds
And desires follow him.

To his hushed cell of times they cling,
Pleading with him to return
Back across the days, and bring Hail the joys that made them sing.
Hail the hopes that made them burn.

Love stands in the path and pleads
For an hour of old delight;
Mocked Ambition cries his needs,
But the Old Year never heeds,
Passing onward toward the night.

Speak one word, departing year,
To the silent host of things
That make the heart so true,
Till we may hear the heart beat true
Voices grown so dim and dear
Calling us in days of old?

From the Past we may not gain
One sweet token of your youth,
One fair blossom from the plain
Where you bloomed, in gloire or rain,
And hope were the guise of truth?

Miscellaneous.

LADY MARY'S MISTAKE.
"No, he doesn't love me any longer!" said Lady Mary.
The old Countess looked up with a troubled smile on her beautiful face.
You are sure of that?" said the Countess.

"Quite sure, mother."
"My dear, when a woman hesitates, she always says she is sure. You have been married two years; between the first year and the third the happiest couples doubt each other's constancy. All women think time that their husbands no longer love them; many occasionally believe it; many—"

"Know," said Lady Mary.
"And are mistaken."
The daughter rose. "You were always an optimist, dearest," she said, with affectionate impatience. "You think every one is as good as yourself."

"But, of course, child, if you are sure, you are sure; there is no more to be said."
Lady Mary bent over the back of her mother's chair and kissed the tall white hair.

"What is that you say about separation?" said the Countess.
"About my being able to live without you? Why, you know I can't. And I could, I wouldn't. Is this your reward for all the devotion I've shown you?"

Not that a fellow wants to speak of that, only—
The paper was blurred, the ink not yet dry. No more had been written.

Lady Mary stood holding the letter in her hand. A great joy came into her eyes, filling them to overflowing. And then she burst into tears.

"My dear, I don't know what you are saying," said the Countess.
"I am saying, 'I am sure I can live without you.'"

"If he required. There's the difference, mother. I hardly ever see him. I don't know where he spends his evenings. But, hush, I'm not going to complain of my husband, and I don't want you to think me altogether a goose. Now I must run away. It wants only an hour till dinner."

Lady Mary drew her daughter's hand toward her, and held it in her own. "Dearest," she said, "you don't exaggerate. Remember, you didn't marry an angel. Lovers have nothing in common with angels, except wings."

Lady Mary reflected on these words of her mother's, in the brougham, as she drove back to Brayston square. Her marriage with Sir George Trevelyan, two years ago, had been a love-match. It seemed so unexceptionable in every way, it really need hardly have been one, but, as it happened, it was.

George Trevelyan, young, good-looking, well off and fairly idle, had made a desirable suitor and a satisfactory husband. Cynthia might have said that he had spoiled his wife. That is to say, he never yet had given her occasion for tears. Which is saying a good deal, considering that she loved him.

"I couldn't give mother the facts," said Lady Mary. "And really, when I come to think of it, there aren't any facts to give. All the same, I feel it. For the last six months things have been somewhat very different. I couldn't say to mother: 'Here is proof. It's six months since he left off calling me May.'"

Arriving at the house, she hastened upstairs to her dressing-room. On her way she had passed a little staircase nook, not much more than a cozy corner, which opened off a landing, built out on some leads. She noticed that her husband had seated himself at a little brown and gold exercise he kept there, a "genuine Riesenher," one of those spurious articles which are now found in every well-furnished house. He was writing so eagerly that he did not even observe her approach as she swept along the heavy state-carpet. And by the bend of his shoulders, the fling of his legs, the fierce scratch of his pen across the paper, she could see that he was greatly excited, unusually so—although always, certes, George Trevelyan must be styled a nervous man. She was close beside him, when he looked up with a cry.

"Good heavens, how you startled me!" he said, and he held his hand across the paper before him, bending forward as if afraid that any one should see what he was writing.

"Startled you? Why? I have just come in from my mother's. I had tea there."

"Naturally. You are always at your mother's—almost. I just want to finish."

"Almost!" she repeated, laughing. "It's a good thing you added that 'what is it?'—adjective—adverb? It saves you from exaggerations. Why, you know perfectly well that I never go to my mother's unless I am left in the house alone." She laughed again, resolved to show a brave front.

"Well, it's a good thing you've got a mother to go to. It saves you from feeling lonely when I am away." Was that a speech of her childlessness, or a regret? "There's nothing more whole in a family than mothers, except when they develop themselves as mothers-in-law. Aren't you going up to dress for dinner? I just want to finish."

"George," she said, lingeringly, as if thinking many thoughts in that one word. "Oh, there's plenty of time. I—I just wanted to say; of course I didn't mean what I said this morning, about your being just as happy away from me. Only—sometimes—"

"I feel as if you didn't care for me as you used to—once. But you do—don't you, George?"

He started up, with an excited crash, from his persistent stoop over the writing-table, as if breaking away from a tension grown insupportable. "I will give you my answer to that question presently," he cried, with assumed lightness, "and I'll try to make it as satisfactory as possible. We haven't time just now. Why, Mary, d'you know—sometimes I think you're rather hard to satisfy?"

"He had thrown to the little lid of the exercise, whose two halves closed up and down with a lock in the middle of them, and turning the key, he ran upstairs to his dressing-room."

Lady Mary remained standing for a minute or two, in self-reproachful thought. Yes, it was true, as her mother had declared, she was exigent. A man cannot spend his life in mud-dling display of affection. It was positively silly of her to dislike his calling her "Mary."

"No other New England city has had the same educational publicity that Quincy has enjoyed. Indeed, there is no place of its size that has played the same part in state and national affairs. Here, alone of all cities in the United States, lived two men when they were chosen President of the United States—John Adams and John Quincy Adams; another of the family was a candidate for the presidency; indeed, no other American family has ever had equal national prominence for a century and a third."

"Here also was the home of the Josiah Quincys, a family second only to the Adams family. For nearly a third of a century the board of education was dominated by some member of the Adams family; here Horace Mann lived while he was the educational leader of the state, and here Colonel Francis W. Parker made the reputation upon which his fame, in no slight degree, rests today. It is doubtful if any man has ever attained equal reputation based upon work done in the schools of a small city."

"Since his day the city has maintained its prominence under Superintendents George L. Aldrich, Herbert W. Lill, and Frank E. Parlin, though no one of them has worked in the public gaze as did Colonel Parker. In the nature of the case their achievements have been radically different, though none the less valuable to the city. Each superintendent who has left the city for a third of a century has received a substantial promotion."

"All this indicates a desirable uniform and ardent loyalty on the part of the teachers as well as of the public. The esprit de corps which pervades the city is not only noticeable or creditable but it is today, under Superintendent Parlin's leadership, he has stated the educational creed of Quincy is this terse fashion:—"

"We do not believe in sending babies to school, but in educating them. The value of play; that the mind of many a child can be effectively trained only through his muscles; that reading is a subject of chief importance; that nature study should be a genuine study of nature and not about nature; that the study of numbers and the sciences at too early an age and that there are some things in arithmetic which should be committed to memory; that it is neither a disgrace nor a disadvantage to learn to spell common English words or to write a legible hand; that gymnastics are a part of the education of a child; that a well-kept playground is available; that the moral influence of a good school is not generally appreciated."

"Mr. Parlin is a native of Maine, a graduate of Bates College, a student in Harvard and in the scholastic and professional special work, and his experience from the days when, as a lad in his teens he began teaching, has been that of eminent success in local and general leadership."

Larger and Faster Battleships.
A Washington dispatch to the Transcript says the next battleships authorized by Congress will probably not only be of 18,000 tons displacement, but the machinery will be so increased in power as to give them a speed of not less than twenty-one knots. Naval engineers see signs of advancing the speed of the largest vessels of war to twenty-two knots before the experts are done with the development in that respect.

This puts the battleship in the class with the cruiser and the torpedo boat, and practically, some of the officers of the service say, sounds the knell of the commerce destroyer, of whose usefulness much was heard in other days.

The tendency is to increase speed and at the same time to lower the rate of the turning of the turrets. Perhaps the former element may be realized by the adoption of the turbine mechanism, with which extensive experiments are now in progress and of which several especially selected naval officers are engaged in making studies.

The strategists connected with the Naval War College and the General Board are laying their plans of naval attack and defense on the theory of an increase in speed of ships all along the line. This factor must be considered, in view of the general adoption abroad of designs of ships of greater speed than those hitherto built. The advance in speed is one of the most notable signs of naval development since the last battleships were laid down.

The United States cruiser Columbia arrived at the League Island Navy Yard on Friday, with two hundred marines, who returned after two years' service in Guantanamo, Cuba, and Colon. The trip was one of the fastest ever made by a naval vessel. The cruiser left the League Island Navy Yard on Dec. 10, with mariners to relieve those brought back today. There was some speculation as to whether the vessel would be made to make the trip of 4000 miles before Christmas Day. But the cruiser completed the voyage in less than twelve days, covering nearly four hundred miles a day.

plans as you may desire to make for your future. So I regretfully bid you farewell, wishing you all prosperity. Yours sincerely, George."

This note he carefully inclosed in an envelope and addressed to "Miss May St. Clair, 3 Piccadilly Mansions, W.," and the envelope he as carefully placed in the inner breast pocket of his coat, for mailing. Then he went out on the landing, and there waited for his wife's coming down.

"We must contrive to have that stupid little table altered, if we can," he said. "Should we?" answered Lady Mary, gaily. "I don't know. I love it all my life."

He bent, as he offered his arm, and kissed her upturned countenance. "It shall be as you like," he said. "Everything, henceforth, shall be exactly as you like, dear."—Maarten Martens.

Esprit de Corps is Noticeable.

In the last number of the Journal of Education, the editor, Dr. A. E. Winslow, writes in detail about a great many of the local school systems in cities and towns of Massachusetts, as well as about important ones outside of the state. His mention of Quincy is as follows:

"No other New England city has had the same educational publicity that Quincy has enjoyed. Indeed, there is no place of its size that has played the same part in state and national affairs. Here, alone of all cities in the United States, lived two men when they were chosen President of the United States—John Adams and John Quincy Adams; another of the family was a candidate for the presidency; indeed, no other American family has ever had equal national prominence for a century and a third."

"Here also was the home of the Josiah Quincys, a family second only to the Adams family. For nearly a third of a century the board of education was dominated by some member of the Adams family; here Horace Mann lived while he was the educational leader of the state, and here Colonel Francis W. Parker made the reputation upon which his fame, in no slight degree, rests today. It is doubtful if any man has ever attained equal reputation based upon work done in the schools of a small city."

"Since his day the city has maintained its prominence under Superintendents George L. Aldrich, Herbert W. Lill, and Frank E. Parlin, though no one of them has worked in the public gaze as did Colonel Parker. In the nature of the case their achievements have been radically different, though none the less valuable to the city. Each superintendent who has left the city for a third of a century has received a substantial promotion."

"All this indicates a desirable uniform and ardent loyalty on the part of the teachers as well as of the public. The esprit de corps which pervades the city is not only noticeable or creditable but it is today, under Superintendent Parlin's leadership, he has stated the educational creed of Quincy is this terse fashion:—"

"We do not believe in sending babies to school, but in educating them. The value of play; that the mind of many a child can be effectively trained only through his muscles; that reading is a subject of chief importance; that nature study should be a genuine study of nature and not about nature; that the study of numbers and the sciences at too early an age and that there are some things in arithmetic which should be committed to memory; that it is neither a disgrace nor a disadvantage to learn to spell common English words or to write a legible hand; that gymnastics are a part of the education of a child; that a well-kept playground is available; that the moral influence of a good school is not generally appreciated."

"Mr. Parlin is a native of Maine, a graduate of Bates College, a student in Harvard and in the scholastic and professional special work, and his experience from the days when, as a lad in his teens he began teaching, has been that of eminent success in local and general leadership."

His Gin Rickey.
The Irishman who had never tasted a gin rickey ordered one to impress his friends. The bartender never had heard of a rickey, but he was ashamed to admit his ignorance, so he put a mixing glass under the bar and made a guess at it.

Then he leaned back to await results. The Irishman ordered one to impress his friends. The bartender never had heard of a rickey, but he was ashamed to admit his ignorance, so he put a mixing glass under the bar and made a guess at it.

"By gorry, 'tis a fine rickey," he said.
"It ought to be," said the bartender.

What's in a Name.
The reporter had been detailed to procure the name of prominent persons in attendance at a performance of the opera.

"I beg your pardon, madam," she said, approaching one of the occupants of a private box, "but will you oblige me by giving me your name?"
"Mrs. Archibald Jo Neze," replied the lady.

"Pardon me," rejoined the reporter. "I did not quite catch the last name?"
"Jo Neze."
"May I ask you how to spell it?"
"Certainly," said Mrs. Jo Neze, laughingly answering the occupant of the box, and the reporter retired to fan herself.

Heroism.

The heroes of today are the men and the women who do their duty faithfully, as they find it laid out for them, caring for family and home and doing what they can for their neighbors. We have our opportunity in the daily walks of life. Men are growing braver every day; more chivalrous than before. The race is "falling up," and thousands of us are all around are enlisted in the work.—Rev. George L. Perrin.

Had the Right Idea.
It is related on good authority, and in this case good authority means good authority—this is no Katharine—that a young woman went into a music store in this city the other day and asked the clerk for a copy of "Angels Always Polished."

"The clerk turned over a stock of con songs in a puzzled way and said he was afraid that they were just out, but he could send for it."

"My teacher said you would be sure to have it," said the maiden. "It's by Handel."

Guessing is part of the clerk's business, and he showed her "Angels Ever Bright and Fair." It was what she wanted.—Worcester Gazette.

Washington, Dec. 23, 1905.

During the two weeks of adjournment for the Christmas holidays there will be no legislation, but it may be interesting Inauguration Day Program.

The ceremonies of the inauguration of the City Government of 1906 will not differ from those of other years.

At the hour of 12 o'clock on Monday next the Mayor, preceded by the City Messenger, City Clerk and Chaplain of the day will enter the Council Chamber by the rear entrance.

The City Clerk will preside until after the City Council is organized. After prayer by the chaplain the City Clerk will administer the oath of office to Mayor James Thompson.

He will then call the roll of the Council and administer the oath of office to them. The Mayor will then be introduced and will deliver his inaugural address.

The City Council will then proceed to organize by the election of a president, clerk of council and clerk of committees, a city messenger and a city auditor.

The members will then draw for seats. It is customary for the old members to retain the seats they occupied last year.

The Council will then proceed with the regular order of business. At this meeting it is customary to offer an order for the printing of the Mayor's Inaugural and of the rules of the Council, and to authorize the borrowing of money in anticipation of taxes for current expenses.

There is also a member of the board of Managers of the Woodland Fund, and two trustees of the City Hospital to be elected. There are sometimes elected at the first meeting and sometimes it is deferred until the second meeting. They are elected by ballot.

The Mayors of Quincy each year with their political, and the purity by which they were elected, are given below:

New Signals.

There have been many inquiries as to what the red and white flags carried on some of the street cars mean, as well as what the meaning is of the pole that has a red band in the white painted space on the stop poles.

Both of these things are new. The red and white flag on the front end of a car denotes that there is a car following to the same destination. The old method was for the motorman when meeting a car, on a turnout going in the opposite direction, to inform the other motorman that a car was following.

Sometimes the motorman may forget to do this, and then there is likely to be trouble. A motorman meeting a car on a turnout, displaying red and white flags, knows instantly that one or more cars are following the car showing the flag.

The red band on a stop pole means that a car may stop on the opposite side of a crossing. The general rule is that a car must cross a street crossing before coming to a stop. A motorman meeting a car on a turnout, displaying red and white flags, knows instantly that one or more cars are following the car showing the flag.

Fortunately members of the family, who heard her fall, were able to give immediate assistance. Oil from the lamp was burning brightly under the stairway, but the blaze was extinguished before any damage was done.

Dr. Sargent, who responded to the call for a physician, found on examination that her injuries were confined to the lower part of the face and that while extremely painful, they were not likely to be serious in their effect.

Today Mrs. Hall is suffering considerably from the shock and painful bruises, but on the whole her condition is encouraging.

District Attorney Moran.

The new District Attorney Moran of Boston has been in hot water nearly every day since his recent election. He says he is not opposed to granting liquor licenses where the same are not in violation of the law; but he has closed the bars at Young's, the Parker House, the Adams House and the Essex House, "the pretty, quibbling, quibbling absurdities and childish conduct of the police board during the past few weeks demonstrate their absolute unfitness for office."

Time will tell whether his labors are for the best interest of Boston; but it is many that are doubtful of the result. It is estimated that the closing of the four bars causes a decrease of $5,000 a day in the receipts of these four hotels.

Rumor Denied.

There have been rumors recently that Mayor Thompson would announce his appointments for city officers for 1906 at the inauguration of the new city government next Monday. His honor when seen yesterday said that there was no foundation for the rumor.

In New Brunswick, N. J., on Thursday, on a main highway and in broad daylight, paymaster William Schreck of the Defense River quarry and construction company was robbed of the money which he was carrying to pay 200 laborers. With him was one companion, but both men were unarmed. They were carrying the money in a carriage and were attacked while driving through the woods.

The telegraph news from Moscow is that the terrible revolt at that city is practically over and that the strike will be called off Monday. Comparative quiet prevailed and only a few fanatics continuing the struggle.

Sketches of the new Councilmen will appear in the Saturday eight-page Ledger. Some will be illustrated.

CITY BRIEFS.

New Year's day next Monday. It was a green Christmas.

Many houses had pretty interior decorations for Christmas.

Rev. E. N. Hardy will address the Y. M. C. A. of North Abington on Sunday Dec. 31.

W. C. Hart and family spent Christmas at Mr. Hart's parental home in Milford.

Quincy lodge of Elks initiated ten candidates at its meeting on Tuesday evening.

F. B. Fugère, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., is at the Hospital III with pneumonia.

Mrs. Luke Coyle of Brackett street is confined to her home quite ill with pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gould have moved to 10 Main street this city from Middleboro.

It has been a long time since there has been such a delightful Christmas day as this year.

Miss Florence Newcomb is spending the Christmas vacation at her home on Newcomb street.

Mrs. Joseph Page is quite sick at her home on Hancock street with congestion of the lungs.

Franklin Mamel of Hancock street has been visiting his parents in Provincetown, Mass.

Mrs. Flora Duan of Edwards street, left Saturday for a ten days' visit with friends in New York.

Master Guy Marden of Coddington street has accepted a position with E. J. Murphy, the druggist.

George E. Adams has been officiating as clerk at the district court during the absence of Clerk Churchill.

The Old Farmer's Almanac for 1906 starts off with a prediction of "mild and severe cold" for Jan. 1 and 2.

Miss Elizabeth W. Farnum of Newcomb street, is the guest of Miss Clara Cable, of Roxbury for a few days.

Warren Monroe, formerly manager of Hartwell's news agency, was in town this week calling on his old friends.

The annual meeting of the School Committee will be held in their rooms Tuesday evening next at eight o'clock.

Miss Alice B. Hultman of Washington street, left Saturday for New York where she will spend the holidays with friends.

Warren G. Ogden of this city has applied for admission to the circuit court of the United States as an attorney and counselor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Miller, nee Atkins are home to their friends after January first at their residence 28 Cherry avenue.

The days are three minutes longer and the afternoons seven minutes longer. The shortest mornings are Dec. 30 to Jan. 7 inclusive.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. basketball teams were outlasted Tuesday evening by Boston Y. M. C. A. teams who almost had a walk-over.

J. F. Sheppard, 24, left Tuesday morning for St. Louis to be present at a house party to be given by his roommate whose residence is in that city.

Never was such a business done at the Quincy post office at Christmas as this year. The outgoing as well as the incoming mails were very heavy.

The Christmas music at Bethany Congregational church both at the morning and evening services will be repeated on Sunday, having been requested by several.

Past Commander James H. Webb has been detailed by Department Commandant James H. Wolf to install the officers of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R., of this city.

The Y. M. C. A. building was a home for many young men on Christmas day. All the classes, etc., were omitted, and the freedom of the building extended generally.

Elizabeth Pratt, a pupil at the Coddington school, is ill at her home on Coddington street with scarlet fever. There are several cases of this disease in this vicinity.

Mrs. William E. Gardner and Mrs. Richard C. Decker are to entertain the dance which the Mamel club of Christ church is giving next Wednesday evening at Colonial hall.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Miss Vivian Macdon of Milford is spending the Christmas holidays with Miss Florence E. Hart of 99 Independence avenue.

There was an enjoyable Christmas party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Foy at 13 Quincy street, where relatives and friends assembled.

There was a beautifully decorated Christmas tree and Santa Claus honored the party by his presence. Games, music and refreshments were enjoyed.

The alarm from Box 37 at 9.55 A. M. Tuesday was for a fire in an Italian fruit store on Water street at Dobles corner. There was no one in charge of the store at the time, and when discovered, the interior of the building was burning fiercely.

A stream of water quickly extinguished the flames, although the stock was entirely ruined, causing a loss of $100. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Andrew S. Costa, brother of Engineer Charles P. Costa of the Central fire station passed away at his home on Phipps street on Sunday afternoon after a brief illness. Mr. Costa was born in Azores, but came to Quincy many years ago, where he has since resided. He leaves a widow and five children.

WEST QUINCY.

Hiram W. Campbell of Crescent street left Monday for a month's business trip at Lancaster, N. H.

Mrs. Catherine, widow of Mr. James Geary and one of the best known and highly esteemed ladies at West Quincy, died at her home, 32 Grove street, on Sunday evening. She leaves two sons, Michael B. Geary of the board of registrars of voters and John J. Geary.

School Committee Meeting.

The last regular meeting of the School Committee of 1905 was held Tuesday evening. All members with the exception of Dr. Peirce were present.

The Committee on Books and Supplies reported that the contract for fuel had been awarded to J. F. Sheppard & Sons the lowest bidder.

Superintendent Parlin made a report on salaries paid teachers of Quincy, compared with those paid in other cities of the state.

The report showed that the salaries paid Quincy teachers to be exceptionally low, being nearly 15 per cent. below the average of the cities of the state, exclusive of the six largest cities.

The report further said that most of the cities had increased salaries during recent years. The average increase of high school teachers within ten years was 18 per cent and of the lower grades 15 per cent.

There has been hardly any change in teachers salaries in Quincy during that time and practically none in salaries of grade teachers for 25 years.

Living expenses in Quincy have largely increased within this period so that the net earnings of teachers in this city are considerably less than they were 25 years ago.

The resignation of Thomas A. R. Gould, janitor of the Cranch school, was accepted and Daniel W. Corcoran was appointed provisionally.

Mr. Churchill, for the special committee, read the annual report of the School Committee of 1905.

The superintendent was instructed to report in print.

The report of the sub-committee on evening schools was given.

This twenty-sixth, a number of evening schools were maintained this season, having opened on Oct. 2 and after 40 sessions closed Dec. 12. The total enrollment at the Willard school was 188, with an average attendance of 50 plus.

At the Adams school the enrollment was 298, and average attendance of 75. Enrollment at evening drawing school 61 with average attendance of 32.

The instructor of the evening drawing school was Samuel E. Gleason, an instructor at the Institute of Technology. It was his first season in Quincy and he proved himself unusually well adapted to the work and an excellent teacher.

The financial statement showed a balance of $208.14. This sum however will be used to pay for fuel already purchased and delivered.

The report follows:

Salaries	$88,390.00
Janitors	7,390.00
Books, Supplies and Sundries	9,010.50
Fuel	6,347.71
Transportation	1,022.25
Rents	1,910.00
Evening Schools	1,537.70
	$111,988.36
Balance	$208.14

Tenement House Fire.

The alarm from Box 72 at 5.06 A. M. Friday was for a brick fire in the six-tenement house on Cherry street, Quincy Point, owned by Mrs. Benjamin Johnson.

The fire started on the upper floor and was extinguished by a defective chimney. It had made good headway when discovered. The kitchen was badly gutted and the fire worked up through the partition to the floor before it was extinguished. The loss is estimated by Chief Williams at $800. The fire started in the tenement occupied by Mr. Oldham.

City Council Review.

The City Council of 1905 was a busy one. During the year 29 regular adjourned and special meetings were held and the Council was in session 58 hours and 58 minutes.

The longest session of the year was 3 hours and 40 minutes, which was March 20, and the shortest session 11 minutes, on Jan. 27. The average length of meetings was one hour and thirty minutes.

The average number present at roll call was 16. During these 29 meetings 29 communications have been received, also 157 petitions and 381 orders were introduced or reported on by various committees.

Recent Sales.

Adams Real Estate Trust to Old Colony Railroad Company, 27,000 square feet adjacent to the railroad location near Independence avenue. This land will be used in part for the additional tracks that the company proposes to construct between Boston and Braintree.

WOLLASTON.

There was a very fine Christmas service at the Wollaston Methodist church on Sunday morning. The church was beautifully and appropriately decorated with Christmas greens.

Rev. Hunt preached an exceptionally eloquent sermon on "The Angel's song," and the music of the choir was in keeping with the sentiment of the day.

The What-over Circle of King's Daughters will meet Monday with Mrs. George H. York, 14 Phillips street, Wollaston.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Wm. J. Heath of Brook street, next Tuesday afternoon at 2.30. Subject—Peace and Arbitration. Paper by Mrs. F. H. Bishop.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Fanning of Boston are on their way to their home by sickness.

Miss Fannie Warner of Belmont has been spending the past few days with relatives in Quincy.

Compton papers report that James E. Compton of Wollaston, recently of Malden, was before the district court at Malden on Saturday for a serious assault on a five-year-old girl, and was moved to Wollaston street.

Wollaston lodge of Masons will begin the new year with five candidates for degrees.

Miss Judith Page and Master Arvin Page of Wintthrop avenue, are ill with the measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Badger gave an invitation dance for their daughter Muriel in Wollaston hall last evening.

The barn belonging to the old estate on Hancock street recently occupied by James J. Lord and family has been moved to Wollaston street.

The members of the Wollaston Alliance were very fortunate in being able to have Rev. Mr. Pratt former pastor of the Unitarian church, speak at their meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Pratt gave a most interesting talk on "Mendel and his Law of Heredity."

Mr. and Mrs. Woodford Ketchum (Eleanor Ross) who were married early in December, are to be at home to their friends on Wednesdays in February, at 476 Hancock street, Wollaston.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Fairbanks are receiving the friends after January first, at 10 Sutton street, Worcester.

Mrs. Fairbanks was Miss Stella E. Cook of Worcester and Mr. Fairbanks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Fairbanks of Wollaston.

Cards have been sent out by Mrs. Charles H. Brigham for an "at home New Year's afternoon at 75 Prospect avenue."

Mrs. Charles M. Bryant entertained sixteen ladies at luncheon at the Brookline Country Club on Thursday.

The Rev. Frank Wright Pratt of Hopeville, formerly of Wollaston, after speaking at the Wollaston Alliance on Wednesday, Dec. 27, was entertained at dinner in Boston by Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Crane of Prospect avenue.

POINTS AND PARK.

The Sunday School scholars of the Park and Downs church had their Christmas entertainment Wednesday evening. There was a Christmas tree and gifts were presented by Mr. Northrop.

Mr. Churchill, for the special committee, read the annual report of the School Committee of 1905.

The superintendent was instructed to report in print.

The report of the sub-committee on evening schools was given.

This twenty-sixth, a number of evening schools were maintained this season, having opened on Oct. 2 and after 40 sessions closed Dec. 12. The total enrollment at the Willard school was 188, with an average attendance of 50 plus.

Tuberculosis.

Mr. Editor:

I wish to call the attention of the people of Quincy through your columns to the exhibition illustrative of means and methods for the treatment and prevention of Tuberculosis, now going on at Horticultural hall, corner of Massachusetts and Huntington avenues, Boston. The exhibition opened December 28 and will continue to January 7. Open daily from 10 A. M. to 11 P. M. Admission free.

The longest session of the General Court of 1905, the State Board of Health was authorized to hold an Exhibition.

This Exhibition is composed of photographs, charts, models and specimens, brought together from different parts of the country, and illustrative of the methods now employed for the treatment of tuberculosis in hospitals, in sanatoria, and at home; and also of means for preventing the spread of tuberculosis from one person to another.

QUINCY POINT AND NECK.

A watch meeting will be held at the Quincy Point church Sunday night.

Mrs. Moxley is quite seriously ill at the home of Mrs. George Bailey, South street.

Edwin Damon, who is teaching at the Cape, spent a few days with his parents at Quincy Point the past week.

The steamer Providence, built at Quincy, is now making regular trips on the Fall River line.

The boilers of the steam trawler Spray were found to require attention when the vessel put into Boston on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hayden of Howland avenue entertained a large party on Monday.

A petition is being circulated in Ward Two asking for better street railway service. Fifteen minute time is wanted.

A telephone has been placed in the Harding residence, South street.

Mrs. Ezra Gifford and daughter of Cotuit, are visiting relatives in this city.

Michael Kelley of Weymouth was severely injured at the Fore River yard Thursday while at work on the battleship New Jersey. He was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Addison who have been stopping at the Parker house, Boston, for the convenience of Mr. Addison during the rush of the holidays, have returned to their home at the Point.

New Jersey to Dock.

Information was received this week at the Charlestown Navy Yard says the Boston Transcript, that the Navy Department has given the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy permission to dock the new battleship New Jersey about March 15, and that the battleship will arrive at the yard a day or two beforehand, to be ready to enter when the dock is ready for her reception.

The New Jersey is a sister ship to the Rhode Island, built by the same company, and recently christened and painted in dock No. 2, before having her trial. From the fact that the New Jersey is to be docked on March 15, it is presumed at the yard that she will have her trial trip about a week later.

Orders have been received for the battleship Illinois to sail on Jan. 2, and the Missouri on the day following. Both ships are undergoing minor repairs to their hulls and machinery.

Point Congregational Church.

The Washington Street Congregational church was the center of attraction last Saturday evening. A large gathering of children and adults came to see the open-topography, the three Christmas trees, and to listen to the entertainment of "Grandmother and her three little ones."

Then Santa arrived amid a whirl of merriment, and with him a real live rabbit and two white doves. The doves, let loose, flew to the chimes, blessing them with the benediction of Peace. Santa's letters and joyful remarks were full of local hits and pleasing reminiscences and references.

The singing at the church on Sunday, was rendered by a large chorus choir led by Mrs. M. B. Pollard. The Christmas music to be repeated next Sunday.

A new picture, "Christ in the Temple," was given to the Sunday school last Sunday, by Miss Smith's class of the Master's Sabbath school.

It is reported that William T. Moran has been elected to the Pratus block at the Downs.

Against a Contest.

Editors of the Quincy Patriot:

In a recent edition of your valuable paper the appeared an article referring to the Presidency of the incoming City Council, in which it was stated there would be a contest for this position.

Locality in which the gentleman who is to occupy the chair resides was to be a prominent feature, and that in the mind of some people there appeared to be a disposition on the part of Ward Five to monopolize the honors in this direction.

Contrary to the expectation of many, inside and outside of the City Council, the contest has materialized into a contest for the so-called monopoly to Ward Three with the purpose of consolidating the heads of the executive and legislative branches of our government.

Being naturally opposed to trusts and monopolies, and to relieve the situation and remove the imputation that Wollaston is the seat of any such conspiracy, I shall cheerfully, in accord with my personal preference, return to the ranks in the fall of 1906.

I, therefore, desire to announce that I am not a candidate for re-election to the chair.

It is generally conceded that the representatives of Ward Five have in the past contributed earnestly, consistently and intelligently to the chamber for the best interest of our city and that she will in the future, still exercise a potent influence for good in city affairs.

Yours very truly,

Walter F. Nichols.

Wollaston, Dec. 26, 1905.

Bass a Candidate.

Councilman Lewis Bass, Jr., who declined to become a candidate for the presidency of the City Council in opposition to President Nichols, has in view of the latter's withdrawal decided to make a contest for position.

Councilman Bass has been chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council for two years, and a member of the committee also in 1902 and 1903.

By resolve of the General Court of 1905, the State Board of Health was authorized to hold an Exhibition.

This Exhibition is composed of photographs, charts, models and specimens, brought together from different parts of the country, and illustrative of the methods now employed for the treatment of tuberculosis in hospitals, in sanatoria, and at home; and also of means for preventing the spread of tuberculosis from one person to another.

Tuberculosis is a communicable disease. It is very largely preventable, and intelligently kills in this State more than four thousand people. The prevalence of tuberculosis can be diminished only by knowledge, on the part of the people, of the nature of the disease, and a general application of the principles underlying its prevention.
